3 CONVICTS FOUND DEAD AFTER SIEGE IN PRISON

After Flooding With Ammonia Fumes the Stronghold Held Since Wednesday in Battle With Guards, Party of Seven Finds Bodies of Mutineers.

THREE GUARDS SLAIN BY THE DESPERADOES

One Convict Apparently Had Been Killed in Gun Fight—Others Thought to Have Committed Suicide to Avoid Death by Gas.

By the Associated Press.

PADUCAH, Ky., Oct. 6.—Three convict murderers, who since Wednesday have held prison authorities at bay, killing three guards as they fired from the mess hall of the Western Kentucky State Penitentiary, were found dead late today when the besiegers entered their stronghold after flooding the building with ammonia fumes.

After the deadly gases had been turned into the barricaded cover of the convicts and all signs of life were lacking, a storming party of seven men entered the building. All was quiet on the first floor and they moved cautiously to the second.

There they found the bodies of the mutineers, who had shot the three prison guards in their break for liberty Wednesday morning.

Monte Walters, fully dressed, apparently had been killed by bullets fired during the siege. Lawrence Griffith and Harry Ferland, his companions, stripped to the waist, were dead from bullet wounds through the heart. Griffith and Ferland, it was believed, died by their own pistols to escape the ammonia fumes.

Siege Lasted 81 Hours.

Officers succeeded in entering the disputed barricade after a spectacular siege of 81 hours, in the course of which prison guards, reinforced by two details of Kentucky National Guardsmen, riddled the building with jacketed bullets from high-powered rifles and two machine guns; swept the interior of the building with the shrapnel from bursting rifle grenades and twice succeeded in placing tear gas in the structure.

The siege went on without the guards apparently making progress in their efforts to dislodge the desperadoes.

Today however, 300 pounds of ammonia was obtained from Paducah and emergency pipe lines were laid to the beleaguered building by members of the attacking forces, who worked behind improvised metal shields. When this work was completed the ammonia was released.

For an hour the ammonia was allowed to creep into the mess hall. Then control valves were closed and an anxious hour passed while besiegers waited for the wind to sweep the fumes clear of the barricade.

A party of seven picked men then moved forward. Those waiting on the "firing line" heard a shout from within the building and the word was sent back that the three convicts were dead.

Father of Prisoner in Crowd.

A crowd, one that kept getting larger all day, had been kept at a distance of 300 feet from the prison walls. In this group was the father and a brother of Lawrence Griffith, one of the rebel convicts.

Many farmers and townsmen, fearing that the besieged convicts would escape from their stronghold, today walked the streets armed. Managers of hotels, however, said that offers of premiums were being made for rooms by curious throngs that poured in here to witness the prison battle.

Walters' break for liberty was foreseen by Guard L. R. Gunn three weeks ago, who said at that time, "Walters is getting ready for a break, and when he does he is going to take five or six guards along with him, but I am watching for him." Gunn was not on duty at the time of the outbreak.

HOW TIME WAS RECORDED IN RACES BY ELECTRICAL DEVICE

When Plane Crossed Line Timer Pressed Grip and Time Was Clicked Out on Tape.

An electrical timing device that records hundredths of a second was used for the Pulitzer Trophy and other races of the air meet. It was purchased from a speedometer company for the Indianapolis automobile races and perfected by Odis A. Porter, a nelectrical engineer, who has timed numerous important sport events during the last 10 years. Porter operated it at Lambert-St. Louis Field.

The device consists principally of a fine chronometer, a tiny electric motor to revolve the works, with a friction clutch that automatically corrects errors of time every second, and four revolving wheels that bear numbers to show the time on a paper tape that moves along every time a record is made. Six storage batteries supply current to operate the device.

A split grip of wood, which operates an electric switch under slight hand pressure, is used to make the device record. The timing line for the airplanes was a broad white mark running out from the elevated timing stand. On top of the stand were two wires that were a continuation of this line. Porter stood beneath these wires. As the nose of a plane to be timed shot across the line he squeezed the grip and the time was clicked out on the tape.

WALTON SUMMONS SPECIAL SESSION OF LEGISLATURE

ACTION ACCEPTED AS CHALLENGE TO FIGHT

Executive "Ready" and "Eager" to Meet Legislators Who Plan Impeachment, Counsel Says.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 6.—A call for an extraordinary session of the State Legislature on Oct. 11, "for the purpose of the enactment of a law to protect the people from masked and lawless marauders and secret organizations," was issued tonight by Gov. Walton.

At the same time a statement was made public, by Aldrich Blake, executive counsellor, declaring that "the Governor is ready" and is "eager to meet the Legislature."

The Governor's action was accepted as a challenge for a finish fight with members of the Legislature who have sought his impeachment.

The date fixed by the Governor precedes by less than a week that fixed for a session summoned by a majority of the members of the lower house for Oct. 17, when a general investigation of impeachable offences will be made.

The call indicated that evidence adduced by military courts of inquiry throughout the State would be placed before the Legislature to support the Governor's demand for anti-Ku Klux Klan legislation.

Counselor Blake declared that "The call indicates that martial law will be lifted soon." He declined to indicate details of any program toward that end. Martial law throughout the State was declared three weeks ago.

Gov. Walton tonight said that he wanted to make it plain that no effort would be made to hinder any attempt by members of the House to start impeachment proceedings.

"I court investigation," he added. "I have nothing to fear and the only fight I will make will be to see that the truth is told."

Gov. Walton's action in calling the Legislature to meet a week ahead of the time the House members had intended to assemble, only will hasten an investigation of the impeachment charges, the lawmakers said tonight.

SPECIAL POLICE AUTO PLATES

Means of Identifying Members of Department Who Use Motor Vehicles

Heart-shaped aluminum plates, done in red and bearing large nickel-plated letters "M. P." were issued to those members of the Police Department using automobile touring cars in pursuance of police business yesterday. They are to be used in the future in identifying night riders, detectives or other officials of the department.

Attached to each plate is a chain. The plate thus can be suspended on the front of the automobile from the radiator cap to expedite passage through traffic. They also can be held up to exhibit to persons who may mistake the pursuers for highwaymen. Each plate bears a large number and the State seal in nickelplate. Seventy-three of the plates were issued yesterday.

Emblem On Top of New Chicago Methodist Temple.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—A cross, emblematic of the Christian faith, today was placed atop the spire of the new Chicago Temple of the Methodist Episcopal First Church. Rearing its crest 556 feet above the street, the cross will be visible for several miles and at night will be illuminated by the rays of two searchlight affixed to the spire below.

The cross is 12 feet in height, is made of bronze veneered with copper and coated with gold leaf.

Winner of Pulitzer Race and Trophy That Goes With It

ONLY TRAFFIC JAM AT END OF RACES

Fences Pushed Down by Crowds Impatient to Get Street Cars —Autos Are Delayed.

Automobile and street car traffic were handled expeditiously and without congestion on the way to the air races and at the field because the movement was spread over a considerable part of the day. Wellston cars were routed through and delivered passengers at the entrance with reasonable expedition. Automobiles arriving at the different entrances were directed to plainly marked sections and parking was accomplished without friction.

But the crowd was so great that no system was capable of averting congestion after the race, when most of the automobiles and most of the car passengers wanted to leave the grounds at the same time.

Autos Homeward Bound, Delayed.

Although the traffic police let streams of machines into Natural Bridge road and other highways at perilous speed and conducted the emptying of the grounds with remarkable celerity, it was after 7 o'clock before all the automobiles were on their way homeward. There were some minor collisions and slight accidents, but nobody was reported to have been hurt.

The crush at the street car terminus was more serious. It is one thing to direct wheeled traffic and another to control a crowd on foot. At the terminus, in addition to holding the crowd in check, the street cars had to be moved into position and sent cityward after being loaded.

Fences Broken Down.

The crush was so great that fences were broken down. There was some exasperation over the refusal of car employes to open the door before the terminus was reached, and the cars were rocked, but were not damaged.

In the rushes to get on the cars after they reached the loop some women fainted and many were bruised, but none were reported to have received serious injuries.

Soldiers and street railway employes assisted the police in handling the crowd. Some, after waiting a long time and seeing no prospect of getting on a car, walked to the St. Charles Road and boarded cars there.

Cases of Persons Speeding to Air Races to Be Dismissed.

Cases against persons arrested for speeding on the roads to and from Lambert-St. Louis Flying Field during the air meet will be dismissed by the county prosecuting officers when they are called, it was announced last night from the Sheriff's office. It was explained that it was unfair to prosecute automobile drivers for speeding, after they had been urged to set a fast pace to enable the unusually heavy traffic to move as quickly as possible. Arrests had been made by Deputy Constables.

THIRTY TAKEN OFF SHIP

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6.—The steamship Humboldt has taken 30 persons off the steamship Corson and is towing the Corson from somewhere in the Santa Barbara channel to Los Angeles, according to a wireless message picked up here tonight by the Naval Radio Station. The message did not state what was the trouble with the Corson. The Naval Radio Station expressed the belief that the Corson was not the vessel that earlier tonight had been reported by radio in distress off the Pacific coast.

Local broadcasting stations discontinued their programs with announcements that they had been instructed to shut down to give the distress calls the right of way.

85,000 PAID TO SEE PULITZER AIR-RACE

Receipts From Ticket Sales During Meet Estimated at $125,000.

Approximately 85,000 paid admissions was the record attendance at the Flying Field yesterday, Barney W. Frauenthal, chairman of the Ticket Committee, announced last night. The turnstiles at the entrance recorded between 80,000 and 81,000 paid admissions.

"In addition, there were several thousand who were admitted without passing through the turnstiles when the crowd became jammed on several occasions," he said. "We have had no opportunity to check the admissions accurately, but I believe an estimate of 85,000 is very close. We took in over $30,000 cash at the gates yesterday, but numbers of those admitted had purchased tickets downtown previously."

Many thousands more stood in spaces to which no admission was charged, so that it was generally agreed by persons accustomed to estimating large gatherings, that the spectators exceeded 100,000.

"Attendance on the first two days of the meet averaged about 20,000 each," Frauenthal added. "We had more than twice as many paid admissions yesterday, when the Pulitzer Trophy race was staged, than on both previous days."

Frauenthal estimated that receipts from all sales of tickets at the Field and downtown were about $125,000. He said he had been following the finances of the meet rather carefully and was convinced that sufficient was taken in to meet expenses.

Business men and others here subscribed about $170,000 to the fund used to prepare the field and meet other expenses. The amount taken in for admissions is expected to fall about $50 000 short of the original contributions, but the value of permanent assets at the field is easily $50,000, Frauenthal said. Contributors will be given stock in the company holding these permanent assets in proportion to their original contributions, he added.

DRINKWATER SUED FOR DIVORCE

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Preliminary steps in a suit for divorce have been taken by Mrs. John Drinkwater against her husband, author of "Abraham Lincoln," "Robert E. Lee" and other historical plays. The case will be heard at the next session of court, opening Oct. 12 at which it is on the undefined list. No details regarding the circumstances of the suit or the allegations upon which it is founded have been learned.

Mrs. Drinkwater before her marriage was Kathleen Walpole, an actress. The couple were married in 1906, and Mrs. Drinkwater has appeared only infrequently on the stage since.

MAINTAINS AVERAGE TIME OF 243.67 MILES PER HOUR

Wrests Trophy From Army While He Breaks Every Mortal Speed Mark Ever Set.

TRAVELS MORE THAN 4 MILES A MINUTE BEFORE CROWD OF 100,000

Winner Says Indicator Showed 280 Miles an Hour at One Time—Navy Also Takes Second, Third and Fourth Places—Lieut. Brow Second, 241.78 Miles an Hour.

Every mortal speed record was shattered and Mercury went into hiding on Olympus yesterday when Lieut. A. J. Williams, of the United States Navy, traveling at the tremendous rate of more than four miles a minute, captured the Pulitzer Trophy race, the world's speed classic and finale of the International Air Races, before one of the largest crowds that ever assembled in or near St. Louis.

He sped 124.28 miles at an average of 243.67 miles an hour at Lambert-St. Louis Field. The crowd was 100,000 or more persons. His mark tumbles every world's speed record from 1 to 300 kilometers.

Man never before has traveled so fast. The best previous officially registered mark was 236.58 miles an hour. That, however, was a speed maintained for only one kilometer on a straightaway course. Lieut. Williams made his mark over a triangular course which required 12 vertical turns of his ship and inevitable slowing down at each. There remains for man only to equal the speed of projectiles and approach Nature's forces of sound and light.

Only slightly slower and still at the rate of more than four miles a minute was Lieut. Williams' Naval teammate, Lieut. H. J. Brow, whose average speed of 241.78 miles an hour gave him second place.

Clean Sweep for Navy.

There is crepe on every army flagstaff today—for the Navy, after losing every other event in the three-day international meet in which it pitted itself against the Army, made a clean sweep of the Pulitzer Trophy race, the nation's outstanding aviation event. Lieut. L. H. Sanderson of the Marine Corps, flying for the Navy, finished third at 230.06 miles an hour, while Lieut. S. W. Callaway, also of the Navy, was fourth at 230 miles an hour.

Only two of the three army entries finished, Lieut. W. Miller at 218.91 miles an hour and Lieut. J. D. Corkille at 216.45 miles, but, though dusted by the naval land attack, the Army colors still fly proudly. There was less than 4 minutes difference in the elapsed time of the winner and the last pilot for the 124 miles. Lieut. Williams required 30 minutes, 36.01 seconds, the fastest time. Lieut. Corkille made the course in 34 minutes, 26.9 seconds the slowest time. As for the first and second in the race, they would have finished only about half a mile apart at the end of 124.28 miles had they started from scratch together.

Every one of the six pilots who finished bettered the winner's time of the Pulitzer race at Detroit last year. Lieut. Russell Maughan won the event at Detroit with 205.8 miles an hour over a slightly longer course, 155 1-3 miles. Lieut. Miller of the Army yesterday, flew the plane that Lieut. Maughan flew at Detroit and made it do nearly 219 miles an hour.

Old Record Fell Quickly.

The crowd had not long to wait for its new record. Lieut. Sanderson accomplished that in the very first of three sections in which the race was run. His 230.06 miles an hour wiped out the existing records over a triangular course.

Lieut. Williams raced in the second section. His speed at the starting line was so apparently greater than that of the contestants in the first section that a long gasp went up from the crowd. He said later he was doing 280 miles an hour when he dived at the line. His first lap was at the rate of 245.27 miles an hour. The announcer tried to say that this was the greatest speed the world ever had known in its centuries of terrestrial shirling, but the gobs at the Navy hangar, who had a loud speaker connection, set up such a triumphant cheer that the loud speaker was choked out.

Great Speed Made Him "Woozy."

The second lap was 243.81 miles, the third 243.53 and the gobs were praying that nothing happened in the fourth. Nothing did, but there was amazement when the Lieutenant after finishing the allotted distance went winging his way off on the course again for an extra lap. Effort was made to flag him at the second pylon that he had finished, but he sailed on, nor did he catch the signal at the third pylon. His great speed had left him "woozy." He had lost count and he wasn't taking any chances with Navy honors. He completed the extra lap.

Meanwhile the third section had taken the air and before Lieut. Williams had successfully lockeyed a landing, the time of the first heat of the second section had made it appear that he would be declared the winner. He taxied up to the airdrome and a second heat of the final section was in. The Army was trail-

ONE MINOR INJURY IN 400 FLIGHTS SHOWS CONQUEST OF THE AIR

COMPLETE conquest of the air by man was forcibly demonstrated at the International Air Races which ended yesterday.

Only one accident, and that of a minor nature, occurred during the three days' racing and the two weeks of practice flying preceding it. About 150 planes were at the field, and in all more than 400 flights were made. Fifteen machines, in racing competition, made forced landings without injury to pilots, except in the case of Lieut. Sanderson of the Marines, who yesterday suffered a sprained ankle, cuts on the lips and bruised knuckles.

The combined air distance traversed by flyers, in coming here and while here, was estimated by Air Race officials at 300,000 miles.

ing badly and his own teammate had not yet matched his own first heat of 245 miles.

So Lieut. Williams wheeled his blue racer over toward the timer's stand. Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, spied him approaching. It was a bit un-rear admiralish to run like a school boy down the enclosure, but that is exactly what the Rear Admiral did. No gob should be the first to grasp the man who had wrested air supremacy from the Army. And no gob was. The Rear Admiral won the race. His were the first congratulations to reach the victor's ears.

Admiral Acted as His Orderly.

What's more, the photographers were flocking up and the Rear Admiral was taking no chances that the Beau Brummel of the navy—Lieut. Williams had a pre-race reputation of being the handsomest man on the grounds—should be pictured throughout the nation unless he was personally shipshape. The Admiral would have peeled his own dress coat, but fortunately another was produced. Also a dress cap, with its braid a bit awry. The Rear Admiral offered his own, but Williams ducked and the Rear Admiral had to be content with dusting the other cap, straightening its braid and planting it on the Lieutenant's head. The authenticity of this new record is not so certain as Williams' 243 miles an hour, but no one last night could remember that a Rear Admiral ever before had acted as orderly for a Lieutenant, who only a month ago was an Ensign.

Crowd Struggled for Glimpse.

Lieut. Williams was escorted to the timer's stand so that some portion of the crowd could glimpse him. That portion which could gave him a cheer. He had shed his dress furbelows and appeared in the smoke-blackened shirt in which he had taken history by the ears.

That young man likely will not see such a crowd again, no matter what the span of his life. It was a black mass of humanity for one-half mile to the right of him and to the left. It had greater expanse than the great Pageant and Masque crowd on Art Hill. It had as great density as the Pageant and Masque crowd and if more persons crowded themselves into one enclosure during the World's Fair, it was not to observe any single event or to focus its attention for any space of time upon any individual or happening as yesterday's crowd did upon one fair-haired, supremely happy young king of the air.

Crowd Held Speechless.

It was a crowd to which speed records had been promised and a crowd curious to see what such records visualized would be. And when the records were realized, it was a crowd helpless to describe the emotion of speed. It only knew that the roar of the racer's motor could be heard before the racer was in sight. It saw a winged demon dart to vision, swerve sharply and dart out of sight on the horizon all within the space of a few seconds. Once it saw a railroad train skirt the field as one of these flashes past was occurring. The railroad train seemed like a snail funeral. Above was a bat out of hell.

Roar of Racers Tuning Up Set Crowd on Tiptoe.

The first occurrence to set the crowd on tiptoe was a staccato roar off in the direction of the hangars. The gadflies were tuning up. The last pat to fuselage had been given by mechanics who had groomed them like race horses till their sides showed sleek and shiny. The tiniest speck that could give wind resistance had been rubbed down. The racers themselves appeared to have emerged from some mould, so carefully had everything about them been shaped to streamline. The last ounce of gasoline had been filtered through chamois. The Major General in command of the army air force had gone to the army hangars and told the men that whatever happened he knew the honor of the army was safe with them. He hoped they would again win the Pulitzer trophy as they had last year.

The Admiral in charge of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics had gone to the navy hangar. It was a great moment for him. He had strained throughout the year to produce for his fliers the fastest human instrument of locomotion ever assembled. He gave a final word of encouragement.

The navy mechanics seized the 700-horsepower Wright fighter entrusted to Lieut. Sanderson for the first test in the opening section of the race. They wheeled it from the hangar to the starting line, where the wasp-like Curtiss of the army was already in line, its black sides as spotless as those of the red navy entry.

The Army mechanics wanted to know what the Navy was doing so far from the water. The Navy mechanics said that they had come out to beat the Army's concrete mixers.

The jibing of the rival crews was cut short by a bomb from the judge's stand. The race would be on in 5 minutes. Rear Admiral Moffett escorted the Navy's representative, Lieut. Sanderson, to his ship. Lieut. Corkille came in another automobile under the wing of Maj. Hickam, director of flying for the Army. There were last instructions. The pilots were boosted into their cockpits. The upper halves of their heads only protruded above the fuselage. A red flag went up. It was the signal for the Navy to start its motor. Lieut. Sanderson gave it brief trial, then signaled that he was ready. A white flag went up in the starter's other hand. Red and white fell together. Lieut. Sanderson "gave her the gun." Another bomb. The race was on.

Took Diving Start.

Once off the ground, Sanderson darted almost perpendicularly into the blue and became a gnat in the sky. He turned right, or east, and made a sweeping circle of the field so far into the south that he was lost to sight. Minutes it seemed until the speck reappeared. Second only it took for the speck to become a roaring, raging monster, diving nose down from an altitude of 2000 feet to within 100 feet of the ground as it crossed the starting line, swooped around the pylon and streaked off on the first leg.

Meanwhile Corkille was carefully feeling out his engine. At last he was satisfied. He gave the signal. The red and white flags dropped, and he, too, in an incredible space of time became a speck in the sky. He circled in the opposite direction from Sanderson, to the left, or west, and his circle for the start was briefer. Another crescendo roar. Another flash. Corkille was away in pursuit of his naval rival.

The loud speaker had just told of Corkille's reaching the first pylon, when Sanderson was observed approaching the end of his first lap. There was feeling of speed here. First a little black something, far down the course. A whistling in the air. A deafening blare, almost instantly hushed, for the pylon is rounded and as magically this streaking thing of the sky shrinks back to a little black something that leaves a trail of black smoke far away in the offing.

Sanderson's time is announced as 230.33 miles an hour for the first lap. The crowd knows then what speed is, speed greater than any human had before traveled such a distance around a triangular course. It is satisfied. It came for speed.

Sanderson's Greater Speed Apparent.

The loud speaker tells now of Sanderson, now of Corkille rounding a distant pylon. Even before the time of the laps, the crowd knows that Sanderson is traveling the faster—is gaining. However, the announcement of Corkille's time at 171.77 miles an hour for the first lap does not seem comparatively correct, and so it proves. Later the army man is given credit for a first lap in 210.58.

But Sanderson is tearing around the course like a madman. His second lap goes up at 229.83. His third is 229.99, and it becomes clear that, accident preventing, he will put the Navy in the lead, for Corkille cannot get his plane above 216. Sanderson raises his speed on the final lap until his average is 230.06 miles—a new mark goes down in the Pulitzer.

Sanderson's Plane Wrecked.

The red navy plane crosses the line and soars upward again, for there remains the trying performance of a safe landing at 75 miles or more an hour. These gnats cannot be slowed down to less. Corkille is still on the course, so the crowd takes its interest from Sanderson. He is in. His mark is written. But not in the timer's stand. There a pair of field glasses follows Sanderson as he circles lower and lower. Off to the east he is. Careful he is coming down too rapidly. He is down and beyond the field, beyond the railroad tracks where there is rough that is mountainous to so small a plane. A quick sign. Motor cycle side cars carrying physicians dart across the field. An ambulance plunges forth from the hangars. A hospital ship takes the air. But almost before the crowd realizes that Sanderson, after his splendid performance, has come to grief, the field glasses catch his figure on the railroad embankment and the word goes out, "Sanderson is safe." The crowd gives a great sigh of relief. But the plane that for the nonce was a world's record plane lies strewn flat on the field, a hopeless wreck. Sanderson had had just a pint too little gas to bring him up.

Army's Verville Sperry Plane Forced to Withdraw.

Unperturbed, the army and navy rivals in the next section had set their motors roaring before Sanderson's fate was known. Carry on. This was the section in which Lieut Williams sent his blue Curtiss 460-horsepower racer to unheard-of performance. The two Curtiss ships were the Navy hope. The Army chose to see these heralded marvels in action before disclosing its "best bet" and sent its Verville Sperry with Lieut. Pearson at the stick against the new navy plane. The Army did not expect the Verville Sperry to win, but it was scarcely prepared for what transpired, the withdrawal of the Verville Sperry, leaving the Army with only one ship to give battle to the remaining three Navy planes.

Lieut. Williams was sent away first in the section. He chose an altitude of 2000 feet and seemed to be having difficulty in determining from which position he desired to make his start. Or perhaps he was trying out his steed for the turn of the first pylon, for as he veered back and forth, he made sharp turns. Suddenly he plunged. The terrific blasting of his motor gave the crowd instant perception that his was speed greater than they had yet seen. He cut only a few feet of the starting line and, making an economically close turn of the pylon, pounded off and dropped from sight.

Missing of Its Motor Heard.

The Verville Sperry now took the air, a curious monoplane which pulled its landing legs up and out of sight to reduce wind resistance. There was no such roar, no such speed in its crossing. In fact, the missing of its motor was heard directly that the pylon had been reached. Lieut. Pearson went no more than two miles, then turned off the course and circled for a landing. He explained after reaching the ground that a sprung crank shaft had set the whole fuselage to vibrating so violently as to threaten control of his ship.

The Cause of Gen. Patrick's Worry.

It was not this loss of force that disturbed Major-General Patrick and caused him to walk nervously up and down at the field's edge, but the things that Williams was doing. The loud speaker had announced the Navy man at the second pylon and, with the crowd, had forgotten him for the moment and concerned itself with observing the shift from course and descent by the Army man.

Williams was not expected so soon. There was amazement when he came pounding in a wide circle for the pylon. He had been gone a little more than seven minutes. Here was Major-General Patrick's worry. The Army knew tha its last entry could not equal that speed if Williams kept it up. If the army ever groaned it was when Williams' time of better than 245 an hour went up. But the army never groans and Major-General Patrick only tapped his boot a bit impatiently.

Sharp turns at the home pylon to shorten the course were no concern of Williams. He took a wide sweep, which began half a mile before he reached the pylon and did not end until he had passed another half mile beyond. Williams was keeping her wide open and hanging on. As a baseball pitcher (see New York Giants' roster, 1916) Williams was making air daredevils look like bat boys.

Williams was turning the battle between army and navy into a dirge for the army. The army men knew it. It was taps for them if he maintained the speed. The navy knew nothing could beat Williams, amuck as he was, and the gobs were doing hornpipes at the hangars.

Took an Extra Lap.

Never under 243 miles an hour and never able to catch a glimpse of his adversary of whose landing he was not aware, Williams completed his four laps. But instead of darting upward victoriously, it seemed that he shut down a second, then "gave her the gun" again, swooped around the pylon at the same terrific speed as before and went winging away on the course again. Sanderson's exhausted gasoline supply and its consequences flashed into the minds of the race officials. "Stop Williams" they flashed by telephone to pylon two. Pylon two attempted to wig-wag Williams. Might as well tried to flag a bolt of greased lightning. Williams had his mind on the imaginary army foe ahead. Pylon three gave him the signal. Williams was running this race. Couldn't be bothered. There was a distinct quiver of relief among the officials when Williams hove in sight. This time he climbed upward from the finish line, did a half loop to bring his plane about and soon coasted down to the field. Without waiting for the arrival of mechanics who were rushing to tow him in, he taxied under his own power toward the hangars.

"How does it feel to be the fastest thing in all the world?" a reporter asked when he reached the side of the ship.

"It feels funny; it feels silly," he replied, "I'm goofy."

Lieut. Brow Threatened Williams' Crown.

Williams was safe from the army, but one of his naval comrades took the stick of a sister ship in the third and final section of the race and for a time threatened Williams' crown. But that first mad lap at 245 miles by Williams could not be overcome by Lieut. H. J. Brow. He fell just a mile an hour short of Williams' time for the last three laps and though he drove desperately could not lift himself beyond 241.78 miles an hour.

His opponents were a teammate, Lieut. Callaway in the second navy Wright Fighter, and the last forlorn hope of the army. Lieut. Miller of the army drove one of the most remarkable races of the afternoon, but forlorn in that his Curtiss was not equal to the task. The navy during the year had caught the army napping and had built ships never before equaled. Miller got 218.91 miles an hour out of a ship which was partially beyond his control for the entire 124 miles. This was apparent at the start. He came toward the mark at right angles, instead of on a tangent, as the other pilots, and his plane's careening caused apprehension. It came downward in a series of dives and hops and continued until out of sight in a zig-zag course, marked by his black exhaust smoke. He could not govern altitude accurately and his performance was comparable to that of a jockey on a horse with a bit in the teeth and a head of its own. Once he rounded the home pylong perilously close and seemed to slide instead of bank it.

The announcement of Miller's time, 25 miles an hour slower than Williams had set up, was the last blast under the army. Nor had Lieut. Callaway for the navy been able to crowd his Wright above 230 miles and the crowd began to search for the victor. He was being led to Gov Hyde's box.

"Say, look here," he was protesting, "I'm not so much as all that."

How Pulitzer Race Winner's Speed Dwarfs Other Locomotion Records

THE greatest speed ever attained by man was made in the Pulitzer Trophy airplane race yesterday—243.67 miles an hour.

Some idea of what tremendous speed this is may be gained from the other known speed records, set forth below:

Horse race—One mile on a circular track in 1 minute and 34 seconds, made by Sun Briar at Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 12, 1918.

Passenger train—98.7 miles an hour, established by Burlington road in trip from Eckley to Wray in Yuma County, Col., in March, 1902.

Steamship—28 knots or 32 miles an hour, made by the American liner Leviathan on her trial trip for six hours last June.

Automobile—113 miles an hour, made by Milton in a Duesenberg car at Sheepshead Bay, Nov. 25, 1919.

Motor Cycle—98.94 miles an hour, made by Otto Miller on a Harley-Davidson at Los Angeles, Jan. 23, 1922.

Dirigible—The ZR-1, the Navy's new giant of the air, which was in St. Louis Tuesday is capable of making 80 miles an hour in a dead calm. Any speed in excess of this which may have been made by a dirigible probably was made with the aid of a stiff wind.

How It Feels to Be Speed King of World in Words of Pulitzer Trophy Winner

"Funny to Have Achieved My Ambition," Lieut. Williams Says—"Woozy" on Third Lap and Went Around Again to Be Sure.

An extremely drawn young man in an extremely dirty white shirt wobbled on his athletic legs in the navy hangar late yesterday afternoon receiving the vociferous congratulations of his mates and superiors. He was Lieut. Alford J. Williams of New York, who had just broken all world's speed records.

"How does it feel to be the world's speed king?" was the first question fired at the record holder by a Post-Dispatch reporter. "Feels kind of funny," was the answer. "I'm still pretty 'goofy,' guess it will be some time before I come out of this."

Lieut. Williams was apparently 'goofy.' His splendid athletic form was hunched, his ruddy, 'fighter's face' was gray and grimy, and he appeared incapable of concentration.

Went "Woozy" in Third Lap.

"Surely feels sort of funny to have achieved my ambition," he said. "I crossed the starting line with my indicator showing 280 miles an hour. I kept her wide open, but my speed dropped some, and somewhere in the third lap I went 'woozy.' I felt just like I was asleep. It was those turns that did it. I couldn't see, so I jerked off my goggles, but that didn't help any, it seemed. I was all mixed up and lost track of the laps. Sure was 'woozy.' I knew things were mixed so I just went around again to make sure. Excuse me now, Miss Perkins is waiting to take me to the Chase, you understand."

And the athlete who had just traveled faster than human had ever gone before—and lived to tell of it, stepped into a coupe filled with yellow chrysanthemums, and was driven to his hotel by Miss Catherine Perkins, daughter of Col. A. T. Perkins, receivership manager of the United Railways, who had charge of the preparation of Lambert-St. Louis Field for the races.

Escorted to the Grandstand.

Prior to that, and as soon as it was officially announced that Lieut. Williams had won the Pulitzer Trophy, he was escorted to the grandstand box of Major General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the Army Air Service. There he was requested to make a speech. "Let me get down and out of here; rush it up," was his only response; which appeared more like a command.

However, his proud cronies did take him to another box and introduce him to Orville Wright, the inventor of the type of planes which Williams in a Curtiss racer had vanquished. Miss Catherine Wright, sister of the "father of aviation," presented the blushing victor with an enormous bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums, as both she and her brother congratulated him.

Lieut. Williams was then presented to George S. Johns and W. Frank Carter of the Air Board, who led the throng in three rousing cheers for the man of the hour."

Terrain Recorded in Mind.

Lieut. Williams' statement that he had piloted his blue, motor driven projectile at better than 243 miles an hour while in a semi-conscious state, shows the wisdom of his intensive preparation for the test. A week ago he had told a Post-Dispatch reporter that he would be able to "smell" his way around the triangular course on race day. "I have been over the course 25 times," he said at that time, "and I am going five or six more times before the race. I have the entire terrain recorded in my mind and there will be no wild looking around for landmarks by me on race day."

Winner Was College Athlete.

The new world's speed champion is 29 years old, and single. His home is New York City, where he studied law at Fordham University, graduating in 1915. He was one of Fordham's star athletes on the gridiron and the diamond, and his pitching ability attracted the attention of John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants. He was signed by the Giants and served as relief pitcher through 1915 and 1916. America's entrance into the World War in 1917 closed Lieut. Williams' professional baseball career. He joined the aviation branch of the navy, and has served at a number of naval aviation stations in the East. Yesterday was his second start in a Pulitzer Trophy Race. Last year at Detroit he piloted a navy entry to fourth place. Aviation has succeeded baseball, both as a hobby and a profession, for Lieut. Williams. "I live, eat, sleep, and play aviation," he said last week. "It is the greatest thing in my life and I intend to follow it as long as the Navy will let me."

Second Man in Race Close Up.

Lieut. Harold J. Brow, who captured second place for the Navy with a speed of 241.28 miles an hour, finished third in the Pulitzer race at Detroit last year. He is 29 years old and single. His home is in Providence, R. I., where he was a member of the Naval Militia at the outbreak of the war. Leaving his business of designing milling machines for a commission in the Navy, he was assigned to aviation duty, and, like Lieut. Williams, has served at several eastern naval air stations.

The race between Williams and Brow was tight to say the least, and but for a boiling water system Lieut. Brow might today be wearing the crown of all speed kings. "My engine began to boil on the last lap," Lieut. Brow said, after the race. "The indicator went to the top of the tube, 212 degrees, and stuck. When I landed a cloud of live steam poured from the overflow pipe, so you see the water wasn't cooling the motor much." Aside from the heating of his motor Lieut. Brow reported nothing unusual regarding the race. He congratulated Lieut. Williams warmly on his victory and joined a party celebrating the Navy victory.

"Sandy" of Marines Third.

Lieut. Lawson H. Sanderson, "Sandy of the Marines," who paced the race with an average in excess of 230 miles an hour, which eventually garnered him third prize money, is another veteran of the last Pulitzer race.

"Sandy," as he is popularly known to Leatherneck and Gob, is 28 years old and was born in Shelton, Wash. He is married, and his wife witnessed his third place victory. He attended the University of Washington, and was well known in the West as a football star. He joined the Marine Corp at America's entrance into the world war, transferring to the aviation section in 1918. He has served in Haiti and Santo Domingo, and made a flight from Washington D. C. to the West Indies and return in 1921. In addition to being one of the world's greatest aviators he is an expert rifleman. A genuine Leatherneck is "Sandy," respected by his fellow officers and the love of all Navy mechanics.

Career of Lieut. Callaway.

Lieut. Steven W. Callaway, who is placing fourth swept the field for the navy, is a veteran of aviation. Beginning flying in 1910 with his own plane, he spent the subsequent years, until 1917, as an exhibition aviator in his native State of California. The day after America declared war on Germany Lieut. Callaway received his commission as a naval aviator. His first assignment was to a cruiser equipped with airplanes. He made one trip overseas on this ship, and has since been instructor and test pilot at naval stations on both coasts. Like the other navy representatives in yesterday's race, he is a veteran of last year's Pulitzer race.

PULITZER TROPHY IS PRESENTED TO LIEUT. WILLIAMS

Breaking the world's speed record was a very simple thing, as Lieut. Alford J. Williams described it last night at the smoker given in Hotel Statler, in honor of the International Air Race winners by the National Aero Congress.

"It was just a case of being told which throttle to use, and how far to push it," the Navy's victor said when he was asked to explain the flying by which he won the Pulitzer Trophy. "The Curtiss people could help me to explain it if they were here. They left a little mark on the throttle, which meant 'wide open,' so I put the throttle wide open and left it that way.

"It was rather lonesome out there on the course," Lieut. Williams continued. "I looked around sometimes, but I can't say that I saw much. A lot of things happened, none of them very remarkable. Perhaps later my ideas will drop into pigeon holes, and I can tell more about it."

Presentation of Trophy.

Lieut. Williams declared that his experience of the day had fulfilled his highest ambition, and that his stay in St. Louis had been most pleasant.

Ralph Pulitzer, president of the Press Publishing Co., publisher of the New York World, made the presentation of the Pulitzer Trophy to Lieut. Williams in behalf of the donors of the trophy, himself and his brothers, Joseph Pulitzer, editor of the Post-Dispatch, and Herbert Pulitzer.

"I want to thank you for a very pleasant welcome home," Mr. Pulitzer said to the gathering. "I say home, because I am a St. Louisan, born here and proud of it. That makes me all the more glad and proud that of all cities, St. Louis was the one which had the civic vision and patriotism to win these amazing races and an important place on the aeronautic map of the future.

"When I offered the Pulitzer Trophy on behalf of my brothers and myself, it was our intention to encourage the development and perfecting of aviation in the United States. We saw two angles of approach—speed and endurance. Speed would include endurance to a greater extent than endurance would include speed; also in speed there was a certain legitimate element of the spectacular, which encurance lacked, to stimulate popular interest in the science and art of flying. So speed was selected—I leave it to you whether or not speed has been attained. In my wildest flights of imagination I did not dream that in four short years the speed could mount to the incredible figure of 243 miles an hour.

"I wish I had the eloquence to pay tribute to something more wonderful—the men who made this speed. In the face of their winged deeds, the most winged words have to make an emergency landing. I can only say how deep is my admiration for the man who won the trophy, and the others who made him fly so hard to do it."

PULITZER TROPHY IS PRESENTED TO LIEUT. WILLIAMS

Breaking the world's speed record was a very simple thing, as Lieut. Alford J. Williams described it last night at the smoker given in Hotel Statler, in honor of the International Air Race winners by the National Aero Congress.

"It was just a case of being told which throttle to use and how far to push it," the Navy's victor said when he was asked to explain the flying by which he won the Pulitzer Trophy. "The Curtiss people could help me to explain it if they were here. They left a little mark on the throttle, which meant 'wide open,' so I put the throttle wide open and left it that way.

Presentation of Trophy.

Lieut. Williams declared that his experience of the day had fulfilled his highest ambition, and that his stay in St. Louis had been most pleasant.

Ralph Pulitzer, president of the Press Publishing Co., publisher of the New York World, made the presentation of the Pulitzer Trophy to Lieut. Williams in behalf of the donors of the trophy, himself and his brothers, Joseph Pulitzer, editor of the Post-Dispatch, and Herbert Pulitzer.

"I want to thank you for a very pleasant welcome home," Mr. Pulitzer said to the gathering. "I say home, because I am a St. Louisan, born here and proud of it. That makes me all the more glad and proud that of all cities, St. Louis was the one which had the civic vision and patriotism to win these amazing races and an important place on the aeronautic map of the future.

"When I offered the Pulitzer Trophy on behalf of my brothers and myself, it was our intention to encourage the development and perfecting of aviation in the United States. We saw two angles of approach—speed and endurance. Speed would include endurance to a greater extent than endurance would include speed; also in speed there was a certain legitimate element of the spectacular, which endurance lacked, to stimulate popular interest in the science and art of flying. So speed was selected—I leave it to you whether or not speed has been attained. In my wildest flights of imagination I did not dream that in four short years the speed could mount to the incredible figure of 243 miles an hour.

"I wish I had the eloquence to pay tribute to something more wonderful—the men who made this speed. In the face of their winged deeds, the most winged words have to make an emergency landing. I can only say how deep is my admiration for the man who won the trophy, and the others who made him fly so hard to do it."

"Casey" Jones Up Three Times.

Hugh Robertson of Detroit presided at the speaking program, which began after 10 p. m. Maj. Gen. Patrick, Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, Rear Admiral W. F. Fullam, retired, Orville Wright and a party of Japanese military and naval officers were among the guests.

W. Frank Carter, general chairman of the St. Louis Air Board, made the first informal presentation of Lieut. Williams as "the boy who brought the bacon home." The trophies were presented in the order in which they were won, and the winners of second and third places were called to the platform in each case. In this way, "Casey" Jones, civilian flyer, came forward three times, first as winner of the massive On-to-St. Louis cup of the Chamber of Commerce, then as winner of third money in the Flying Club of St. Louis Trophy race, and, finally, as third man in the Aviation Country Club of Detroit Trophy race.

City Gets Permanent Flying Field.

It was explained that the trophies would be returned for a few days to be engraved, and then would be forwarded to the winners, and that the prize money would be forwarded as soon as five days had elapsed, to cover the formal requirement of a time for protest, although it was stated, no protest is expected in any case.

Col. Frank P. Lahm read the list of prize winners. George S. Johns, editor of the editorial page of the Post-Dispatch, was called to present the On-to-St. Louis trophy, because of his activity, here and in Washington, in bringing the races to St. Louis.

"We bit off a mouthful," Mr. Johns said, "and it tastes good. We not only put over the races, but we got a permanent flying field."

Skeel to Fly in 1924 Race.

Randall Foster, president of the Flying Club of St. Louis, presented that club's trophy to its winner, Walter E. Lees. He termed it a $10,000 trophy, "representing one week's salary of 1000 of our members." Lees, in accepting it, remarked, "Compared to Williams, I was going backward, but I enjoyed it."

The Brig. Gen. William A. Mitchell trophy was not in hand to be presented to Capt. Burt E. Skeel, but the winner was introduced, and said that Gen. Patrick had promised to let him fly in next year's Pulitzer race, when he hoped to add 100 miles more to his 126-mile record.

In presenting the Liberty Engine Builders' Trophy to Lieut. C. McMullen, H. H. Emmons, president of the Detroit Board of Trade, paid a tribute to the designers of the Liberty Motor and the manufacturers who made its quantity production possible at a rate which six weeks before the armistice, was many times greater than the production of the allied countries. He named Col. H. B. Joy, Col. E. A. Deeds, Col. Vincent and Col. Ball as among the chief contributors to this achievement.

" 'Round and 'Round."

Lieut. McMullen, in accepting the trophy, said he had a good motor, and that he "pushed it open and went 'round and 'round."

Orville Wright, "father of aviation," was called forward with the question, "Did you even think they would go so fast?" With the positive reply that he did not, he excused himself from speaking in detail.

Jack Atkinson, most youthful appearing of the winners, received both speed and efficiency awards in the Aviation Country Club of Detroit Trophy contest, the presentation being made by Carl Fritchle, president of the club named. He said that St. Louis might have taken some aeronautic distinction away from Detroit, but that Detroit would hope still to make motors.

Col. Martin Collins, with an address on "Imperial Missouri," presented the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange trophy to Lieut. H. L. George.

The Detroit News Air Mail trophy, won yesterday by J. F. Moore, was the subject of a talk in the winner's absence by Rear Admiral Fullam who urged support of the air mail as a reserve for national defense.

Brow and Sanderson Absent.

Lieuts. Brow and Sanderson, second and third winners in the Pulitzer race, were not present to share honors with Lieut. Williams.

Howard E. Coffin, retiring president of the National Aeronautic Association, then spoke, saying that 300,000 miles had been flown in the various events at the meet and to and from the field without a casualty, which was the greatest record of all.

"This phase of the meet was a record of which we all should be proud, and in itself was a world's record," he said.

He paid a tribute to the Pulitzer brothers, whose trophy, he said, created the greatest competitive event in the world and made recent advancment in aviation possible.

Admiral Moffett paid tribute to the Wright and Curtiss companies, and to the mechanics and pilots for their co-ordination in the long preparation that made yesterday's achievements possible. The Pulitzer brothers, he said, had done more for their country than they realized, and what had looked impossible a year ago resulted yesterday in what appeared to be the achievement of a superman.

The arrangements and organization in so short a time, he said, were extraordinary, and he praised especially the work of Col. A. T. Perkins in giving to St. Louis one of the finest landing fields in the world.

"Hats Off to the Navy."

Gen. Patrick, who became an aviator after reaching the age of 60, said:

"Our hats are off to the navy. Fast planes never were flown by better men than Williams, Brow, Sanderson and Callaway. But next year the Army will try to retrieve the laurels snatched from us today."

"St. Louis has accomplished wonders," said Gen. Patrick, "and if I had a vote to cast on the selection of a city for next year's race, it would go into the box for St. Louis."

Moffett's Sportsmanship.

Chairman Carter of the St. Louis Air Board, speaking next, said he went to Gen. Patrick after the first postponement of the races on account of rain, and inquired what would happen if it should rain Saturday.

"Gen. Patrick informed me that the Army would remain in St. Louis until the Pulitzer race was run," he said. "That is the American spirit that put this great meet over the top."

Reviewing the history of the movement to bring the air meet to St. Louis, Carter said:

"St. Louis has broken world records. But what we really started out to do with this meet was to teach the people that they could not have adequate national defense without commercial interests back of it.

"There is in the air greater possibilities for national defense than on land or sea. Some people call us dreamers because we are looking skyward, but the things that make a nation great are dreams that come true. Within 10 years the traveler will cross the American continent by air in preference to other means. Greater things have been accomplished in the last 10 years."

Speed and Time Chart of the Pulitzer Trophy Race

THE following chart tells the story of the Pulitzer Trophy classic in figures, just as it appeared on scorecards of spectators who listened attentively to the official announcements. In the case of each pilot, speed in miles per hour by laps is given in the first line, and time by minutes and seconds in the second; but it should be borne in mind that the figures for each lap after the first include those for preceding laps. The race was four laps. The chart:

Place. Pilot. Service.	Lap 1.	Lap 2.	Lap 3.	Race.
1. Lieut. A. J. Williams, Navy..	245.27 7:36.02	243.81 15:17.48	243.53 22:57.84	243.67 30:36.01
2. Lieut. H. J. Brow, Navy.....	242.39 7:41.44	242.99 15:20.59	242.41 23:04.20	241.78 30:50.30
3. Lieut. L. H. Sanderson, Marine Corps	230.33 8:05.58	229.83 16:73.31	229.99 24:18.89	230.96 32:24.59
4. Lieut. S. W. Callaway, Navy..	231.74 8:02.64	231.24 16:07.38	230.78 24:13.92	230.00 32:25.14
5. Lieut. Walter Miller, Army...	218.42 8:32.06	218.61 17:03.24	218.07 25:31.69	218.91 34:03.73
6. Lieut. J. D. Corkille, Army...	210.58 10:51.15	214.43 17:23.11	215.91 25:54.14	216.45 34:26.90
7. Lieut. Alexander Pearson, Army	Forced down before starting race.

Lieuts. Callaway and Sanderson flew Wright Fighter planes with 700-horsepower motors. Lieuts. Williams and Brow flew Curtiss R2C1 planes with 460-horsepower motors. Lieuts. Miller and Corkille flew Curtiss racers with 400-horsepower motors. Lieut. Pearson was to have flown a Verville-Sperry monoplane with 400-horsepower motor and folding landing gear, the only monoplane in the race.

A striking feature shown by the chart is the consistent way in which the pilots maintained speed, even in the case of Lieut. Miller, who had mechanical trouble, which made his plane hard to control. There was a difference in elapsed time of only 3 minutes and 50.89 seconds between the winner and the last man for the full distance of 124.28 miles.

ANNOUNCER ENTERTAINS THRONG WHEN EXCITEMENT LAGS

Whenever air racers were not in sight and nothing else was going on during the meet at Lambert-St. Louis Field there usually was something in the way of an entertaining statement broadcast by the loud speaker. The announcer, who was responsible for this, was Louis G. Meister of McCook Field, Dayton, O., who is a reserve Captain and in charge of Government airways.

Meister became known at the field as a wag. It got so that the crowd would laugh at his "They'r off!" as a race started. If a lost child was taken into friendly custody, Meister would say to the crowd: "Little Tommy Jones has lost his mother—little Tommy wants his mother—mamma! —boo-hoo."

ST. CHARLES COUNTY FARM FOLK GATHERED AT PYLON NO. 2

Pylon No. 2, rising from a plowed field near Machens, St. Charles County, was not situated favorably to draw a large crowd. About 500 persons gathered there to watch the race. Their cars were parked in a meadow close by. Most of the spectators gathered on the "inside" shelter of the pylon, though a few bold spirits ventured to dare fate beneath the turning point. Near the foot of the pylon, and almost beneath the line of flight, a group of five women sat upon an Indian blanket spread on the plowed ground. One of the women was doing fancy work as the raucous airplanes shot overhead.

"They don't excite me," she remarked.

Spectators Mostly Farm Folk.

The people who saw the race from this point were mostly St. Charles County farm folk. It was observed by those who drove the 14 miles from St. Charles that nobody was at home on the farms along the roads. Everybody had driven to the pylon for the big show. For this reason most of those who drove out from St. Charles made several extra miles before they found the place, there being nobody to give them road directions. And there were more roads than really were necessary.

Most of the crowd was on hand early. They waited rather impatiently for the first plane to appear. When Lieut. Sanderson in his red Wright fighter flew out of hazy space into visibility there was a glad shout of joy.

STUNT FLYERS DO DAREDEVIL FEATS OVER HEADS OF CROWD

One of the best vantage points of any group of spectators of the Pulitzer Trophy race was in the car of the TC-3, Scott Field airship, which "anchored" in the air south of the field and remained till the race was over. It had appeared at noon as one of the special features of the day, and landed afterward for a while.

After the Detroit News Air Mail Trophy race was over there was an hour's orgy of stunt flying by commercial pilots, competing for a $25 prize. They skimmed close to spectators' heads, zoomed up, looped, did barrel rolls, "jazzed" and otherwise disported themselves. Charles Holman of Minneapolis, Minn., won the prize. Lillian Boyer, one of the women flyers, had stood on a wind while a plane looped the loop, then hung by her teeth from a rope on the plane.

A navy plane with upside-down motor, so placed to give greater efficiency, and upside-down flying by Cyle Horchem were other features. After the Pulitzer race there was a little more stunt flying and several parachute jumps.

CROWD UNABLE TO EXPRESS ITS REACTION TO TERRIFIC SPEED OF PULITZER RACERS

Negro Boy's "Ol' Finger Ain't Fast Enough to Point One of Them Things," About as Near as Comment Came to Adequacy.

Watchers on the ground—100,000 or more of them—saw Lieut. Williams in his Curtiss racing airplane win the Pulitzer Trophy race at Lambert-St. Louis flying field yesterday afternoon. There was no applause. Scarcely a cheer went up.

Man had gained 37.87 miles an hour in his eternal fight with Time and Distance. On wooden wings he had vied with the wind. The earth was a little nearer to the stars, after that race—the world a trifle smaller.

Neither speeches nor cheering seemed exactly appropriate. Most of the racing pilots picked a path directly above the crowd for the last mile of their laps, just before they turned the grandstand pylon. If the spectators had spoken what was in their hearts at these times they would have blurted something like, "Why can't you take your ships over the course the judges fixed for you?" At the moment it would have seemed reasonable. To the crowd, the air over the empty field was fully as good for flying.

Neither Here Nor There.

On the third lap, Lieut. Williams' plane appeared above the trees to the west of the course.

"Plane No. 9 is now approaching," the announcer stated.

"I'll say he is approaching," exclaimed someone in a group of men and girls who stood by the rail to the left of the Judges' stand.

"He ain't approaching," another remarked, "he's here!"

Neither assertion was quite correct. A Pulitzer Trophy racer is never here nor there, but some place in between.

"Just Getting Started."

Lieuts. Sanderson and Corkille, who competed in the first heat of the race, happened to be placed in false positions through an error by timers, afterward corrected. Lieut. Sanderson's time was announced to the crowd, as 230.33 miles an hour for the first lap and Lieut. Corkille's as 177 miles and a fraction. The latter's really was 210.58.

Suddenly the announcement came by loud speaker that Lieut. Corkille had developed a speed of 248 miles an hour.

"You see," said a swarthy little man, perched on a folding chair, "Corkille's just getting started. He was straightening his cushions and making himself comfortable that first lap. Hoo-ray for thuh army."

Because of the incorrect slow time recorded for Corkille's first lap, his second lap average increased marvelously. The error was adjusted, the correct count showing that he made 214.47 miles an hour on the second lap and not 248.

Serious Business to Some.

The mood of the thousands, changing from stunned dullness to inconsequential chatter and back again as the race ended, created an atmosphere unique in St. Louis crowd psychology of sports. Here and there were little groups that which felt this air racing was serious competitive business. The Army was trying to beat the Navy at this new game, and somebody besides the judges ought to keep score.

As the Crowd Saw It.

Statements on the race picked up at random from spectators follow:

An elderly man in an invalid's chair near the press box: "Folks are getting too smart. Yes, sir, just too smart. Something's going to happen to 'em some of these days. Think they're satisfied with this? I hear they're tryin' to go 500 miles an hour."

A girl in a blue suit, near the aeronautics exhibition: "After they get out of sight, where do they go? How soon do they turn around and come back?"

A prominent St. Louis lawyer, in a box near the east score board: "Two hundred and forty-three miles an hour. Just think of it! Just think of it! More than four miles a minute. Just think of that! Aviation has a great future, a great future."

A Colonel of infantry, across from the Barling bomber: "Yes, they're showing some speed. I knew those planes had it in 'em. Curtiss is a friend of mine, and I was talking to him a day or so ago. Don't think he had any idea they'd do this. But I knew they had it in 'em."

Looking Down From the TC-3.

A small boy, on the fence between reserved and general admission sections: "Gosh, they're going fast, aren't they? Looky there! Looky there! Just look at that, will you? I'll say that guy's stepping on it."

Had one been away from it all, for instance, high above in the army balloon TC-2, which hovered over and behind the crowd, he would have had something of this perspective on the Pulitzer race.

Below the earth is black with tiny figures, confined to a rectangular section beside an open field on which is a low tower. Behind the black patch and all around are tiny black squares, the tops of the 12,000 or more automobiles which parked in and about the admission enclosures. There are tiny tents and larger hangars to the west of the landing field.

Far away to the north and across a narrow band of silver, the Missouri River, is another tiny tower, and to the west, a third, the outlying pylons which mark the course. Slopes and valleys and woodlands lie between. Around this triangle of 30 miles, red and blue specks dart. Their pace is inconceivably greater than the motion of the people walking below, greater than that of the automobile moving on the roads, greater than that of the train that chugs across the prairie, more speedy even than the birds they startle from the trees. Within each speck is a mark.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE SPEED KING, BY PULITZER TROPHY WINNER

vibration of his plane. "The vibration shook my goggles loose and I could not follow the course. The loose goggles bothered my vision and I had a pretty hard time of it in that respect, otherwise it was no more much different than piloting a standard DH."

Lieut. Miller, the other army pilot to finish, said motor trouble kept his speed down. "The motor kept missing and I knew I was out of it from the start. We did the best we could with the equipment we had and I guess that is all the explanation there is necessary."

Lieut. Alexander Pearson, the third army pilot entered, explained his failure to pass the starting line after hopping off as being due to the extraordinary vibration of the metal propellor installed on his plane last Friday. "The new 'prop' vibrated so that I knew I would never get around," Lieut. Pearson said. "It would not have taken much of that to spring the crank shaft, so there was nothing to do but turn back." The Verville-Sperry plane used by Pearson was originally equiped with a wood propellor and the metal propellor was put on with an idea of increasing its speed.

PLANES TO TRY TODAY TO SET NEW RECORD

All Who Bettered 200 Miles an Hour to Enter Straightaway Contest.

All contestants who finished in the Pulitzer Trophy race yesterday, in which each flyer's speed exceeded the previous world's record over a triangular course, will try for even greater speeds at Lambert-St. Louis Field this afternoon, in contests over a three-kilometer straightaway course.

These contests will be conducted by the Contest Committee of the National Aeronautical Association, and the results will be official. It is expected that speeds of 15 to 20 miles an hour in excess of the record of 243.67 miles an hour established by Lieut. A. J. Williams in winning the Pulitzer Trophy yesterday will be made.

This will be possible, it is explained, because the flyers this afternoon will not have to bank for turns around the pylons, three of which had to be turned in each of the four laps around the triangular course for a total of 124.23 miles or 200 kilometers.

In the contests over the three-kilometer (1.86 miles) course the racing planes may be forced to their highest speed for the short distance, without the danger of mechanical trouble which might result from continuation of such speed over long distances, and the pilots will not have to worry about turns.

Speed Event to Be Climax.

These speed events are scheduled to take place betwen 3 and 4:30 this afternoon. They will furnish the climax of a day of interesting events at the Flying Field, arranged by the Flying Club of St. Louis at the request of many who were unable to attend the meet during the week.

The same traffic regulations for automobiles will prevail as during the races, and the special street car service will be continued. The crowds will be handled by the St. Louis Police Department, the Sixth Infantry and county authorities. An admission charge of $1 a person will be made. That will entitle the spectator to any position he may desire, except upon the flying field.

An Airplane Tug of War.

The Field will be opened to the public at 8 a. m. From that hour until noon there will be no stunts or contests, but there will be considerable flying, visiting pilots being permitted to take up passengers in planes approved by a committee from the Flying Club.

Stunt flying by civilian pilots will consume one-half an hour, from noon to 12:30. There will be a simultaneous race, entirely within the field, from 12:30 to 1, for JN4D planes. Parachute leaping contests are scheduled from 1 to 1:30. Contests for "dead-stick" landings are to be held from 1:30 to 2, and from 2 to 2:30 there will be an airplane tug of war.

From 2:30 to 3 there will be stunt flying.

After the three kilometer speed race, there will be contests for the quickest descent from 2000 feet to the ground. This will be between 4:30 and 5. Then there will be more stunt flying for half an hour.

129 Saloon Licenses Revoked.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Chicago today established a new record in its war to enforce the prohibition law when Mayor W. E. Dever, acting upon the recommendation of the police department, revoked 129 licenses of saloonkeepers and notices were served on the owners of the saloons to close their doors.

LEADERS IN AVIATION PRAISE ST. LOUIS FOR THE SUCCESS OF RACE MEET

Excellent Condition of Field, Arrangements and Handling of Crowds Commended Generally in Their Comment.

The International Air Race meet, which closed yesterday at Lambert-St Louis Field, save for special trials today for still greater speed records, was declared the greatest and most successful meet in the history of aviation by Rear Admiral Moffett, Chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, and Major-General Patrick, Chief of the Army Air Service.

Both extended warm praise to St. Louis for the thorough preparations for the meet, excellent condition of the field, arrangements and handling of the crowds, and they were joined in this by other visiting leaders in aviation and representatives of foreign Governments.

Donors of Trophy Commended.

The Pulitzer Trophy race, speed classic in aviation, was singled out as one of the big factors in the development of speed and scientific engine design, and the donors of the trophy —Messrs. Ralph, Joseph and Herbert Pulitzer of the Post-Dispatch and New York World—were commended for making the race possible.

Recognition was extended to newspapers of the city for their co-operation with business men in bringing the air races to St. Louis, particularly the Post-Dispatch, which was first to advocate editorially that St. Louis obtain the 1923 races as a means of stimulating interest in aviation and establishing St. Louis as an "air port."

Statement of Moffett.

Statements furnished the Post-Dispatch by army and navy officers and others prominent in aviation pointed out the race meet here would result in progress not only in the development of planes for use in national defense, but would advance the interests of the aircraft industry and aid in developing the commercial use of airplanes. The statement by Rear Admiral Moffett follows:

It has been a great day for American aviation. Every American can take pride in what the navy accomplished in the Lambert-St. Louis Field today. Lieut. Williams broke all world's speed records. The Navy and Marine Corps fighting planes broke all existing records for 100 and 200 kilometers.

Not only is it a great day for American aviation, but the industry in the United States has its share with the services and the pilots in today's accomplishments.

The Pulitzer race represents the ultimate achievements of aerodynamical science. These ships are really flying engines and the engines that were used in this race are now in production for service planes. It shows conclusively that the airplane engines and the planes are approaching the ultimate in their branch and greater speed now only means engine and plane refinement. Our racers were the development of the various laboratory expefiments we have been making for the last few years. The American aircraft industry now leads the world in the building of airplanes for speed, endurance and reliability.

Performances of the pilots, planes and engines today justifies the assertion that today American aviation leads the world. American naval seaplanes recently took first and second places in the international competition in England for the Schneider Cup. The public is familiar with the recent successful trials of the Navy rigid airship, ZR-1—the beginning, I hope, of a new means of transportation.

The country should awake and appreciate what is being done by its aviators and the aviation industry and give the Navy and Army what they need. We have shown what we can do; give us what we should have for the country's defense.

It has been the most successful aviation meet ever held and its attendance shows the great awakening of the people toward aviation. The work of the St. Louis Air Board and the officials in handling the races, the building of the field in a time that seemed impossible of accomplishment, and the handling of the crowds and traffic reflect the greatest credit on St. Louis, officials and all connected with the meet.

St. Louisans should be proud of their fellow-citizen, Joseph Pulitzer, and his brothers, who provided the means that made the Pulitzer Trophy race possible. It has resulted in a development of planes which may be of vital importance not only to national defense but to industrial aircraft.

REAR ADMIRAL W. A. MOFFETT.

Views of Maj. Gen. Patrick.

A statement by Major General Patrick follows:

The Navy is to be congratulated upon its victory and the City of St. Louis upon its magnificent demonstration of interest in aviation. The Army always does its best and we hope to do better next year. This is certainly the most successful meet ever held. Possibly 300,000 miles were flown, many at speeds never before attained, and there was not a single casualty. This shows that aviation is not only more efficient, but that it is safer than ever.

I take this occasion to express the appreciation of the Army Air Service of the efforts by St. Louis, its citizens, and particularly by the chosen few who bore the real burden of expense and work, in having made this 1923 air meet the greatest in the history of the United States.

It will be remembered for long that practically all our speed records were broken, and here this day. This speaks well for the way the field was prepared, for the skill of American designers and the daring and courage of American pilots.

We have been particularly impressed with the new evidence of the well known reputation of St. Louis for hospitality, open-handed and unbounded. We will go away with a pleasant impression of our stay in the city, and feel that everything was done that could be done to make for success.

We have just telegraphed to Mr. Joseph Pulitzer (in Washington) our expression of regret that he was unable to be present and told him the Pulitzer Trophy race is an important factor in development. Possession of the trophy is prized by the service that wins it and it brings fame to the individual pilot who wins it. We thanked him for the thought that prompted its donation.

MASON M. PATRICK,
Major-General, U. S. A.

Howard E. Coffin, of Detroit, retiring president of the National Aeronautic Association, said:

"There never before was a meet of this size, or one so well conducted, in the history of aviation.

"The fact that this is the second great race meeting held in this country, where all race records have been broken without even a scratch in the way of an injury to a single contestant, speaks volumes for the quality of control and regulation exercised by the Contest Committee of the National Aeronautic Association and by the Army and Navy.

"St. Louis newspapers, and perhaps more than others the Post-Dispatch under Mr. Pulitzer's leadership, seconded by the efforts of St. Louis business men, of course had great influence in bringing this premier event in aviation to St. Louis. (The Contest Committee of the N. A. A. designates the place for the meet, in conference with Army and Navy officers.)

"But beyond all this it was necessary to satisfy the requirements of the Contest Committee and representatives of the Army and Navy as to the safety of both the field and the course. This matter of safety must, after all, be the governing factor.

"I cannot say too much for the way in which St. Louis has met the difficulties and problems encountered in the creation of this new field."

SOLEMN FAREWELL EXTENDED TO FLYERS AT START OF RACE

The start of the first section of the Pulitzer Trophy race gave the impression of two men going off on an adventure with the chances of a safe return in great doubt.

While their respective planes were being warmed up and the other details preparatory to the start were being adjusted, Lieut. Sanderson of the Marines, and Lieut. Corkille of the Army, received hand-shakes and good wishes that were meant for encouragement, but which left the impression of a last fond farewell. Numerous Marines and civilian mechanics shook Lieut. Sanderson's hand in a manner that said, 'I not only wish you success in the race but I certainly hope you get back, old boy."

Rear Admiral Moffett joined the flights mechanics and "Leathernecks" in the handshaking, and his wishes were hardly more reassuring. Lieut Corkille was surrounded by an equal group of Army personnel whose expressions of solicitation were no less requiem. Sanderson was plainly affected by the solemnity—or a premonition of his subsequent forced landing. The laughing Lieut. Corkille was also sobered and his famous smile was missing as he was helped into the cockpit of his plane.

BARLING BOMBER TO START BACK TO DAYTON TOMORROW

The Barling Bomber, giant army triplane, which has remained on the ground since its arrival at the Flying Field from Scott Field Wednesday afternoon, will stay here until tomorrow afternoon, when it will depart on a direct flight for its home station at Dayton, O. This announcement was made by Major-General Patrick, chief of the army air service, last night. He had previously announced that the ship would leave here this afternoon and would pass over towns in Missouri and Illinois.

The fact that the Bomber had not flown since its arrival caused circulation of reports that there were mechanical defects. This was officially denied last night, it being explained that the plane, the largest heavier-than-air craft yet constructed, was too cumbersome for short exhibition flights.

PLANE LIGHTED LIKE CROSS FLIES OVER CITY

Klansman Pilot on Arrival Tuesday Told of Flights Over Oklahoma Parades.

A large white plane of standard make approached Lambert-St. Louis Field early last Tuesday morning, attracting the attention of army and navy pilots and newspaper men because of an inscription, "Crazy John," in large black letters on the fuselage.

The plane finally landed and "taxied" over to the corner of the field reserved for "gypsy" flyers, where, a few minutes later, a Post-Dispatch reporter found the pilot. Then it was learned that the plane was piloted and owned by V. Johns of Tulsa, Ok., when it had been flown with one passenger.

A Post-Dispatch reporter asked why his plane bore its inscription. Johns answered, "Well, brother, I just suppose it's a 'snake' name that the boys gave me. I'm given to doing some mighty foolish things in the sky."

The situation in Oklahoma then was discussed. Johns, when asked about Gov. Walton, answered, "He isn't doing so well. We're just too many for him. Are you a klansman? Well, I know Mr. Potok." (When one klansman hails another, he asks, "Do you know Mr. Kotop, which means "Klansmen Observe Their Oath Persistently." If the man so hailed is a klansman, he will answer, "No, but I know Mr. Potok," which is an inversion of the first salutation) Johns then explained that he was a klansman and that he had flown his plane electrically lighted as a Fiery Cross, at night in Oklahoma over Ku Klux parades.

Persons who happened to be on the streets of St. Louis around 9:45 last night were thrilled by the maneuvers of a large plane brilliantly lighted in the form of a huge cross. At an altitude of about 2500 feet, it hovered above O'Fallon and Fairground Parks and then went to the West End.

The plane apparently was lighted with electric light bulbs strung in a row from prow to tail, and from wing-tip to wing-tip. Officers in charge at Scott Field informed the Post-Dispatch that no plane was away from the hangars. There was no night flying scheduled at Lambert-St. Louis Field last night.

PULITZER TROPHY HELD FOR YEAR BY WINNER

Lieut. Williams Also Receives $2000 Cash Prize and Gold Plaque.

Lieut. Williams, as winner of the Pulitzer Trophy, will hold until next September the trophy, which is a triumphant feminine figure in silver holding aloft an airplane, and with her streaming garments forming a great wing behind her. This figure, upon a pedestal, was displayed recently in an Olive street show window. The rules require that it be yielded by the holder in time to be displayed one month before the next contest. The trophy has an intrinsic value of $5000.

The winner also receives a cash prize of $2000 and a gold plaque commemorating his victory. Lieut. Brow, by taking second place, won $1500 cash and a silver plaque. Lieut. Sanderson's third award is $500, and a bronze plaque.

Purposes of Trophy Tender.

The Pulitzer Trophy was tendered to the Aero Club of America in May, 1916 by Messrs. Ralph, Joseph and Herbert Pulitzer of the Post-Dispatch and New York World for a national competition with a four-fold purpose —, "to quicken American interest in the science that Americans first developed and gave to mankind; to induce the development of military and civilian aviators for national defense; to demonstrate the practical uses of airplanes for the transportations of passengers and mail and to open the way for transcontinental aerial highway."

Of these purposes, the first, as to public interest, has been notably accomplished, and the last, relating to the mails, has had a recent successful beginning. The demonstration of the uses of aircraft has been made more practical with each recurrence of the event. The second purpose, relating to the national defense, has not been accomplished to the satisfaction of the officers in charge of national defense, but the awakening of public interest, and the cultivation of mail and commercial aviation, are considered certain to have a favorable effect on the development of military and naval air forces.

Winners in the Four Years.

MRS. H. M. BIXBY TAKEN HOME IN SPERRY'S "FLIVVER" PLANE

She Is 15 Minutes Traveling From Field While Husband in Auto Takes Two Hours.

Mrs. Harold M. Bixby of 4943 Pershing avenue, wife of the treasurer of the Flying Club of St. Louis, was at Lambert-St. Louis Field with her husband yesterday afternoon, but she got home first. She was 15 minutes in getting home, while it took him nearly two hours.

Mrs. Bixby rode home as the guest of Lawrence B. Sperry, in the "flivver" airplane which he demonstrated on Lindell boulevard last Sunday. They landed in the southeast part of Forest Park, near Barnes Hospital. Her husband, in an automobile, did the best he could on a heavily traveled highway.

"It shows how people can get away from traffic congestion," Sperry remarked later. "The air will never be congested. It has too many dimensions. True a pilot needs long and careful training, but many automobile drivers also need much more training than they have had."

$150,000,000 HAULED TO NEW BANK VAULTS

Six Policemen Guard Wealth on Trip Through Downtown Streets.

The second largest amount of wealth in one place in the city took a trip through downtown St. Louis yesterday when $150,000,000 of securities, held by the registrar of the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis, were hauled quietly from the vaults of the Telegraphers' National Bank to the new building of the land bank on Pine street between Third and Fourth streets. The land bank has used extra vaults of the Telegraphers' Bank while it has occupied temporary quarters in the Plant-ers' Building.

Six policemen guarded the wealth while it was loaded into the wagon at Broadway and Pine street, hauled down Pine street and delivered at the vaults of the new bank building. Edward B. Clark, registrar of the bank, supervised the transfer.

The $150,000,000 held by the land bank is exceeded in St. Louis only by the resources of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. The land bank's assets consist mostly of Federal Land Bank bonds, bonds of the joint stock land bank and collateral of those banks, and government securities.

About $60,000,000 of the total represents the holding of the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis, according to Clark, and the remainder is held by the registrar as a result of the operations of the ten joint stock land banks in this district and the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank.

SANDERSON CRASH DUE TO LACK OF GASOLINE

Steered Into Haystack When Landing to Avoid Possible Accident in Crowd.

Lieut. Sanderson's forced landing in a field about a mile north of the starting pylon, after finishing his brilliant race for the Pulitzer Trophy, was due to lack of gasoline and the pilot's desire to avoid an accident at the flying field.

"I told them to put in more than 50 gallons of gas," he said, while Army surgeons were bandaging his sprained ankle and painting his cut face and hands with iodine. "I certainly could have stood some more gas but the boys thought 50 gallons sufficient, so I let it go at that."

"After I circled the field at the finish my engine died and I knew the gas was gone. I had sufficient altitude to get back to the field but with a dead stick and that little ship I was afraid I might somehow come down in the crowd. I saw two haystacks and a fence. I headed for one stack but saw I was due to strike the fence, so I turned her into stack number two, and when I struck it I was thrown out through the narrow cockpit to the other side of the stack."

Lieut. Sanderson showed no nervousness following his accident. He sat on a hospital bed as surgeons bandaged and administered and without a quiver of hand or voice related his experience. His wife was among the first to reach his side, followed by Lieut. John Corkille, his opponent in the first section of the race, and Rear Admiral Moffett.

"I am sorry I brought you here; I know you were frightened," Lieut. Sanderson told his wife after reassuring her that he was uninjured. "Sure, we are going to the dinner tonight, only I won't dance much," was his answer to her suggestion that he needed rest.

When the surgeons had finished dressing his injuries Lieut. Sanderson left the tent and viewed the remainder of the race from an automobile. His plane, built at an estimated cost of $40,000, was reported as being "pretty nearly a washout," by Lieutenant-Commander Mitscher, in charge of Navy entrants. In the language of the hangars, that means that it was badly wrecked, with its future service in doubt.

Lieut. Sanderson halted his limping march from the hospital tent to give photographers a chance to snap him. He laughed and joked about his appearance, and when Commander Mitscher approached he held out his skinned hands announcing that "this is a hell of a way to return from a race." He said that the race had not bothered him, and he seemed more interested in a navy victory than in any ill effects his collision with the strawstack may have. His sweater was covered with straw and later his nose began to swell. But things like that do not bother the Marine "Leathernecks."

When Lieut. Williams, the Pulitzer Trophy winner, returned to the hangars after his smashing drive, "Sandy" was a member of the reception committee and laughed at his own experience.

YESTERDAY'S CROWD ONE OF GREATEST IN ST. LOUIS HISTORY

Yesterday's assemblage at Lambert-St. Louis Field was one of the largest gatherings in the city's history.

One of the largest previous assemblages of St. Louisans and visitors was the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis, given on three nights at the end of May, 1914, before audiences which covered the slope of Art Hill, in Forest Park. On the night of largest attendance, more than 50,000 persons were believed to have gathered in the paid and free seats and around the sides of the natural auditorium, which was the precursor, on a bigger scale, of the present Municipal Theater.

The Forest Park municipal centennial crowd in the fall of 1909, when dirigibles were successfully demonstrated and when Glenn Curtiss tried not so successfully to demonstrate airplane flying, was a previous throng of unestimated proportions, though much smaller than that of yesterday. Another great gathering was at the formal dedication of the World's Fair in 1903 by President Roosevelt, a year in advance of the actual opening of the Fair.

The most recent great gatherings have been the homecoming of the 138th Infantry in May, 1919, when the welcoming throng was packed along Twelfth boulevard and a parade route extending several miles; and the Centennial fete of 1921, when a memorable jam occurred in Twelfth boulevard, then Twelfth street, in the attempt to present a Lafayette fete there.

TWO WOMEN SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN RUN DOWN IN STREET

One Hit by Mail Truck, Other by (Ill.) Man.

Mrs. Edna James, 59 years old, of 2910 Madison street, suffered a fracture of the skull and probable internal injuries when knocked down as she was crossing McPherson avenue, near Euclid, at 8:45 last night, by an eastbound mail truck driven by John Jennings of 4834A Northland avenue. She is in a critical condition at the City Hospital.

Mrs. Carrie B. Lorenz, 45, of 3160 School street, suffered a fracture of the skull when struck at 7 p. m. by an automobile driven by Albert H. Cain, 39, of Roodhouse, Ill., on Page boulevard, near Grand boulevard. She was taken to St. Louis Baptist Hospital.

Caught After Chase Downtown.

Attracted by cries of "Stop, thief," coming from the Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. store, 700 Washington avenue, Patrolman Samuel Byrnes yesterday afternoon gave chase and arrested in the alley north of Washington avenue at Eighth street, a man who gave his name as Charles Blaker, 34 years old, of 107 North Sixth street. Blaker was taken to police headquarters, where in his pockets were found 26 pearl-handled pocket knives valued at $17.94. These knives were identified by officers of the drug company.

RACE OF 15 PLANES FOR MAIL TROPHY PLEASES CROWD

First Event of Day a Contest of Skill in Flying, Exemplifying the Work Required in Carrying Mail.

In some respects the race of 15 pilots and planes of the United States air mail service for the Detroit News Air Mail trophy, which opened yesterday's program at Lambert-St. Louis Field, was the best event of the meet from the spectators' viewpoint. It was a contest of flying skill rather than of mechanical supremacy. The winner was J. F. Moore, who is stationed at North Platte, Neb. His speed for the 186.42-mile distance was 124.98 miles an hour and his time was 1 hour 29 minutes 29.63 seconds. This distance was 300 kilometers, six times around the triangular course.

It was a "spectators' race" because of the number of contestants—the greatest of any race—because of the close matching of the planes and because the speed, while really a tremendous rush, was not so great as to carry a craft out of sight a few moments after it had come into view.

It was an exemplification of the way in which these pilots carry the mail in fair and foul weather, in darkness or light, regardless of everything but the necessity of getting Uncle Sam's post to its destination on time.

$800 Goes to Winner.

The winner's trophy is a handsome metal figure of a woman, holding aloft in one hand an airplane and driving a soaring eagle, on whose back she stands tiptoe, with reins from the other hand; the eagle rests on a semi-sphere typifying the top of the world. Cash prizes are $800 for the winner, $500 for second place and $200 for third place.

The pilots who "placed," besides Moore were:

D. C. Smith of Omaha, Neb., second, 120.83 miles an hour; one hour, 32 minutes, 34.04 seconds.

P. F. Collins of Cleveland, third, 120.09 miles an hour; one hour, 33 minutes, 8.12 seconds.

Other pilots who finished the race, and their speed, were:

E. M. Allison of Omaha, 118.60; J. H. Knight of Omaha, 118.40; W. C. Hopson of Omaha, 117.49; W. S. Smith of New York, 116.61; E. F. White of North Platte, 116.26; W. D. Williams of Cleveland, 115.30; R. H. Ellis of Salt Lake City, Utah, 113.22; L. H. Garrison of Omaha, 113.17; R. J. Page of Chicago, 111.59.

Three of the entrants were forced down by engine trouble, but made safe landings at the field. Two of these were in the second lap—B. H. Winslow of San Francisco and W. F. Bianchfield of Reno, Nav.—and one was in the home stretch of the last lap—F. R. Yager of Cheyenne, Wyo. One of the original 16 entrants, H. T. (Slim) Lewis of Omaha, was scratched because he spent yesterday flying from Detroit to St. Louis, which was somewhat too much of an advance trip for a racing plane. However, six of the pilots and planes had taken part in the night-flying demonstration Friday; these flyers were Yager, Moore, Knight, Garrison, Allison and Page.

Some in Service Two Years.

While some of the planes flown were virtually new, some had been in service for two years; all are Postoffice Department property. All are standard De Havilland biplanes with 400-horsepower, 12-cylinder, V-type Packard-Liberty motors, which are without superchargers or other alterations such as most army and navy Liberty motors now have.

There was keen rivalry of friendly nature between the pilots, most of whom had had military flying experience and all of whom are young men.

It was a pretty race from the very start, flown under more sunlight than colored the Pulitzer racers, but with a fine condition of visibility in the air. The start was from the southwest corner of the field, close to the spectators' bleacher concourse, and under the same condition of bomb and flag signals as the other race starts.

The take-off was to the far northeast, with intervals of 20 seconds, so that there was more than half a mile between planes at the start. The first one climbed steadily to about 1200 feet altitude, circled to the west and south and shot for the timing line like a bolt from the blue. The others played follow-the-leader and the fifteenth craft was in the air by the time the first one was cutting past the field pylon to start the first lap.

15 Planes Visible at One Time.

The 15 planes were visible at one glance, for a brief moment, in a great corkscrew twist, which was soon resolved into a straight, low line, moving away to the north. As the planes receded each seemed as two horizontal lines—the wings—from which dropped a trailing black plume of smoke.

It was 11:04 a. m. when the first plane crossed the timing line and 11:08 when the last did so. The fifth man out, Knight, who failed to cross the timing line and consequently his first lap was not counted, but he made a seventh lap and received an official timing for the race.

It was just a few minutes after the last was out of sight till the first man was in view again, and it was 11:19 when the first had completed its primary lap. That was the breathless pace of the whole race, which was ended by about 12:45 p. m. Two of the planes were especially easy to recognize by peculiar whistling of their brace wires. All were painted similarly, with yellow fuselages and whitish wings, but there was a little confusion due to varying methods of numbering them.

Varying Methods of Turning.

Scientific precision in turning pylons sometimes by sharp cuts and steep banking and sometimes by wide turns and racing motors was a prime feature in gaining position in the race. Often pilots swung several hundred feet beyond the straight lines of the course to simplify full turns about pylons.

Position, that is, order of finishing laps, did not necessarily indicate a pilot's speed. First off was Yager. Evidently motor trouble bothered him from the start, for he was fourth at the end of the first lap, dropped to eighth at the end of the fifth lap and was not quite able to finish the race.

Next was White, who dropped to seventh by the end. Winner Moore was the third to get away and almost at once took the lead, where he remained with a margin increasing so constantly that after four laps he was virtually out of sight in the north before his runner-up appeared in the west.

Message Delivered in Air.

D. C. Smith followed Moore's lead and example and soon was a safe second in the race. Knight worked up to third place. For fear he would not realize that an extra lap would be necessary for him to overcome his failure to cross the timing line on starting, a unique plan was resorted to.

Lieut. R. L. Maughan, who won last year's Pulitzer race and recently made the record dawn-to-dusk flight, from New York to Wyoming, warmed up the motor of a speedy Curtiss pursuit plane while mechanics grabbed brush and paint and put on the left side ofthe fuselage in tall black letters:

"MAKE SEVENTH LAP."

Maughan easily caught and kept up with Knight during the latter's sixth lap and maneuvered to attract the mail pilot's attention, then waved and pointed to the sign. Knight waved back that he understood and Maughan descended.

Lieut. Maughan had had time after going up and before warning Knight to perform a few stunts over the heads of the crowd.

Among the remaining racers there was considerable shifting of position, a place or two to the lap, but they ran principally in two bunches, well behind the speeding leaders. Their tail-end contests had the elements of races all save the fact that a watcher couldn't forget that faster planes were somewhere ahead. Yet there was a difference of only 13.39 miles an hour between the speed of the winner and that of the slowest flyer.

Moore flashed across the finish line at 12:32 and there was time for him to soar high, turn and land before his follower, D. C. Smith, finished, at 12:37. Knight, flying third, but fourth in time, was more than two minutes behind D. C. Smith when he came along to make his extra lap.

Consistent maintenance of flying speed marked this race as other races. Moore, to win, varied his speed only .85 of a mile in the last four laps and 2.27 miles throughout the race, having started a trifle slow. There was a variation of only .37 of a mile in D. C. Smith's speed and of .8 of a mile in Collins' movement.

Moore Has Flown 190,000 Miles.

Winner Moore is one of the pilots who had World War training. He is 26 years old, and has been flying since he was 20, having become a Lieutenant in the air service early in this country's participation in the war. After there was no more war flying he entered the air mail service, and since then he has flown 190,000 miles to deliver letters by the latest method, chiefly between Omaha and Cheyenne. Once on a flight he was forced to land at Coalville, Utah. One of those whom he met in this adventure was a girl. She is now Mrs. Moore, and her husband maintains there is romance in a flyer's life. Fellow pilots, with whom he is popular, call him "Dinty." His native home is Hale Center, Tex.

D. C. Smith, who made second place was a student at The Principia, a private school here, when he left in 1917 to become an army flyer. After the war he, too, joined the air mail service.

The mail flyers plan to go back to their stations by air today. Theirs is a happy, though risky, life and they are paid about $4500 a year, working usually about three days a week, and being ready in between times to make private flights for persons desirous of getting somewhere in a hurry.

One of the remarks of the race announcer over the loud speaker, during a lull in this race was: "Look at all the flying you get for a 2-cent stamp." This brought a general laugh. Again he said: "All those in favor of air mail for St. Louis, cheer." The answer indicated that thousands of St. Louisans want this service. "'Ray!" the announcer echoed.

The night mail flying demonstration Friday was to further the interest in obtaining this service, which the Air Board is working for.

First Year for Mail Pilots.

This was the first year that air mail pilots flew for the Detroit News Air Mail trophy. Last year it was flown by army pilots at the air meet at Selfridge Field, near Detroit. The 1922 winner was Lieut. E. H. Nelson, whose speed was 105 miles an hour, compared with the approximate 125 miles an hour of Moore yesterday.

WANTED
A $10,000 MAN

A well-known, long-established, Southwestern firm is seeking a manager for its St. Louis branch. The position is largely one of sales management and sales promotion, having to do with a staple product nationally known and nationally advertised.

The man we want must have superior selling ability. He can't manage sales without knowing how to sell himself. He also must be an executive and an organizer—able to select good salesmen, to stimulate them with enthusiasm for the product being sold, as well as their job of selling; able also to keep that enthusiasm alive and to inspire his men to work hard first, last and all the time. To do this the man we want must be a conscientious worker himself getting on the job early and staying late.

We prefer a man having a wide and substantial acquaintance in St. Louis. But this is not positively essential. The right man will get the position irrespective of his present residence.

Naturally none but well-educated men need apply. Do not hesitate to answer this advertisement if you feel that you fill the requirements. But do not waste our time or yours unless you know you have had the experience and possess the mental equipment that would justify an interview. The man we select will earn from $7000 to $10,000 a year.

In applying, please state your qualifications fully, including age, experience, present position, residence and particularly the record you have made in business thus far. All answers will be treated as strictly confidential.

Send replies to Box K-129, St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Helium-Inflated Airship to Participate in Aerial Demonstrations There and Return Tonight.

The TC-3, helium-inflated airship, is scheduled to leave Scott Field early this morning for Kansas City, where it will participate in an aerial demonstration today.

GOT BACK IN TIME FOR RACE

Rear Admiral Moffett Returned Friday Night After Trip in ZR-1.

Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, returned to St. Louis Friday night from Lakehurst, N. J., following his flight in the ZR-1.

Admiral Moffett went aboard the ZR-1 at Lambert-St. Louis Field last Tuesday morning and became a passenger on its return trip to show his confidence in the giant craft.

Shortly after his arrival at the home hangar of the ZR-1 at Lakehurst, Admiral Moffett took a train for St. Louis to witness the Pulitzer race yesterday. Following the sweeping navy victory Admiral Moffett declared he had been more than repaid for his return trip here.

BECK MENTIONED AS SUCCESSOR TO HARVEY

Beveridge and Warren Also Backed by Friends for London Ambassadorship.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6. — The names of many eligibles for appointment as American Ambassador to the Court of St. James to succeed Col. Harvey are being pressed upon President Coolidge. The President is keeping his own counsel.

Persons said to be in close touch with President Coolidge are convinced that the Chief Executive has not made up his mind concerning Harvey's successor and is in no hurry to do so. A report that the post had been offered to Elihu Root could not be confirmed and was discredited by administration officials. While conceding that Root's selection would be a happy one, officials pointed out that the advanced age of the New Yorker is a bar to his acceptance.

One name prominently mentioned is that of James M. Beck, Solicitor General of the United States, whose selection doubtless would be well received in London. Beck is understood to be a potential candidate for the post.

Former Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana has been suggested for the place by some of his friends, but other friends are convinced he would not accept. Paul Cravath of New York is listed as an active candidate, but his chances are not given high rating here.

Charles Beecher Warren of Michigan, former Ambassador to Japan and more recently one of the two American members of the commission which worked the solution of the Mexican problem, and Frank O. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois, are also backed for the post. Friends of Warren, doubt whether he would accept the post, and Lowden is entertaining a presidential bee.

It is realized by advisers of President Coolidge that he is sure to encounter political trouble if he makes a selection from men active in politics. For this reason the selection of a man from the diplomatic service would occasion no surprise. In this connection the name of Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher is mentioned. Fletcher is said to be seeking the transfer from Brussels to London.

Joseph C. Grew, Minister to Switzerland, whose work at the Lausanne conference attracted much attention, also is a possible choice. Others being suggested are William Phillips, Under-Secretary of State, who has long been in the diplomatic service, and J. Butler Wright, third Assistant Secretary of State, who has served at the American Embassy in London.

Victor J. Miller former President of the Police Board, will address the men's Bible class of the North Presbyterian Church, 2055 St. Louis avenue, at 10 a. m. today. This will be the first of a series of addresses to be given on the first Sunday of each month during the winter.

The World Is Rapidly Shrinking

Distance is purely a matter of time. The airplane that goes two hundred miles an hour shrinks the distance to Chicago from 8 hours to an hour and a half. A few years hence will find the fugthermost points of the globe our next-door neighbors. More neighbors mean greater competition in the race for success.

You can't afford any handicap, especially that of defective vision, which impairs your efficiency, undermines your health, and in many instances causes physical suffering in the form of eye-strain headaches.

Dr. F. J. Guilbault

Over 80,000 persons in the past 19 years have found better vision, better health and freedom from annoying symptoms of defective sight by means of my properly prescribed glasses.

Feeling Badly?
IRON STARVATION
of the blood, perhaps, and your worn-out, exhausted nerves need to be revitalized.
Nuxated Iron, 69c
For this purpose there is nothing better than Organic Iron, not metallic iron which people usually take, but pure Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. One dose of Nuxated Iron is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one-half quart of spinach, one quart green vegetables or half a dozen apples. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat.
Over four million people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich the blood.
Nature Put Iron for Your Blood in the husks of grains and the peels and skins of fruits and vegetables.
But modern methods of cookery throw all these things away—hence the alarming increase in anemia—iron starvation of the blood, with its never ending train of symptoms of nervous irritability, general weakness, fatigue, disturbed digestion, headaches, pains across the back, etc.
Either go back to Nature or take Organic Iron — Nuxated Iron—to help enrich your blood and revitalize your worn-out, exhausted nerves MONDAY, 69c.

Old Father Time Himself

A REMARKABLE CHARACTER

ONE of the most remarkable characters in the State of Mississippi is "Uncle" Jack Terry, whose picture is shown above, representing "Old Father Time," whose venerable appearance he greatly resembles.

His home is in the eastern end of Union County, and he probably holds the longevity record of North Mississippi, having been born in 1812, the year Napoleon declared war on Russia, making him now over 108 years old.

"Uncle" Jack Terry was converted at the age of 99 and baptized by the Reverend S. B. Gullett of Blue Mountain, and when he was well over the century mark, this venerable Baptist brother used to be a regular attendant at the Midsummer revival meetings in his community.

Mr. Terry was born in Lawrence County, Ala., where he married, and he and his wife lived together for 63 years. His daughter is now over 70 years old. These old people live together amid the beautiful surroundings and picturesque scenery of the Mississippi backwoods, where his daughter still carries on the old-time home industry of hand-carding and spinning the wool for her dresses and his clothes.

Mr. Terry retains remarkable vitality for a man of his years, and is always glad to meet visitors, with whom he converses with much interest. He was in the Confederate Army for two years, and when over 50 years old he fought at the Battle of Chickamauga. His grandchildren are greatly interested in the stories he tells of his army days.

So remarkable a character could not fail to attract the attention of the motion picture producers, and a camera man was sent to Mr. Terry's home, to record the history of his daily life and show him on the film for the benefit of the patrons of the movies. In this film he will shortly appear as one of the principal characters of a cast consisting almost entirely of old folks over 100 years old.

According to the 1920 census, many people in the U. S. are over 100 years old. Mr. Terry is one of those so recorded. His health is excellent, his mind is clear, and his memory is good.

To a visitor at his home, Mr. Terry authorized the publication of the statement given herewith, in regard to his continued use of Thedford's Black-Draught.

Mr. Terry Says:

"I have taken
THEDFORD'S
BLACK-DRAUGHT
for years; in fact it is the only medicine I take at all, for it's all that does me good.

"I am a firm believer in Thedford's Black-Draught Liver Medicine, and have been for years."

The following is a letter of great interest to the afflicted public:

St. Louis, Missouri, September 20, 1923.

Dr. C. Matthew Coe,
501 Pine Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir:

Your favor of recent date at hand, and it is with a great deal of pleasure that I assure you I have entirely recovered from the treatment and am absolutely cured. When I consider that I suffered from piles for nine years, and that you entirely cured me in three weeks without my losing an hour's time from my work as salesman, it seems almost miraculous. Had I known how simple, and yet how thoroughly efficient, your wonderful treatment was I certainly would not have postponed placing myself under your care.

I also wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the very liberal terms you made me, and to assure you the results obtained were worth many times the more than reasonable charges you make.

With kindest regards, I beg to remain,

Very truly yours,
H H Noland

MR. NOLAND'S CASE IS ONLY ONE OF HUNDREDS THAT COME TO ME — GET CURED — AND GOES AWAY HAPPY — ALTHO THEY HAD SUFFERED MANY YEARS—IN THE BELIEF THEY COULD NOT GET CURED.

Can any person living in St. Louis or vicinity, who is afflicted with Piles, Fistula, Fissure or any rectal trouble, be fair with themselves, and go on suffering. Endangering their general health beyond repair. Waiting for complications to force them to seek a cure at a great cost, aside from the risks that go with hospital operations, taking chloroform, ether, etc.

NO, DON'T DO THAT.

Come and let me cure you as I did Mr. Noland, whose letter I reproduce in this advertisement. He lost no time from his business. If you delay, and then have to go to the hospital, the cost will be: your time, from three to four weeks, besides about $250 for the doctor's fee and hospital expenses. Why spend so much money? Why take the chances? My treatment is mild. My charges reasonable. My cures are reliable, permanent and guaranteed.

PILES Cured Without the KNIFE

No Cutting. No Chloroform. No Hospital. No Danger. No Loss of Time. TELL YOUR FRIENDS. You and they need the right kind of treatment. Treatment that CURES.

Why go on suffering when a positive, guaranteed cure is within your reach? Remember, I give consultations and make examinations at my office FREE of charge and give consultation by mail. Call or write—it will pay you.

15 Killed in Fire in Russia.
By the Associated Press.

LEMBERG, Oct. 6.—Fifteen Jews were killed and 20 injured in a fire which broke out in the Jewish quarters of Zhitomir, Russia, as a result of the explosion of a quantity of ammunition which was stored in that district, according to reports received here.

The Bolshevists attributed the fire to counter-revolutionists who desired to destroy the ammunition stores.

WHEAT EXPORT PLAN RUNS INTO OBSTACLE

Finance Corporation Unable to Sell Grain Without Gilt-Edged Security.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Plans to form an export wheat corporation, to sell to foreign trade associations, struck a snag today when President Coolidge discussed the problem of farm aid with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Frank W. Mondell of the War Finance Corporation.

The President was told by Mondell that the Finance Corporation had no right, under the law to sell wheat without gilt-edged security, both domestic and foreign, and that even the indorsement of foreign Governments would be looked upon with suspicion. Secretary Wallace, who is urging the plan, has not given up hope, despite the opposition of the War Finance Corporation and of foreign wheat exporters, who see in the proposal a severe blow to their business.

The export wheat corporation plan is the compromise between Secretary Wallace and bankers from the Minneapolis Federal reserve district who urged revival of the United States Grain corporation to handle export and domestic business. Senator Borah said today that he believed the purchase of wheat by the Government for export purposes would aid in solving the wheat problem and that the Government probably would not have to purchase more than 25,000 or 30,000 bushels to stabilize the market.

Eugene Mayer Jr., head of the War Finance Corporation, Mondell and a representative of the Department of Agriculture left here tonight for Chicago, where they will consult Monday with business men and wheat growers. They will urge bankers to support co-operative marketing associations.

President Coolidge was urged today by Representative Dickinson (Rep., Iowa), representing the House members of the farm bloc, to advocate a plan to develop the inland waterways of the country to further cheap transportation of farm products. Other reforms in legislation called for by the "bloc" include repeal of the so-called "guarantee" clause of the Esch-Cummins law and the clause creating the Railway Labor Board. The "bloc" plan calls for a restoration of power by State railway commissions to pass on intra-state rates.

As a means of developing inland water transportation, especially on the Mississippi River, Dickinson urged repeal of the provision of the transportation act which enables railroads to make rates lower than water rates when the rail line comes into competition with water routes.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6—Repudiation by the British Government of the claim of the owner of the schooner Henry L. Marshall, seized as a rum runner outside the three mile limit, that the craft was of British registry, was disclosed in a brief filed today by the Government in the Supreme Court.

MISS CU

Miss Stirling Loses 3-2 to Chicago Girl

New Champion Was Two Down to Three-Time Former Champion, After 18 Holes, but Finished Strong

By the Associated Press.

RYE, N. Y., Oct. 6.—The national women's gold championship, so long the property of the East and South, went West today when Miss Edith Cummings, plucky Chicagoan, triumphed over Miss Alexa Stirling of New York, a native Georgian, who had held the title three times. The Western girl won by a margin of 3 up and 2 to play after a tense and brilliant struggle in the 36-hole final round match at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club.

It was through a fine display of grit along with brilliant golf that carried the Chicago girl, a member of the Onwentsia Country Club, to victory over Miss Stirling, who has been known as America's most consistent woman player. In the morning round, when play was alternately ragged and perfect, it seemed that the greater experience of the three-time champion would play its part. After losing the first hole of the day, Miss Stirling settled down and soon took the lead.

Miss Cummings appeared a bit nervous as they went to the eighteenth green in the morning round, but her shots up to the green were well made. She had a chance to win this hole by sinking a short putt, but she couldn't make it and they adjourned for lunch with Miss Cummings two down.

Miss Cummings Comes Back.

Came then the afternoon round and the wise-acres were heard to say that Miss Stirling would come through for her fourth title. They halved the first hole with par fours, then came the great effort that resulted in the crowning of a new champion.

Miss Cummings with par golf, won five holes in a row, and became three up. Miss Stirling, try as she would, could not equal the golf that her opponent played on these holes. They halved the seventh and Miss Cummings perhaps carelessly, lost the eighth. The ninth was halved.

Then the last nine. The tenth and eleventh were wretchedly played. Either player, with even fair shooting could have won the tenth hole which is short, a par three. Both took fives. The eleventh found both sliding hither and yon on the green. Both missed short putts for wins and it was halved. Likewise the twelfth. Here Miss Cummings' second shot was in a brook, but she was on in four and down in two putts. Miss Stirling, with a dubbed chip, could do no better.

The thirteenth went to Miss Stirling with a well played par four and she was but one down. Miss Cummings overpitching. Par figures won the fourteenth and the fifteenth for Miss Cummings. On both holes Miss Stirling dubbed iron shots. When they halved the sixteenth with fives the shouts of the gallery in applauding the new champion were carried by the wind to the club house and there, too, a shout went up.

Winner Carried Horseshoe.

Dexter Cummings, brother of the new champion, himself the intercollegiate titleholder, was a nervous witness of the match. When Miss Stirling won the thirteenth and was but one down with a good chance to even the match and go on to another title, Dexter called old Joe Horgan, the veteran caddie who carried his sister's golf bag to one side. Eagerly they looked down into the bottom of the bag. Then they smiled. The horseshoe that Miss Cummings put there the first of the week remained.

Miss Cummings has entered five national championship tournaments. In one she was eliminated in the first round, in another she was defeated in the second round. In her third she failed to qualify. Last year she went as far as the semi-final at White Sulphur Springs but was eliminated by Miss Glenna Collett, of Providence, who won the title.

In the qualifying round of this tournament the Chicago girl, with an 89, was tied for third place with Miss Collett, and Mrs. R. H. Barlow. In the first round, she defeated Mrs. Quentin Feltner, five up and four to play. In the second round Miss Audrey Faust of St. Louis was her victim, by 7 and 6. Miss Edith Leitch of England lost to her six and four in the third round and in the semifinal she won from Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck of Philadelphia, one up in 20 holes. Mrs. Vanderbeck had defeated Miss Collett in the round before the semi-finals.

AMES' AERIAL ATTACK FORCES GOPHERS TO LIMIT TO WIN, 20-17

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 6.—Minnesota ran into a flock of flying footballs today in the guise of a varied aerial attack executed by Iowa State (Ames) team of mid-season polish, and the Gophers had difficulty in squeezing out a 20 to 17 victory.

The Gophers' line gave victory to Minnesota, for in virtually all other respects the Iowans outplayed and outfought Coach Spaulding's men, even when Capt. Martinzau, his injured hand in splints, was sent in to pep up his men in the second half.

Washington Eleven Wins From Miners

Touchdown in Final Period Breaks 0—0 Tie and Gives Victory to the Local Team, 7—0.

By Arthur Schneff.

Aided and abetted by a stroke of good luck in the fourth quarter, Washingtgon University's football eleven snatched a last-minute victory from the Missouri School of Mines team in the first game of the season yesterday afternoo. at Francis Field. The final score was 7 to 0.

For three periods the doughty Miners played Coach Wimberley's outfit to a standstill. And then came the "break." An exchange of punts gave Rolla the ball on her own five-yard line. Gabler, whose kicking had been beyond reproach in the earlier periods of the game, was called upon to boot the ball out of danger. But in the crucial moment the best he could do was a 20-yard kick, which gave Washington the ball on the 25-yard line.

A series of line plnges by Sammy Floun put the ball within a foot of the visitors' goal line, and on the next play Walsh carried it over the only touchdown of the game. Levy's drop-kick was good for an extra point.

Washington Goal Is Threatened.

The Miners showed to their best advantage in the first period when they rushed the ball to the enemy's 10-yard line. With the ball in midfield, Left end Kemper circled right end for a gain of 25 yards. Tucker plunged through the line for seven yards, but on the next play Fisher fumbled and Washington recovered the ball on her own 10-yard line.

Rolla threatened again in the second period when the passing combination of Nolan to Player completely bewildered Washington and carried the ball to the 20-yard line. Washington gained the ball when a Rolla pass was grounded behind the goal line.

The two teams were evenly matched and it was anybody's game until the final whistle sounded. Both elevens displayed the same kind of attack, relying largely on off-tackle plunges and occasional passes for their gains. Rolla, however, displayed the more diversified attack, and several trick plays were good for long gains.

Few Attacking Plays Used.

The Washington attack was monotonously unvaried, and several promising rallies were wasted when a change in tactics might have gained a score. One of the Washington players remarked after the game that off-tackle plunges were called so often that the Miners had probably learned the signals for the play.

The real difference between the two teams was in Levy's kicking. The husky lineman averaged well over 45 yards, and it was his clever placement of a punt which directly led to the Miners finding themselves on their own 5-yard line when the fatal "break" occurred.

800 Dead-Game Rooters Watch Cardinals Defeat Cubs 5 to 2

Eddie Dyer Hurls Dependably In Checking the Chicago Team in Semi-Final Appearance of the Rickeymen — Season Closes Today With Double-Header.

By Joseph F. Holland,

Eddie Dyer pitched a rather capable game against the Chicago Cubs yesterday and, with the able assistance of Heine Mueller, presented Branch Rickey with a victory. If honor attached to the achievement, Eddie and Heine were unable to perceive it. The game apparently was a private exhibition limited to about 800 close, cold personal friends of the Cardinals who cheered not, neither did they "razz." The final score was 5 to 2.

Weather that was suited to football prevailed and it was too cold to work up any enthusiasm. Even when Mueller tore off his 90-yard run which baseball recognizes as a triple, the "crowd" received it with little acclaim. Those in the stands and bleachers were almost outnumbered by the players on the field. Killefer used 16 Cubs and Rickey countered with an even dozen Cardinals.

Vic Aldridge, second to Alexander as the Cubs' leading pitcher, was the victim of Dyer's pitching and Mueller's triple. He got through the first and second innings without difficulty, but in the third an error, singles by Smith and Bottomley and Mueller's triple scored three runs and decided the game.

Victor Pitched Keen Ball.

Aldridge retired at the end of the sixth with five runs charged against him. Victor Keen finished out the game with a team of recruits behind him and succeeded in holding the Cardinals scoreless.

Dyer allowed 10 hits, one more than the Cardinals made, but he had the rare ability to scatter them. He was materially assisted by the fact that Cliff Heathcote hit into a double play in the midst of a fourth inning rally. That was one time when the Cubs loomed up as dangerous, but Eddie escaped with only one run charged against him. Keen's double and a single by Hartnett accounted for the final Chicago run in the ninth.

Season Ends Today.

A double-header will conclude the season today. The first game starts at 1:45 o'clock and Jess Haines will face Grover Alexander. Johnny Stuart will pitch against the recruit Wheeler in the second game.

The Hot Stove League will meet for the first time Monday and prepare for the return of Sisler and Shocker and the retention or disposal of Rogers Hornsby.

Tigers Outplay Teachers 10 to 0

Score Fails to Represent Missouri's Superiority Over the Springfield Men.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 6.—Missouri defeated the Springfield Teachers College eleven here this afternoon, 10 to 0. All Tiger points were scored in the third period. Missouri outrushed the visitors, outpunted and outpassed them but had difficulty in crossing their goal line.

Fowler scored a field goal and a touchdown. His field goal came in the first few minutes of the third quarter. Ball had reeled off a 25-yard return of Galloway's kick-off, and the Tigers, with Bond and Fowler alternating at smashing the line, walked down to the Teachers' 12-yard line. There they were unable to gain, and Fowler kicked from placement on the 17-yard line.

After an exchange of punts, Keller broke through the Springfield defense to block Cherry's punt and recoverd the ball on the Bears' 15-yard line. Bond and Fowler again lugged the ball at the Teachers' forward wall to the one-yard line and Fowler carried it across.

The Teachers only once really menaced the Tigers, when in the first period they were within 20 yards of the Missouri goal, but were held on downs.

KIRKWOOD HIGH DEFEATS YEATMAN ELEVEN, 19-3

Kirkwood High sprang a surprise yesterday when it defeated Yeatman at Francis Field by a score of 19 to 3. Kirkwood followed the ball on every play and took advantage of three fumbles by its opponent to push over its three touchdowns. Hannegan's field goal was the only score made by the North Siders.

Yeatman, with a veteran backfield, was touted as a strong contender for High School League honors this season. A tendency to fumble marred otherwise good team-work.

St. Louis Scores Six Touchdowns in Beating Arkansas Eleven, 39-0

Ramacciotti Plays Brilliantly on the Offense, Crossing Enemy's Goal Line Three Times—Blue and White Team Strong.

By James Gould,
Referee of the St. Louis University-Arkansas Game.

That hard-driving St. Louis University football machine, working smoothly, ran over the Arkansas Aggies, at High School Field, yesterday, crushing the Farmers by a 39—0 count. The Arkansas lads were outclessed from the first whistle. As a matter of fact, playing their first game of the season, they lacked cohesion and, apparently, could not have scored against the St. Louisans had the quarters been 12 hours instead of 12 minutes each. In only one quarter did they put up a stiff defense. That was the third when a safety gave the Bills two points for their only count.

SUMMARY.

Touchdowns — Ramacciotti 3; Hannegan, Eggler, Schaeffering. Goal after touchdown—Schaeffering. Safety—Palmer (Arkansas).

Substitutions: Halloran for Amerel; Quan for Hannegan, Betts for Geraghty; Luepke for Higl; Kalkman for Simon; Westerhof for McCarthy; Hannegan for Quan; Schaeffering for Eggler.

Officials: Gould (West Point); referee, Klein (Missouri); umpire, Murphy (C. B. C.); head linesman. Time of quarters—12 minutes.

Ramacciotti, the new Billiken half-back, was a whirlwind on the offense and was the first to count, the touchdown resulting from a line plunge, about midway through the first quarter. No goal was kicked and there was no further scoring in the period. In the second quarter, this brilliant player counted twice, tearing off a pair of long runs which led up to the goal-posts of the Aggies. Though the Bill line held well, both goals were missed and the half ended with the score 18—0.

Beginning the second half, St. Louis made several substitutions which, because of the splendid reserve material, made little difference in the quality of play. Held to two points in the third quarter, an Arkansas back being downed behind his own goal line, the Billikens started a fine offensive in the final period and, scoring three touchdowns and kicking goal after one of them, added 19 points to their tally and made their total 39—a good afternoon's work.

Billikens Further Advanced.

There was every indication of power in the St. Loius attack. The beef is there and also other essentials needed for a real scoring combination. In Hannegan, McConachie, Ramacciotti, Eggler and Schaeffering the Bills have a shifty backfield and, in action, they are pretty to watch.

The big difference in the teams was that the Bills knew their stuf and how to put it over, while the Aggies constantly delayed and when they did start their play went nowhere with them.

The Aggies are one of four teams representing agricultural institution under State endowment in Arkansas. This one came from Jonesboro and was coached by Dandelet, a former Valparaiso player, who came here two years ago, leading a team which gave the Billikens a tough fight. Dandelet admitted he was stepping out of his class in tackling St. Louis but thought the experience gained would do his battered charges a lot of good. The battered charges expressed no opinion after the game but they were mighty tired young men.

One of the most pleasing features of the contest was the clean fighting. Both teams battled hard, but, in only a few instances was a penalty deserved and awarded. Once, the Bills failed to get seven men on the line of scrimmage on a shift and there were one or two offside offenses, due in each case to over-anxiety.

In seasons past, the Bills have always possessed a splendid defense but have not especially shone on attack. This season, the offense is highly developed under Head Coach Danny Savage with the defense still Gibraltar-like as all Rademacher coached lines are.

Fine Outlook for St. Louis U.

Unless the Billikens are beset with injuries this year, they should end the season with a glorious record. It is, perhaps, too much to ask to have them victorious over Notre Dame in the Thanksgiving Day game, but the followers of the Blue and White may be assured that the Bills will give the Missouri Tigers a great battle. The team is well coached, they play hard and clean football and they know what to do and how and when to do it. Individual play is, in all cases, subordinated to teamwork. From all indications, thus far, the Bills should have a season which will bring back memories of Eddie Cochems and his record-breaking crew of former years.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 6.—The scheduled football game between Washington and Jefferson and Washington and Lee was declared forfeited to Washington and Jefferson by a score of 1 to 0 this afternoon when Washington and Lee refused to play against Charles West, negro halfback on the W. and J. team. Giants and Yanks, With Virtually The Same Battle Front as in 1922, Will Start World Series Wednesday

Despite the McGrawmen's Two Victories Over the American Leaguers, Huggins' Team Will Be Favorite—New Attendance and Receipts Record Likely.

By John E. Wray,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

One of the most interesting allegations out of that incubator of canards, the metropolis of New York, is that which has it that the Yankees are favorites to beat the Giants, in the nineteenth world's series to be held under national agreement auspices, beginning Oct. 10.

Although the same contenders will take the field, with the same personnel as formerly with practically no exceptions as far as last year's encounter was concerned, and under the identical leadership of 1922, and notwithstanding both easily distanced their fields this campaign in the pennant races, we are asked to believe that the Yankees are going to reverse the verdicts of two previous campaigns.

Nor will this be the only amazing feature about the struggle which will see the 60,000 capacity Yankee Stadium baptised in inter-league conflict next Wednesday. Of more importance to the pockets of the gentlemen who live by baseball commerce and call it sport is the fact that all records in attendance and cash seem destined to fall—the million-dollar world's series millenium seems about to arrive. This is because the series will be conducted in parks that have been enlarged to the point where the Polo Grounds can take care of 55,000 cash customers and the Yankee grounds of 60,000 or more.

Top Seat Price Is $6.60.

Not to be overlooked in this connection is the fact that the increased capacity has been accompanied by no decreases in the overhead to the man who wants to view the show. He must pay double price for his look-in and in some cases triple. The top price, as last year, is still $6.60.

At which point we may pause to remark that baseball has profiteered on its customers quite as reprehensibly as have some of our best hated retailers.

But still, setting aside the miracle money aspect of the show, making the Yanks the favorites is the surprise of the forthcoming event.

Out here in the Middle West there is an abiding faith that the Giants have John McGraw and the old "in-sides." Or, if they haven't the stuff fiddlestrings are made of, John will build it into his men. McGraw is the only known psychologist who can make a rabbit bite a bulldog. He can "hop" cripples into world's championship form. He can inflate them with an unbeatable ego and shock the foe into defeat by the transformation. Every baseball unit McGraw possesses, his admirers say, gives up its last ounce of value under his magic touch.

Facts About the Third All-New York Series

World's Series Rivals—New York Giants, John McGraw, manager; New York Yankees, Miller Huggins, manager.

Favorites—Yankees, at 7 to 5.

Opening Game—Oct. 10 at 2 p. m.

Home Team—Yankees; it will be a world's series baptism for the new stadium.

Prices—From $1.10 to $6.60.

Estimated Crowd—For the opening game, over 60,000; for first four games, 205,000.

Estimated Receipts—First four games, $820,000.

Players' Shares — Winners $5580, losers $4184 each; estimated.

Second Game — At Polo Grounds, with remaining games alternating each day.

Previous Series—The Giants won from the Yanks in 1921 and 1922. Last year the best the Yanks could do was to tie one game.

Opening Batteries—Nehf and Snyder, Giants; Jones and Schang, Yankees (probable in both cases.)

BABE RUTH AND JOHN McGRAW

Ruth's remarkably improved play this year is relied upon by the Yanks to continue during the world's series. Had Ruth, during the 1922 series, played up to this year's average, the Giants would have hard going. McGraw is credited with being the brains and the inspiration that has lifted a seemingly in ferior club to victory in the last two world's championships.

McGraw's Faculty for Inspiring Men Will Prove Vital Factor, Admirers Say

Per contra, the McGraw idolators say, scrutinize Huggins' record. They call him "rabbit" and there must be a reason for it. They say he lacks inspiration, control of his men, or the qualities of leadership that uplift the performance of his subalterns. His pawns weaken under fire instead of growing, and he has no fire to blow hot on fainting spirits.

Furthermore he is not the "brains" of the club as is McGraw, who lays down the law and even every play when his pitchers are on the hill. The morale of the Hugmen deflates during the supreme test; chests cave in instead of pushing out and daubers drop.

At least that's the National League pessimism regarding Huggins.

And yet instead of the National Leaguers rushing to back up the view, the American League admirers are inundating the market with money and the takers have not yet made their appearance in heavy bankroll divisions.

The American League followers have had two obsessions. One is that the league as a whole has always been and still is stronger than the National. Consequently the corollary follows that its pennant winner is or ought to be stronger than the National League's leader.

The other obsession is that when Babe Ruth goes bad the entire Yankee team is bad.

Flag Won by Wide Margin.

Consider the effect of these two viewpoints on this year's race. The American League winners surpassed their nearest rivals by 17 games, one of the widest margins in history. The National League had to fight up to within a few games of the finish before it won.

There we have the Yanks much the best team in a better league, performing like an unbeatable aggregation. The Giants simply scooted in by virtue of a long and early lead.

Then as to Ruth. That great player has reversed his work of last season. Not only did he perform like a world beater, but he is behaving like one.

Admittedly Ruth's collapse in the world's series, following a wretched season caused the Yankees' defeat in the final championship struggle. The revived Babe this year will lift the club to victory.

That's the fans' psychology. Many aver that it is also the psychology of the Yankee players. Doubtless it plays a big part in the establishing of the Yanks in the favorite's place.

A New Pitching Asset.

Aside from this view of the matter there are physical reasons why the Yankees are at least better equipped to win than last year. To begin with they have a left handed pitcher, one of the best in the game—Herb Pennock. Last year they had no left-hander capable of facing the Giants. Pennock will be one of the main reliances against the Giants and Huggins expects to win at least one game with him and to use him twice if the series is prolonged.

Again, there is the undeniably improved hitting and playing of Ruth and of Ward, one of last year's world series disappointments. The team, as a whole, likewise, has dropped the night owl habits that last year drew them a lecture and reprimand from Commissioner Landis in midseason.

Giants' New Material.

On the other hand the Giants have gained little over last year. Bentley, a star with Baltimore, has been an in-and-outer as a pitcher, but a fine hitter. O'Connell, the $75,000 addition to the outfield, has not even made good. Groh is older and slower, and the team's pitching has been very ragged.

This is the sort of comparison that one must make to get the viewpoint that the Yankees are justifiably made favorites for the series. Undoubtedly American League supporters are cocky about the team.

But, old baseball heads are wagging at it all and saying, "Watch John McGraw when the fight gets hot; he'll have the Yanks' tails dragging in the mud."

Right or wrong, the Giants will probably not be beaten for want of insides, whether McGraw furnishes them or not.

Approach Putt Most Important Shot in Golf, Gene Sarazen Says

Each Player Must Select and Develop His Own Style on the Green — The Careful, Deliberate Man Usually Makes the Best Putter.

By Gene Sarazen,
Former Open Golf Champion.

What is the most important shot in golf? What stroke is most helpful in reducing your high score?

Put these questions to 50 golfers and the majority will undoubtedly reply that the drive is the most important shot in the game.

No doubt the drive is the most spectacular of all strokes. Certainly the long tee shot, straight down the line will do wonders toward making the following strokes successful but I would not say the drive is the most important shot.

Nor will I admit that the mashie pitch outranks all others as a means of getting a low score. The mashie is a mighty useful club and a great deal of time should be spent practicing with it, but from my experience the most useful stroke is the approach putt.

The fortunate golfer who can run 'em up close to the cup so that he will not require an extra putt is the one who will bring satisfactory scores.

There is no other stroke so difficult to master as the approach putt. There are pretty well defined rules for almost every shot in golf except the putt, especially the long approach putt.

To approach accurately is a matter of eye and hand control. Only long practice will enable the player to perform on the green with the proper touch, for after all long putting is mostly touch, the knack of imparting the right amount of speed to the ball.

Use Your Own Style.

The individual physical traits of golfers are best brought out in putting. The nervous person will seldom become accurate on the green, because true putting requires steady hands.

The impulsive individual also will find putting particularly hard as a quick jerky motion with the putter is about the best way to keep the ball out of the cup. It is the deliberate person who makes the best putter. He is usually the one who studies out the line and takes his time before sending the ball on its journey.

My advice to all who have trouble on the green is to be natural. Rather than imitate the style of some star endeavor to develop your own way of handling the putter. I am short in build and consequently it would be foolish for me to recommend my putting style to a tall person.

Jim Barnes, because of his great height, takes a wide straddle with his left foot well advanced. That is Jim's natural way of putting, but it certainly would not be suited for a short individual.

After determining the most natural stance about the only thing to remember is not to lift the club head far from the ground. When making a long putt the clubhead should be brought forward with a motion of the wrists and at no time should the club be raised far off the ground.

Concentrate on Putting.

Putts are generally spoiled when the club is raised too high, a fault that will deflect the club from the line of putt.

It might be a useful suggestion to try standing well over the ball when putting rather than some distance from it. I have found this position gives one a better line and is also more comfortable.

But after all, accurate putting is mostly a case of faithful practice. The stroke is not as showy as other shots but to the one who is anxious to reduce his scores the quickest I would say, "concentrate on your putting, especially the long ones."

MUNICIPAL SOCCERITES WILL MEET TOMORROW

Iowa Smothers Knox.

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Oct. 6.—Iowa won its second pre-Conference game here today, downing Knox, 45 to 3. The reconstructed Hawkeye eleven was too much for the Siwash squad and the visitors threatened only twice, scoring only on a place kick, which came near the end of the contest. Iowa's eleven worked with greater smoothness than a week ago and easily overcame the opposition offered by the Illinois squad.

O'FALLON PARK TENNIS CHAMPION BEATEN BY BELL, YEATMAN STAR

William Bell, Yeatman High School tennis star, eliminated Champion Joe Hibshmann in straight sets in the O'Fallon Park Special Cup tournament yesterday. The scores were 7—5, 7—5, 6—4. Hibshmann held one leg on the cup which must be won three times to become the permanent possession of a player.

As a result of his unexpected victory, Bell will play Herbert Berreshien for the cup today at 2:30 o'clock. Bereshien entered the final round by defeating William Pape, 6—0, 6—2, 8—6.

Harry Shaberg and William Owens will play for the consolation championship at the same time.

Pittsburg Beats Lafayette, 7-0

Forward Passes Enable Panthers to Score Only Touchdown of Game.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 6.—Frequent sides offset by sensational forward passing marked a hard fought football game which the University of Pittsburg won from Lafayette College here today, 7 to 0. The victory gave Pittsburg a one-game margin over Lafayette in the five gridiron clashes played since the institutions opened athletic relations.

The only score of the game came late in the first period. Unable to make a hole in the visitors' line, Bohren, a Pittsburg back, opened an aerial attack. He and Flanagan alternated on the receiving end and after a series of overhead plays, Bohren ran 38 yards to a touchdown. Gwosden kicked the goal.

BLOCKED PUNT HELPS CHICAGO ELEVEN DEFEAT COLORADO AGGIES, 10-0

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Although defeated 10 to 0, the Colorado Aggie football team played the University of Chicago a nearly even game at Stagg Field today. A blocked punt recovered by Henderson gave Chicago its touchdown and Rohrke added three points with a drop-kick from the 28-yard line.

Twice Colorado held back the Maroons in the shadow of their goal posts and in the third period Colorado made five straight first downs to Chicago's 18-yard line, but there the Maroons stopped them when the Aggie passes failed.

Two Chicago players, King at center and Dickson at right end, were injured and it was said that they might not be able to play again for two weeks.

KANSAS AGGIES DEFEAT WASHBURN COLLEGE, 27-0

MANHATTAN, Kas., Oct. 6.—The Kansas Aggies opened their 1923 football season here today by defeating Washburn College eleven, 27 to 0. Penalties, injuries and a muddy playing field combined to make the game slow. The final whistle blew two hours and 45 minutes after the first kick-off.

Neither team played exceptional football and the last half was a comedy of punts and penalties. The Aggies, with four first string men on the bench, did not uncover their powerful attack of last year. Substitutes were used freely in the second half, two full elevens being used. Washburn also sent in a number of second string men toward the end of the game.

The Aggies made nine first downs and gained 279 yards, including forward passes. Washburn earned only one first down and chalked up only 70 yards from scrimmages. In the last quarter neither team was able to make a first down, the Aggies negotiating only three yards from scrimmage and Washburn only six.

Penn State Is Winner.

By the Associated Press.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Oct. 6.—Pennsylvania State College defeated North Carolina State here today by 18 to 0. The Nittany Lions met an unusually strong defensive team in the North Carolina men. Pennsylvania State crossed the visitors' goal once in the first period and garnered a touchdown and field goal in the third. In the other periods, the stiff defense of the Carolinans kept the Lions out of the 15-yard limit.

Detroit Defeats Browns; Climbs To Second Place

Nine-Run Rally Crushes Vangilder and Root in the Sixth Inning.

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—Elam Vangilder was wild today but not half as wild as Tris Speaker is this morning. Elam carried the Browns along under a 3-to-2 lead until the sixth inning in the game with Detroit this afternoon and was then swept aside along with Charlie Root in a nine-run rally, a rally that sent Detroit into second place inasmuch as Cleveland lost a double-header to the Chicago White Sox.

The standing this morning shows Detroit with a half game lead and only one game to go. The exact figures are:

	W.	L.	Pc.
Detroit	82	71	.536
Cleveland	81	71	.533

If the Tigers win today they will share second place money in one of the closest finishes in several seasons.

Nine Runs In One Inning.

The Detroit half of the sixth inning was a rally that only the liveball era and a wild pitcher could produce.

Bob Veach, who opened the inning with a triple, made a double later in the same frame. Harry Heilmann, the league's leading hitter, batted for Haney and walked and then came to the plate a second time after the team had batted around. This time he singled and helped carry on the drive into second place. All in all three doubles, three singles and one triple dovetailed with four bases on balls to account for the nine runs. Grant held the Tigers to one run after that but it was of no consequence. The Tigers must win tomorrow to assure themselves of second place but the task is easy now that Danforth and Vangilder, leading pitchers of the Browns, are out of the way.

Harold Grange, left halfback, playing his first game for the Illini scored all three touchdowns for his side.

Britton's Boot Scores 6 Points.

Britton's accurate boot scored the other points for Illinois. He did not miss one goal after touchdowns, and kicked three more points over the Cornhuskers' goal by scoring with a neat placement from the 28-yard line in the second quarter.

Nebraska smashed over for its single touchdown in the third period, after brilliant open field running by Captain Lewellen and Noble, the right half. Lewellen broke away for a 35-yard run, carrying the ball to Illinois' 9-yard line before he was upset. Noble shot around left end on the next play for a touchdown, dragging two Illinois tacklers with him as he fell across the line. Dewitz kicked goal.

The sophomore Grange proved the outstanding star of the game. He landed the first touchdown after

Nine-Run Rally Crushes Vangilder and Root in the Sixth Inning.

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—Elam Vangilder was wild today but not half so wild as Tris Speaker is this evening. Elam carried the Browns along under a 3-to-2 lead until the sixth inning in the game with Detroit this afternoon and was then swept aside along with Charlie Root in a nine-run rally, a rally that sent Detroit into second place inasmuch as Cleveland lost a double-header to the Chicago White Sox.

The standing this morning shows Detroit with a half game lead and only one game to go. The exact figures are:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Detroit	82	71	.536
Cleveland	81	71	.533

If the Tigers win today they will share second place money in one of the closest finishes in several seasons.

Nine Runs In One Inning.

The Detroit half of the sixth inning was a rally that only the lively ball era and a wild pitcher could produce.

Bob Veach, who opened the inning with a triple, made a double later in the same frame. Harry Heilmann, the league's leading hitter, batted for Haney and walked and then came to the plate a second time after the team had batted around. This time he singled and helped carry on the drive into second place. All in all, three doubles, three singles and one triple dovetailed with four bases on balls to account for the nine runs.

Grant held the Tigers to one run after that but it was of no consequence. The Tigers must win tomorrow to assure themselves of second place but the task is easy now that Danforth and Vangilder, leading pitchers of the Browns, are out of the way.

Illinois Overwhelms Nebraska 24-7, in First Big Game; Grange Crosses Enemy's Line 3 Times

Cornhuskers, Surprised and Outplayed, Rally in Third Period to Tally Their Only Points—Britton Kicks Field Score and Three Goals Following Touchdowns.

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., Oct. 6—The untried Illinois team sprang the surprise of the football season's opening today by decisively defeating Nebraska, 1922 champions of the Missouri Valley Conference, by a score of 24 to 7. It was the first meeting of these elevens in 18 years.

The game, which proved to be the hardest either coach has ever scheduled for the initial contest of the season, was a spectacular battle from start to finish. The contest was scheduled on the theory advanced by coaches Dawson of the Cornhuskers and Robert Zuppke of Illinois that one hard opening game was worth two or three pre-season games against weaker opponents.

After a scoreless first period, Illinois tied the Nebraskans in knots, outplayed them in forward passing and open field running and outgeneralled them in gridiron tactics. Harold Grange, left halfback, playing his first game for the Illini scored all three touchdowns for his side.

Britton's Boot Scores 6 Points.

Britton's accurate boot scored the other points for Illinois. He did not miss one goal after touchdowns, and kicked three more points over the Cornhuskers' goal by scoring with a neat placement from the 28-yard line in the second quarter.

Nebraska smashed over for its single touchdown in the third period, after brilliant open field running by Captain Lewellen and Noble, the right half. Lewellen broke away for a 35-yard run, carrying the ball to Illinois' 9-yard line before he was upset. Noble shot around left end on the next play for a touchdown, dragging two Illinois tacklers with him as he fell across the line. Dewitz kicked goal.

Runs 60 Yards for Score.

Catching a punt on the Illinois 40-yard line, Grange raced 60 yards for the third touchdown, which was the signal for Coach Zuppke to pull his regulars out of the game and supplant them with second string men.

PATSY FLANNIGAN WINS FROM CHARLEY GLASER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—St. Louis boxers now making Chicago their home need have no fear or Charley Glaser's threat to run them all out of town. The south side featherweight stacked up against Patsy Flannigan of the Mound City last night at Aurora and finished second best. Patsy gave Charles a good going over, cut his lip, bruised an eye and had his ribs the color of raw meat. Flannigan appeared at this best. He employed a jolting left hook that rocked Glaser time after time. Now and then Patsy whipped it to the body and Charley grunted. Glaser is a good boxer and Flannigan was too smart for him and insisted upon crowding in close and making it a slugging affair. After two rounds of this Glaser himself began to slug and it was Flannigan's fight from then on. Sammy Mandell, Rockford flash, beat Eddie "Kid" Wagner in another 10-rounder. Wagner recently beat Johnny Dundee. Joe Jackson won from Wernie Smith. Eddie McGoorty, the former middleweight, refereed.

Mehlhorn Beaten By One Stroke in Wichita Tourney

Hagen and Kirkwood Tie for First Place in Mid-Continent With 279.

By the Associated Press.

WICHITA, Kan., Oct. 6. — Joe Kirkwood, trick shot king of the golfing world, and Walter Hagen of New York, former British and United States open champion, were tied at the end of the midcontinent open tournament here today with scores of 279. There was no play off.

William Mehlhorn, St. Louis, former Texas open champion and winner of the midcontinent tournament last year, was third with 280.

Eddie Loos, Chicago professional, finished fourth with a 282. William Creavey of Kansas City was fifth with 283. Ed Murphy of St. Joseph was sixth with 290, John Black of Wichita seventh with 294, Mike Brady of Detroit eighth with 295, J. Kennedy of Tulsa ninth with 297 and W. Bucker of Kansas City tenth with 298. The last two are amateurs.

Finals Played in Rain.

The last 36 holes of the tournament played today were fought out in a rain, but it brought forth as hard-fought and thrilling a four-cornered fight as ever came in a golf meet.

The finale furnished a suspense for the faithful members of the gallery which held them until Hagen had sunk his final putt.

Kirkwood, who was one stroke behind Mehlhorn at the start of the final 18 holes, began to cut down the lead of his opponent and soon had him even, then went ahead and stayed there. Mehlhorn had some bad luck on the final 18, taking a par 74, his highest score of the meet. The precarious condition of the putting greens seemed to throw him off his game. Kirkwood had a lead of three strokes on Mehlhorn on the thirty-first hole, but Mehlhorn gained two on his opponent on the thirty-second, Kirkwood taking a six on a par four hole. Kirkwood gained back a stroke on the next hole when Mehlhorn missed a two-footer and held his lead the rest of the match. The two, who were playing together the final round, wound up with fours on the thirty-sixth hole.

In the meantime, Hagen had been putting up a great uphill fight for the title. He had cut down the lead held over him by Kirkwood and Loos in the morning by taking a 68, while Kirkwood had a 72 and Loos a 75. Mehlhorn, however, had shot a 68, giving him a margin of three strokes over Hagen at the start of the final 18.

Hagen Plays Great Golf.

Hagen began reeling off birdies and pars in the last 18 and gained steadily on Kirkwood and Mehlhorn. Hagen was playing with Loos, also in the running, but Loos suffered from bad putts and failed to keep up the hot pace set by Hagen.

When Kirkwood and Mehlhorn finished, Hagen and Loos had driven off the thirty-fourth tee, News had reached Hagen that he had to shoot three fours on the last three holes to win and a 4-5-4, par figures to beat Kirkwood.

He made his fours on the twenty-fourth. On the thirty-fifth his drive and iron put him to the edge of the hill guarding the green, but his mid iron shot rolled down the hill, struck the heavy grass and stopped short. He missed a 10-foot putt and had to take a five.

It left the result of the match to the the final hole. Hagen's drive was beautiful, 250 yards down the fairway. He was but 20 yards from the green and a true approach would mean the match. But again his rolled up shot was short and again he had a fairly long putt. He missed by an inch and then plunked his ball into the cup for a tie with Kirkwood.

Kirkwood and Hagen are partners in many exhibition golf events. Efforts have been made to get them together here Monday to play off the tie in an 18-hole match. Exhibition dates may prevent this.

Syracuse Backs Run 100 and 98 Yards to Score Touchdowns

By the Associated Press.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 6.

SYRACUSE established what is believed to be a record for long runs in the first quarter of its 61 to 3 victory over William and Mary here this afternoon.

Bowman, Syracuse halfback, taking the opening kick-off on his goal line, sprinted 100 yards to a touchdown. Less than five minutes later, Foley, a substitute, rushed into the back field, took a kick-off on his two-yard line and ran 98 yards to a touchdown.

Speed accounted for practically all of the touchdowns. William and Mary's efforts in the scoring column was confined to a drop-kick from the 38-yard line by Matsu.

PRINCIPIA AND SOLDAN BATTLE TO 6 TO 6 TIE

Principia Academy's football team rallied in the fourth quarter to gain a 6-6 tie with the Soldan High School eleven at Francis Field yesterday afternoon.

Soldan displayed an irresistible attack in the second quarter, and line plunges mixed with short passes enabled Craig to score from the three-yard line. The kick for point was missed.

Soldan seemed to have the game well in hand until the final period when the Cadets opened up a barrage of forward passes and end runs. Clark crossed the goal line to even the score, but the subsequent kick from placement was blocked.

Twice in the third quarter Soldan had the ball within Principia's 20-yard line, but each time Principia linesmen broke through and tackled Soldan runners for a loss.

Champion Vespers Oppose Scullins In Soccer Opener

Hoovers Oppose Millers in Other Game Today—New Players to Be Tried.

The St. Louis Soccer League championship race will be opened at High School Field this afternoon, with the Vespers, champions of last season, opposing the Scullins, U. S. F. A. finalists a year ago, in the opening game at 2 o'clock. The Hoovers and Ben Millers are scheduled to fight it out in the closing battle. In the title rave a year ago the Vespers finished two points ahead of the Scullins and Hoovers with the Millers trailing.

Several new players will be introduced to the fans today. Although his team won the title last year, Harry McCarthy has signed many new athletes. Among them are Tom Harris, a forward and back last year with West Frankfort. He probably will be used in both positions today. Then there is Tom Scott, who comes from East Fice, Scotland, a halfback, and Drew and Becker, forwards, graduates of the Municipal League.

Tate Brady of the Scullins also will make some shifts. He will use Schurwan at halfback in place of Jimmy Nolan, who is still out with a knee injury. Nolan intends to pay a visit to Bonesetter Reese at Youngstown, O. Thorns, who played soccer abroad; Jim Burke, late of the St. Leos and Rice of the St. Marks, Municipal Leaguers, are other new members on Brady's roster, who will get a chance in the opening contests.

Millers Sign New "Goalie."

The Ben Millers will show practically a veteran lineup against the Hoovers. However, Walkenford, who for the past few campaigns has starred in goal for the St. Leos Municipal League, will be between the uprights in place of Rankow, manager Foley of the Hoovers also intends to try out many athletes, one of the newcomers being Mulroy, a halfback.

The professional elevens will get practice in two regular league battles before they are called upon to play the first round of games in the U. S. F. A. cup competition on Oct. 21.

The double referee system introduced last season will again be used. Instead of using four, however, Phil Kavanaugh and Paul Murphy will handle the clashes throughout the year. They will be assisted by Bill Bascom and "King" Finnegan as goal linesmen.

Inasmuch as the league officials have extensive plans for the season, it has been decided to charge an admission fee of 55 cents to the regular league battles.

Papyrus Showing Improvement in Trial Gallops

Trainer of British Horse Pleased With His Charge's Workout.

ZEV GETS STIFF TRYOUT

U. S.'s Main Reliance in Match Race in Fine Condition After 1¼-Mile Gallop.

By George Daley,
Sports Editor of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Papyrus, England's Derby winner, was not asked the real question as to his speed at Belmont Park today, but he did far more than required at any time since his arrival in this country ten days ago, to meet Zev in the international race for $100,000 at Belmont Park two weeks from today.

Basil Jarvis sent him out on the track with Bar Gold about 10 o'clock in the morning and told Ted Banham, who rides the horse in all his works, to gallop him an easy mile.

Papyrus broke about 50 to 60 yards behind Bar Gold, but quickly moved up to his stable companion and, according to the clockers, went to the first quarter in 27 2-5 seconds and to the half mile in 56 seconds. He then went on at the same even pace and covered the mile in 1:47, but galloped the last quarter in 24 seconds so smoothly and easily that Jarvis expressed himself as highly pleased.

To Show Speed This Week.

Papyrus is now ready for a real speed test and unless Jarvis changes his mind this will come on Tuesday. The horse looks and acts in such fine condition that the opinion is growing that England's derby winner will not be handicapped so heavily as many believed by his journey across the Atlantic.

Sam Hildreth also had Zev out on the track for a stiff breeze. He told Fator to let him gallop a mile in 1:42, and the boy's judgment of pace was so sound that Zev covered the distance in 1:42 2-5 and then went on to the mile and a furlong in 1:56 3-5.

Basil Jarvis expressed himself as more than satisfied with the way Papyrus is training. The horse is eating so well and doing so well that his trainer begins to feel confident that he has entirely recovered from the effects of his rough journey. So far he has shown no indication of training off or suffering any ill effects.

Works In "Kidney Blanket."

He galloped today in the usual kidney blanket in which so many English thoroughbreds live, so that the speed he showed in the last quarter, which he covered in 24 seconds, is a plain indication of much better things when he is stripped for action in his first real test on Tuesday.

A number of horsemen commented on the fact that whereas Papyrus goes a little "short" under a canter that his action was smooth and even under the gallop today. This was characteristic of his grandsire, Rock Sand.

Jarvis was not prepared to make any prediction but did say that he hopes to have the horse ready and at his best by Oct. 20.

The fact that the Greentree stable's Untidy, which ran such a good second behind Zev in the Realization and then finished second to My Own in the National trial sweepstakes, was unplaced today in the Kentucky Special of $50,000 at one mile and three-sixteenths, seems to have a definite significance as to the indifference of our three-year-olds this year.

Thing Alternate Beaten.

There may have been excuses for Untidy for she has had a stiff campaign and many hard races this season for a three-year-old filly. The fact remains, however, that she has been named as a third alternate to meet Papyrus so that her defeat today has a bearing, even though indirectly, on the big race and the chances of Zev himself.

Zev, definitely chosen last night by the Jockey Club to carry America's colors in preference to My Own, had a long gallop of a mile and a quarter under restraint, in 2:13. The mile was done in fairly fast time, 1:42, but after that the rider took a strong hold on the colt for the rest of the workout.

Alabama Wins Easily.

By the Associated Press.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Oct. 6. — A line in which Alabama had approximately 20 pounds the advantage, triumphed over a good backfield from the University of Mississippi here, 56 to 0. Mississippi's line was weak. Alabama's backfield played good football, but is not a finished product.

MICHIGAN IS VICTOR OVER CASE, 36 TO 0

Chacolet, Paying $44 to $2, Wins Kentucky Special

Five-Year-Old Mare Beats In Memoriam by a Length and a Half.

By the Associated Press.

LATONIA, Ky., Oct. 6.—Chacolet, Hal Price Headley's 5-year-old mare, ridden by L. McDermott, and carrying 102 pounds, proved her sterling running qualities here today by winning the $50,000 added Kentucky Special at the distance of one mile and three-sixteenths. In Memoriam, owned by Carl Wiedmann of Newport, Ky., finished second, a length and a half behind the winner, while Shuffle Along, a Canadian horse, owned by A. Bostwick, was third, with Knobbie, an Eastern entry, fourth.

The time for the distance, 1:56⅘, was 2-5 seconds slower than the track record. The winner paid $44.60, $16.10 and $11.40 in the mutuels.

Sixteen horses started.

Hal Price Headley, the owner of Chacolet, was enriched $49,350, and in addition, was awarded the gold cup valued at $2500, donated by the Kentucky Jockey Club. Carl Wiedemann, the owner of In Memoriam, received $6000, A. C. Bostwick, owner of Shuffle Along, $2000, and the Rancocas Stable on the entrance fee of $1000.

Shuffle Along was the first to show, after the barrier was sprung, with Knobbie second and the others close up. The Bostwick horse held his lead until the head of the stretch when he was overtaken by Chacolet. Coming down the stretch, In Memoriam moved into second place. Chacolet, however, running true and never faltering, held her advantage and finished a length and a half in front of the Wiedmann horse.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 6.—Princeton opened its fifty-fifth annual football season at Palmer Stadium this afternoon by defeating Johns Hopkins, 16 to 7.

A fifty-yard run by Van Gerbig, in the opening quarter gave Ken Smith an oportunity to place a drop score of the game. Ragged team kick between the posts for the first play marked the offensive of both teams. Princeton displayed a weak line but a particularly speedy backfield.

CAMP RANDALL, Wis., Oct. 6.—Wisconsin University's football team defeated the Coe College eleven from Cedar Rapids, Ia., 7 to 3, today, in the stiffest preliminary gridiron tilt seen on the Cardinal field in years. Eight of the leading bowlers in St. Louis are scheduled to bowl at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the fifth semiannual individual classic tournament held at the Louis Petersen alleys in Chicago. The local stars will strive with 188 other tenpinners from the Windy City and other cities for a slice of the $4800 prize fund. First place in the tourney, which is eight games, total pins to count, is $1500.

The St. Louis bowlers who will compete are Jerry Ameling, Ben Cohen, Mike Cassin, George Colbion, E. E. Grubb, Otto Stein Jr., Oscar Whitehead and Ed Schaefer.

Among other stars who are scheduled to compete are Jimmy Blouin, recognized at present as the world's champion; Jimmy Smith, the Milwaukee star, Jess Pritchett of Indianapolis and others. Blouin will be on the same drives with Ameling today.

Previous winners in the tournament are Harry Steers, Dominick Devito, Lou Levine and William Wenicke, all Chicago bowlers.

MEADOWBROOK FOUR WINS UNITED STATES POLO CHAMPIONSHIP

WESTBURY, N. Y., Oct. 6.—The open polo championship of the United States came home today. Undefended by the "Four Horsemen of the Argentine," who were unable to come here to defend the title they won last year, the championship was stubbornly contested for by the British Army team which went down to a glorious defeat before the Meadowbrook Club, 12 goals to 9.

The teams went into the last period tied at eight goals each. In the last period Melville, of the British Army, first scored a leading goal, but less than a minute afterward had tied the score. Then Milburn, with one of his typical long drives, sent Meadowbrook into the lead. Hitchcock and Belmont then co-operated in making the American score 12.

The lineup:

Unbeaten Sarazen Wins Eighth Race

Two-Year-Old Defeats Moon Star in National Stakes at Laurel.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 6.—The unbeaten Sarazen, carrying the "Black and Salmon" of the Fair stable, romped to his eighth straight victory in the National Stakes for two-year-olds at six furlongs at the Laurel track this afternoon.

As in his other races this season, he quickly smothered all opposition and went on to win in the fast time of 1:12 2-5. Moon Star was second and Aga Kahn, third. H. P. Whitney's Miss Whisk and Sunny Sal made up the field as J. S. Cosden's Lord Baltimore II. Fluvanna and Donnelly were withdrawn.

One of the largest crowds Laurel has held turned out to see the races and particularly Sarazen. None was more enthusiastic or delighted after the race than Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt II, the owner of Sarazen, who made the trip down from New York to see him run.

Sarazen was the hottest of favorites, paying the minimum price in the $2 mutuels of $2.20 on a ticket to win. By one of those freaks in the betting, however, he paid double that for place and show. Moon Star paid $7 place and $3.70 show and Aga Kahn paid $3.90 show.

HARVARD USES 34 MEN; DEFEATS RHODE ISLAND

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 6.—Harvard rushed the lighter Rhode Island team off its feet today and rolled up a score of 35 to 0, in its first game of the season. The Crimson used 34 men. Harvard, outweighing its opponents in every position, confined itself to a running game. Only one forward pass was attempted and it grounded. There was much fumbling on both sides.

MAN TAKEN WITH STOLEN BONDS TO BE RETURNED TO TULSA

Alva W. Hillsman Arrested While Trying to Dispose of Securities Valued at $10,345.

Alva W. Hillsman of Chicago, arrested here while trying to dispose of stolen bonds valued at $10,345, will be returned to Tulsa, Ok., where the securities were stolen, to face trial on a charge of larceny. An information against him was filed in Tulsa yesterday by F. D. Bruton, owner of the bonds.

Hillsman last Wednesday introduced himself as Fred D. Burton at the Miller Loan Co., 1322 Olive street, and, under the pretext of being hard pressed for money, offered to sell the bonds at 70 cents on the dollar. He was told to leave the bonds and call again.

In his absence it was noted that the name registered on the bonds was Fred D. Bruton, instead of "Burton," the name given by Hillsman. Detectives were summoned and they arrested Hillsman when he returned to the store Friday night. Later he confessed having stolen the bonds from his roommate in the Tulsa Y. M. C. A., and also that he was a deserter from the United States Marine Corps. His mother conducts a rooming house in Chicago.

An Hour a Day Keeps the Doctor Away

There is a certain big business man in St. Louis who does a prodigious amount of brain work. His mind is always keen, his judgment safe and his execution rapid. He reaches his office at eight o'clock each morning and does not leave until six.

ASKED how he managed to keep physically fit, he answered in a single sentence of seven words, "An Hour a Day in the Open." His method is simple, and here's the secret:

As a mental stimulus and a means of exercise, he began to drive his own car. Later the family doctor advised open-air exercise for his wife, a well-known St. Louis musician. As a result, a coupe was also purchased, sufficiently large for his family of three.

Then three people enjoyed the fresh morning air where only one had enjoyed it before. The wife took the wheel after the husband reached the office and the drive home was stimulating exercise for her—and gave the youngster the finest opportunity to fill his lungs with fresh air. The trips of the doctor have ceased—except for friendly calls.

You, too, may be one of the Tired Business Men who seek some form of light, diverting, pleasant exercise. An Automobile is the answer. Read the advertisements, then inspect the cars. You will find Coupes, Town Cars, Sedans, Touring Cars—almost any kind of an Automobile to fit your fancy and purse.

Improved health, added happiness, increased efficiency are the reward of those who read and heed.

RALLY IN GRAINS AND EFFECTS ON STOCK MARKET

Cash Corn Sells Above Dollar Mark—Further Recoveries in the Indices of Wholesale Commodity Prices During September.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Market movements of the past week confirm the impression that recent pessimism has been very much overdone. They also lend support to the conclusion that the speculative position was greatly strengthened by the liquidation which occurred during the second quarter of the year. We know that merchants and manufacturers steadily have borne in mind the lessons of 1920. They have refused to accumulate inventories and have maintained an unusually liquid working capital position. An analagous position seems to exist in the stock market. The public remembers what happened after the collapse of the bull market of 1919. It has had a reminder of the nature of such things in the sharp reactions of last spring. It has not the slightest desire to repeat the experience. Accordingly, it seems to have sold the stocks it was not prepared to carry. It cannot, apparently, be persuaded to resume the long side of this juncture; but it will not need to sell stocks on declines precipitated by the bear element.

Advance In Corn.

"Conclusions of the kind must be, of course, relative. The question is as to the size of the speculative position rather than its absolute absence or presence. And one factor which undoubtedly has fortified the market's position during the last few weeks is the emphatic and important rally in grain prices. Corn has had an almost sensational advance from levels which already were relatively high. Cash corn at Chicago has commanded as much as $1.02¾ during the past week, and the December future has sold at 77½ cents as compared with a low o 69⅝ cents for this crop, and with 61¾ cents at this time last year. Present prices are, in fact, the highest in three years. The latest advances in corn have been accomplished, furthermore, without injury to hog prices. The latter have now recovered materially from the year's lows, and the Department of Agriculture reports a distinct improvement in the hog-corn relationship. December wheat meanwhile has rallied some 10 cents from the summer's low, thus mitigating the unfavorable effect of those grain growers who have been hardest hit. With mail order business already holding up in remarkable fashion, and with estimates of costs of grain production containing many elastic items, it may turn out that the farmer's purchasing power will be considerably greater than has been anticipated.

"Further recoveries in the indices of wholesale commodity prices during September reflect the steadier tone which has been apparent in business with the coming of the fall season. Steel and pig iron production continues to fall off slightly, but the decline is from extraordinarily high levels and is a natural reaction from the stock-restoring demands of last spring. It must be admitted that the peak of activity in the heavy industries probably has been passed for the present movement. All signs point, however, to an excellent autumn and holiday trade. Purchasing power is high and the summer's reactions in commodity prices have put the public in a frame of mind to buy freely to meet current need. Stocks of goods are moderate, credit is plentiful, and the utilization of invention and better management for the lowering of costs seems likely. Under the circumstances any cyclical reaction in business activity should be of a mild and salutary character.

The Foreign Situation.

"News from abroad shows that the long-expected crisis in Germany has arrived. It has been only a question of time before that country's reckless policy of currency inflation finally would bring such chaos as to require drastic reorganization. The dance of the mark is drawing to a close. Everything considered, the crisis is attended by remarkably little social disorder. The fundamentally orderly character of the German people is apparent. We must now wait for a government to get the situation in hand. Negotiations with France will then be on the cards. The existing troubles are part of the natural and inevitable evolution."

"Dullness on the Stock Exchange was almost as pronounced as in a midsummer short session and price movements without special significance. Following an irregular opening speculative attention was centered in one of the railroad issues and two or three of the industrial specialties and the remainder of the list was left to shift for itself. Active buying of Chesapeake and Ohio common brought another sharp advance in that stock. Industrials for the most part were unchanged or slightly lower at the close. Bonds were firm with fair activity in some of the speculative railroad issues.

French Exchange Lower.

"Aside from a rather sharp drive against the French franc, the foreign exchange market bore the usual quiet half day trading appearance. Weakness in French francs doubtless was due to the same influences that caused a decline at London. There the currency was sold following the speech of Lord Curzon at the Imperial conference in which he expressed a none too cheerful view of the situation in the Ruhr. Francs yielded 5 points to 5.83½ cents. Sterling, on the other hand, was steady at $4.55¾, or ¼ below the previous close. Most of the continentals were inclined to be soft, but the Canadian dollar continued its steady improvement.

"In the commodity markets cotton continued to move uncertainly, with bearish sentiment apparently predominating. Emphasis on the adverse news from the textile center brought about scattered liquidation. This was followed by rather good buying stimulated by the possibility of frosts in some parts of the belt, but the rally failed to make up the early losses and at a late price of 27.67 cents the December future was 18 points lower. Wheat and corn, on the other hand, maintained a buoyant tone throughout.

"This week's statement of the New York Clearing House shows a decrease in both loans and deposits, the former amounting to $22,000,000 and the latter to $26,000,000. Reserve in Federal Reserve Bank of member banks also declined $11,000,000, and these changes resulted in a loss of surplus reserve of $7,000,000, bringing that item down to 15.9 millions.

FORMER RUTH DEVOY SEEKING A DIVORCE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—It was learned today that divorce proceedings had been started by Mrs. Ruth Maude Scripps against James Scripps, eldest son of the owner of the Detroit News.

The bill charges extreme cruelty. Scripps has filed an answer and cross-bill in which he says that as a youth under age he was captivated by the beauty of the woman he married and that she told him unless they were married immediately she would have to yield to the vigorous courtship of an older admirer.

In Circuit Court today Judge Mandell adjourned for one week a hearing on a motion to advance the case for immediate trial.

Mrs. Scripps was Ruth Maude Devoy, formerly of St. Louis. She eloped with James Scripps when he was attending preparatory school in Roxbury, Conn., and married him Dec. 31, 1921, in Windsor, Ont. The Rev. Arthur Barker, a Protestant clergyman, officiated. Four days later they were remarried at the residence of the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, Roman Catholic Bishop of Detroit. For a short time afterward they lived with Scripps' parents at their Detroit home.

In January, 1922, they went East, where they stayed while the bridegroom completed his school course. They separated June 18, 1922. At the time of their marriage, Scripps was 18 and his wife 21, according to his cross-bill.

The plaintiff alleges that on one occasion her husband held her forcibly in a tub of hot water until she was "weak and exhausted." She also charges that he took her motoring on a cold rainy day and drove her over the roughest possible roads, subjecting her to great discomfort.

"About June 28 defendant had occasion with justification apparently to note the fact that plaintiff was possessed of an unenviable habit of not dealing frankly with defendant in certain unimportant social matters," says the cross bill. "He pointed out examples which might have caused real embarrassment and humiliation to him and that she ought to try and break herself, of this tendency.

"She thereupon fell into a great rage and left the room. When he followed her he found she had gone and, except for one telephone conversation, in which he asked her to return, they have never conversed since."

Through the Security Trust Co. Scripps denied his wife's charges. "No such incidents or experiences ever occurred," he says.

Scripps at the time of the filing of the answer declared he had no knowledge or reliable information of the fact that a child was to be born. The child has since been born.

Mrs. Scripps asked only for separate maintenance in her original suit, but in his cross bill Scripps asks for an absolute divorce.

Mrs. Scripps resided in St. Louis when a girl. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Devoy of Detroit and a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Devoy. She made an informal debut in St. Louis when visiting Mrs. Devoy. When visiting here in 1920 she was a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet's ball.

Hyde Pardons Man in Liquor Case.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 6.—Gov. Hyde today pardoned B. E. Biddlecome of Lawrence County on a charge of having had intoxicating liquor in his possession, relieving the convicted man of serving 90 days in jail. The pardon shows that Biddlecome had been sentenced to pay a fine of $1000, the costs of the case and serve the jail sentence, but his friends paid the fine and $138 costs. At the Governor's office it was explained that Lawrence County citizens had told Hyde that Biddlecome was seriously ill. Biddlecome was said to have had one quart of whisky at the time of his arrest.

HUSBAND, SHOT IN SCUFFLE WITH HIS WIFE, DIES

William McCaw of Lebanon, Ill., Wounded When Woman Struck Aside Weapon Pointed at Her.

QUARREL RESULT OF JEALOUSY, SHE SAYS

18-Year-Old Widow Declares He Had Often Threatened to Kill Himself and Recently Threatened Her.

William McCaw, 19 years old, a coal miner of Lebanon, Ill., died yesterday morning from a bullet wound in the head, inflicted, according to his wife, Helen, 18, when she tried to strike aside a pistol with which he had threatened to kill her as he lay in bed at their home Friday night.

Testifying at the inquest yesterday, at which a verdict of death by a gunshot wound "from hands unknown," was returned, Mrs. McCaw said she and her husband had quarreled frequently since their marriage last March. Friday night, she accompanied a neighbor home for a few moments, after the latter had spent the evening at the McCaw home, and upon her return she found the door locked, she said.

Her husband, who had gone to bed, finally admitted her, but told her that she could not sleep with him. She informed him that she would take a quilt from the bed, then, and sleep on the floor. When she approached to get the covering McCaw drew a revolver from beneath the pillow, she testified, and declared he would kill her if she came near the bed.

She did not halt, however, and McCaw turned the revolver upon her, whereupon she attempted to strike the weapon aside, the wife declared. A report followed and McCaw fell back with a bullet wound through the forehead. She called a physician, but her husband died without regaining consciousness.

Mrs. McCaw said that McCaw frequently had threatened to kill himself, and she thought it possible that he had turned the revolver upon himself and fired just as she struck. She was not held. Jealousy is said to have occasioned their quarrels.

State's Attorney Lindauer of St. Clair County announced last night that he intended to make a complete investigation of the circumstances of the shooting.

NEGROES TELL COOLIDGE RACE LOSES FAITH IN REPUBLICANS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Dissatisfaction among negroes over the Republican administration was pictured to President Coolidge today by a colored delegation representing the National Equal Rights League. The Rev. T. S. Harten of New York, spokesman, told him that the political defection already has set in, the race having lost faith in the Republican party.

Mr. Coolidge was asked to make a statement outlining his views on the treatment on the negro.

The delegation urged the President to recommend enactment of the Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill in his message to Congress, and requested that he take cognizance of the "Jim Crow" laws in the South; that he place negro doctors in charge of the Tuskegee Veterans' Bureau Hospital, and that he abolish segregation of negroes in the Federal Departments.

President Coolidge expressed gratification over the great strides the negro had made, and said he wanted the race to assist the Government in conducting its affairs with justice to all. Under his administration, he assured them, the Government will do all it can to protect the negroes from mistreatment.

ALL-YEAR CHANNEL EXPECTED TO INCREASE RIVER SHIPPING

Col. Ashburn Says Obstruction Cost Barge Line More Than $600,000 Last Year.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La. Oct. 6.—With the development of an all-the-year channel on the Mississippi as far up as St. Louis waterway transportation will increase rapidly, according to Col. T. Q. Ashburn of Washington, chief of the Inland Waterway Service of the War Department, which operates the Mississippi-Warrior barge line.

"Last year channel obstruction cost the barge line more than $600,000," he said. "This year conditions are not quite so bad, but there is an added cost to the operations because of the necessity of double-tripping in certain sections of the river. Had it not been for this, October would break all records in amount of tonnage and earnings by the barge line.

"There is a need for the appropriation of the money for flood control. The authorized channel was nine feet deep and 250 feet wide at the bottom. Today the channel is only 150 feet wide in places, and we are operating barges loaded to a depth of six feet."

DENBY SUSTAINED IN ROW WITH COMPTROLLER-GENERAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Comptroller-General McCarl lost his first round today in the contest with Cabinet officials over who is supreme when expenditures are concerned. Attorney-General Daugherty handed down a ruling that Secretary of the Navy Denby had undisputed sway over Navy disbursements, being answerable only to Congress.

Secretary Denby locked horns with the Comptroller-General several months ago when certain disbursements for officers' pay and pensions were disallowed by McCarl.

The Attorney-General's decision was in the case of Chief Pay Clerk Theodore F. Howe, U. S. N., and Commander Philip J. Willette, supply corps, U. S. N. Howe was convicted in 1920 by court martial of embezzling public funds amounting to $12,879, but was exonerated by the court, in a recommendation for clemency of any actual culpability for the deficiency, "incurred in line of duty." Daugherty declared the Secretary of the Navy, and not the Comptroller-General, had the last word, subject only to Congress, in determining whether the bondsmen of the officer should be held responsible for the deficiency.

Commander Willette was charged with making erroneous disbursements of public money to the amount of $250.

In both cases, the Attorney-General held that the bondsmen of the two officers should be discharged of any obligation, that the deficiency in the two accounts should be credited to them as incurred in line of duty, and that no attempt be made to collect from the bondsmen. This was in line with Denby's recommendations. The Comptroller-General insisted the amounts should be collected from the bondsmen.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Oct. 5.—The present deplorable condition of Oklahoma had its genesis, not during the administration of the present Governor, for during the administration of the preceding Governor sporadic outbursts of Ku Klux Klansmen were reported and referred by the Chief Executive to Chiefs of Police and Sheriffs of various cities and counties throughout the State. He little dreamed, no doubt, that he was placing investigation of crimes reported in the hands of the very parties who were guilty of the commission of the crimes.

It was scarcely conceivable that Judges, Sheriffs, County Attorneys, Court Clerks and Jury Commissioners, Mayors and police officers, sworn to uphold the law and administer justice through regular channels, would ally themselves with an organization guilty of such atrocities as have been uncovered in this State and in some of which atrocities high public officials themselves participated.

Law Officers Among Members.

It was at first believed this organization had for its purpose discovery of crimes and misdemeanors, turning over of the information obtained to proper officials, and in general assisting officials in administering laws, fairly and impartially, and for this reason little attention was paid to growth of the organization or to its masked parades or masked public initiations until the commonwealth was rudely awakened to the fact that many officers, sworn to enforce law, were members of this "Invisible Empire," and that the "Invisible Empire" numbered among its subjects murderers, maimers, gamblers, bootleggers and outlaws of every description, and it was at that period my fight against this outlaw horde started.

After I, as Mayor, issued orders to officers to disband all masked mobs and to shoot to kill if necessary, this gang of thugs changed its meeting places to points outside the city, where they had the protection of officers charged with enforcement of laws but who, as has been proven since my investigation has been started, were members of this "invisible government" and were cognizant of these outrages but took no steps to prevent same or bring the perpetrators thereof to justice.

Investigation as Governor.

After taking the oath of office as Governor, my jurisdiction as conservator of peace was extended to the utmost confines of the State, and communications continued to come to that office, complaining of whippings and mutilations, but writers thereof implored me not to reveal their names as the victims were threatened with death if they let it be known that they had been maltreated.

A quiet investigation was inaugurated by me through my secret service department, and it was soon discovered that ones who did complain to police chiefs or Sheriffs were again flogged, mutilated and driven from the State, their homes, furniture, barns and livestock destroyed by fire, and victims left penniless and homeless.

Realizing these outrages could not be stopped through ordinary channels, it was imperative martial law be declared in the city of Tulsa and a military court established, to the end that truth might be known and the guilty brought to the bar of justice.

Gov. Walton's Own Story of Fight to Unmask Oklahoma Klan That He Says Controls State Officers

Declares Military Courts Have Obtained Information of 216 Outrageous Acts—Denies Legislature Has Legal Right to Meet.

Gov. Walton of Oklahoma, who was christened "John Calloway," but signs himself "Jack C.," has written exclusively for the Post-Dispatch and the New York World the statement printed below giving his version of the situation which has led to the present crisis in that State.

By JACK C. WALTON.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Oct. 5.—The present deplorable condition of Oklahoma had its genesis, not during the administration of the present Governor, for during the administration of the preceding Governor sporadic outbursts of Ku Klux Klansmen were reported and referred by the Chief Executive to Chiefs of Police and Sheriffs of various cities and counties throughout the State. He little dreamed, no doubt, that he was placing investigation of crimes reported in the hands of the very parties who were guilty of the commission of the crimes.

It was scarcely conceivable that Judges, Sheriffs, County Attorneys, Court Clerks and Jury Commissioners, Mayors and police officers, sworn to uphold the law and administer justice through regular channels, would ally themselves with an organization guilty of such atrocities as have been uncovered in this State and in some of which atrocities high public officials themselves participated.

Law Officers Among Members.

It was at first believed this organization had for its purpose discovery of crimes and misdemeanors, turning over of the information obtained to proper officials, and in general assisting ofificals in administering laws, fairly and impartially, and for this reason little attention was paid to growth of the organization or to its masked parades or masked public initiations until the commonwealth was rudely awakened to the fact that many officers, sworn to enforce law, were members of this "Invisible Empire," and that the "Invisible Empire" numbered among its subjects murderers, maimers, gamblers, bootleggers and outlaws of every description, and it was at that period my fight against this outlaw horde started.

After I, as Mayor, issued orders to officers to disband all masked mobs and to shoot to kill if necessary, this gang of thugs changed its meeting places to points outside the city, where they had the protection of officers charged with enforcement of laws but who, as has been proven since my investigation has been started, were members of this "invisible government" and were cognizant of these outrages but took no steps to prevent same or bring the perpetrators thereof to justice.

Investigation as Governor.

After taking the oath of office as Governor, my jurisdiction as conservator of peace was extended to the utmost confines of the State, and communications continued to come to that office, complaining of whippings and mutilations, but writers thereof implored me not to reveal their names as the victims were threatened with death if they let it be known that they had been maltreated.

A quiet investigation was inaugurated by me through my secret service department, and it was soon discovered that ones who did complain to police chiefs or Sheriffs were again flogged, mutilated and driven from the State, their homes, furniture, barns and livestock destroyed by fire, and victims left penniless and homeless.

Realizing these outrages could not be stopped through ordinary channels, it was imperative martial law be declared in the city of Tulsa and a military court established, to the end that truth might be known and the guilty brought to the bar of justice.

This martial law edict did not disturb citizens of Tulsa, as business proceeded as usual. All stores, hotels and public places remained open as usual. Militia was confined to quarters during the day, and after nightfall they patroled highways leading to hte city, and all persons on streets or highways after midnight were required to have permits or give an account of themselves. The military court convened in the leading hotel in Tulsa and trembling victims were brought before this court and with fear-blanched faces reluctantly told stories under oath and exhibited mutilated bodies, all the while imploring protection of the militia against further punishment at the hands of these hounds of hell who mutilated them.

Results of Inquiries.

Our investigations uncovered in Tulsa County alone 216 killings, mutilations and whippings perpetrated within the past year, and many victims are physical and mental wrecks. Four members of this "Kowardly Kur Krew" confessed, pleaded guilty before a court, and naturally they had to be sentenced to the penitentiary, whether the klan-controlled court desired it or not.

The Tulsa investigation revealed that "Grand Dragon" Jewett, with headquarters in Oklahoma City, was State head of the Order and the seat of the "invisible state government" was in this city, and authoritative orders emanated from this point.

Complaints of mutilations, whippings, home and barn burnings continued to pour in from counties where peace officers were members of the klan.

Alleged Offenses of Klan.

Out of hundreds of heinous offenses brought to the Klavern door of this "Kowardly Kur Krew" numbers are unprintable, but the relation of a few, with the offenses of which the victims were charged, will suffice, as follows:

1. Eminently respectable old gentleman, elected by neighbors a member of school board, insisted teachers of the school district should have teachers' certificates as required by law. He was seized as he came from church with his wife, whipped and beaten because he refused to resign from the board. Another member was whipped because he objected to issuance of more school bonds for the reason that the school district was burdened with a greater tax rate than it could bear.

2. The election inspector of Tulsa tried to persuade voters to change their politics and vote for me. He was taken out, flesh stripped from his body by the lash, ear cut off and forced in his mouth, and ordered at the point of a gun, to eat the severed ear. Other portions of men's bodies were removed and in some instances the victims were ordered to eat same.

3. A man charged with selling "Choc" beer—"home brew"—containing more than one-half of one per cent alcohol. This, of course, was a violation of law. He was arrested, convicted and suffered the penalty of the law imposed. There is no evidence of his continuing the practice, yet these cowardly yellow curs surrounded his home at midnight and, without warning, poured volleys of bullets into his home.

Describes Night Attack.

He huddled his wife and five children on the floor. Shots struck within a few inches of his children's heads. He crawled to the door on his belly, opened the door and surrendered without returning their fire. They seized him and his wife, she in her nightgown. They did not permit her to dress. She threw a blanket about her. They then piled furniture in the middle of the floor, poured oil thereon and set the house afire, with five little children confined within the home.

Neighbors telephoned for police.

"Father of Aviation" One of Most Modest Figures at the International Air Races

Orville Wright Could Have Worn Many Medals but Didn't

In a Way Aviation Has Improved Since Early Days, When to Public Mind a Short Flight Was a Marvelous Event, He Asserts, but There Has Been Practically No Change From Basic Principles on Which Start Was Made.

By W. H. JAMES
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

OF all the distinguished men who attended the National Air Meet which closed in St. Louis yesterday no one received more attention and homage and no one bore a prouder title than Orville Wright.

"Father of Aviation."

That was what he was called again and again by those who paid homage to him. It is a title that will be linked with his name as long as he lives and thereafter in the pages of history; a fitting designation in life and an eloquent epitaph.

And yet there was no more modest figure in the throngs that saw the air races. Had he wished to do so, Orville Wright might have worn so many medals that their reflected light would have dazzled the flyers when they approached the grand stand. For every civilized nation has conferred decorations on the father of aviation. But there was not a medal or emblem visible on his plain and unostentatious attire. While the sons of aviation were strutting about, some of them in dazzling uniforms, the father of aviation, an unostentatious man of 52, a little grizzled and more than a little bald, was just a human unit in the great crowd of lookers-on.

Interest Was Paternal.

One would have given a pretty penny to know just what thoughts were passing through the mind of this man as he saw the wonderful achievements in the air, all of which had been made possible by the working out of his ideas. The interest of the average spectator must have been multiplied a million fold for him. Their interest was prompted mainly by curiosity. His interest was paternal. Scooting over the field, some at great height, others in tremendous bursts of speed and others filled with the lust of the air and cutting up fearsome and fantastic capers, were the children of his brain. They were not mere fanciful dream creations, these brain children, but actual materializations of those forces needed to conquer that most unruly of the elements, the air.

Yet outwardly there was no difference between Orville Wright as a spectator and any of the thousands of others who looked on, except that his enjoyment of the air stunts was interrupted more frequently by those who made their way to his box to pay homage to him. Homage is the correct word here.

Orville Wright has done some remarkable flying. In the early days he was the first to master the art, and yet probably he never did a more difficult feat of balancing than he accomplished at the air meet when he tried to divide his attention between the planes which he so dearly loves to watch and the earth hugging notables who made a pump handle of his arm.

Views on Strides in Aviation.

It was remarked to Mr. Wright that aviation has made wonderful strides since those early days when to the public mind even a short flight in an airplane was a marvelous event, worth going far to see and then to be talked about for weeks afterward.

Orville Wright's answer to this comment had the typical fatherly touch. Youth may see wonders in things that the father looks upon as commonplace.

"Wonderful strides?" said Mr. Wright. "Well, in a way aviation has improved, but there has been practically no change from the basic principles from which we started out. There have been refinements but not many fundamental improvements."

Many St. Louisans remember that as late as 1909 Glenn Curtiss, now almost as celebrated as Wright in the aviation field, kept a great crowd on tenterhooks of expectation all one afternoon and well into the dusk while he made repeated unsuccessful attempts to rise from the ground in an airplane. That has always stuck in the memory of St. Louis when it tries to fix the time when aviation hopped from the field of expectation and into the atmosphere of realization.

"And yet," said Mr. Wright, "there had been a great deal of flying before that time. As early as 1904 we had developed airplanes which carried two passengers."

Never "I," Always "We."

The father of aviation never says "I" in discussing the Wright achievements. It is always "we," in which form of expression he pays tribute to his gifted brother, Wilbur, who worked with him through the early experimental stages and well into the period of successful achievement and who died in 1912.

It was in the year before the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis that Orville and Wilbur Wright made secret experimental tests which resulted in one of the world's most momentous developments in locomotion. It has been said that the germ of the aviation idea was hatched in their brains when they were running a bicycle repair shop in Dayton, O. The bicycle at that time was in great vogue. The speed which a man could develop with his legs was considered marvelous. Both the Wrights were fond of bicycle riding and could go at almost a racing clip. Both were studious, observant and painstaking. They were among the Dayton public library's best customers. They read all the available technical works on the bicycle. It has been said, and never denied, that one of the first air phenomena which they noted was the deterrent effect of air pressure on a bicycle rider going at high speed. From that observataion it was a short jump to the idea that this deterrent pressure could be converted into lifting power if it could be exerted upward, instead of horizontally. This line of thought started the studious Wright brothers to reading up on wind pressure and its effects. It led them also into another equally important branch of study known to science as ballistics, which deals with the impact, path and velocity of projectiles.

Burned Midnight Oil.

"She goes as if she's been shot out of a gun" is a common expression at air meets when a plane comes whizzing by at more than 100 miles an hour.

That was just the way the Wright brothers looked at it when their aviation ideas began to take shape. Whatever must be propelled through the air must have bulk and shape and the length of its flight must depend on its resistance to the impeding air pressure.

The effects of this pressure on objects of various shapes and sizes were carefully studied. This involved much burning of midnight oil, as the Wright brothers were still devoting their daytime hours to their bicycle shop.

After considering the projected airship as a missile, shot through the air, and learning all they could about the pressure which must be overcome they next turned their attention to overcoming the pressure. An early thought in the development of the idea was the power of one man might generate enough resistance to the air to lift the bicycle if it were equipped with planes resembling those of a box kite. This, however, was never tried. They eliminated the bicycle from the experiment and substituted what has since become known as the glider. In its first form this was an enlarged box kite designed to hold up the weight of one man.

Study of Practical Value.

With several of these gliders the Wright brothers made a series of secret experiments at Kittyhawk, N. C. There on a great sand waste they lived the life of desert nomads for several months. When they returned they had mounted the first step to aviation. They had successfully made gliding flights which verified their theoretical conclusions as to the arrangement of planes which would direct the impeding air resistance upward and make it a sustaining instead of a restraining force.

"And," said Orville Wright yesterday, "that basic principle has not been improved upon. It is the principle which is fundamental in the construction of these airplanes which we see making such wonderful records today."

It was manifest to the Wright brothers that mere hopping about from peaks to valleys in a sand dune would not fill the bill as flying. As the saying is, they had much more up their sleeve. There must be something in addition to the man and the sustaining planes. There must be power. There must be an engine. And this engine and its housing and its human passenger must be considered as component parts of a missile being shot through the air. That was where their study of ballistics assumed a practical value.

The added engine and housing must be so balanced under, over or between the planes that the entire system would balance when driven against the impeding air. The structure also must be of such shape that the air would oppose the least resistance, thus leaving the wings free to exert the maximum of lifting and sustaining power.

So quickly and surely did the Wright brothers apply the knowledge which they gained through study and experiment that in the winter of 1903 each made a successful flight with an engine driven set of wings. Early in the following year the now famous Wright type of airplane had been evolved and before the close of that year they went up together in a machine and made the first successful two-passenger flight.

That was the year of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis. The fact that not a single airplane was flown at that exposition has been responsible for the belief here and in the middle west that the development of the airplane has been done since that time.

Planes About the Same.

"We could fly double all right in 1904," said Orville Wright yesterday. Except for some structural details the airships of 1904 did not greatly differ from those of today.

Not many persons know that the Wright brothers considered a flight here at the exposition. A prize had been offered to anyone who would make a flight around the Washington University group of buildings and land safely.

Wilbur Wright came here, looked over the ground and said the flight could be made, but nothing more was heard of it. At that time the Wright brothers were still engrossed in their scientific studies and were not easily prevailed upon to give flying exhibitions.

Just at that period the problem which gave them the greatest concern was the development of the best type of engine with which to propel their planes.

Discussing this phase of development yesterday, Orville Wright said: "The greatest advance in aviation has been the development of absolute reliability in the engine. I should say that this advance has been far greater than the advance in designing of other parts of the planes.

Original Designs Still Stand.

"Aside from the engines our original designs left little room for improvement. On what we call the engineering side of plane making the standards of 1904 have been very slightly improved on. By the engineering side I mean the shaping and placing of the planes for wind pressure resistance. About that we have learned almost all that is to be learned.

"As to construction there has been a marked improvement in the nature and dependability of the materials used. Lightness and strength have been found to be not incompatible. This applies especially to materials for wing coverings, struts and wiring. Along with the development of speed came the necessity not only for more powerful and reliable engines but for stouter construction of the planes and framework. These have been incorporated without in the least departing from our basic ideas. Originally we did not figure on high speed. That was to come later. The interesting point is that the original plane designs have demonstrated their adaptability to all requirements. Equipped with the highest powered speed engines the plane design still justifies itself. It is equally adaptable to the lifting of much greater weights than in those early days we ever dreamed a plane would be called upon to lift."

Convinced That Airplanes Can Be Safely Operated at Higher Speed Than Has Yet Been Attained, but How Much Higher Not Prepared to Say—Doesn't Think Much of Giant Planes Such as the Barling Bomber.

Conversation turned to the huge Barling bomber, largest airplane in the world which was a never-failing source of wonder at the great St. Louis air meet.

"There are some of us who do not think much of these giant planes," said the father of aviation. "What I mean is that we don't believe in building big planes just to show how big we can make them. The only justification of a machine like the Barling bomber is that its ability to carry a bomb of tremendous weight makes it a good thing to have around if an emergency ever arises in which we will find it necessary to drop a bomb of that weight. As a scientific development in aviation it need not be considered as an advance in aviation. It merely applies the basic ideas on a large scale."

Silent on Speed Phase.

There has been much speculation as to the speed limit which air flyers might be expected to attain. In a recent interview Glenn Curtiss said it would be possible to make an airplane which would travel 500 miles an hour, but he added that a plane going at that speed probably would catch fire from friction with the air and be consumed.

Orville Wright was unwilling to discuss this phase from a scientific standpoint.

"That is largely a matter of speculation," he said. "I am convinced that airplanes can be safely operated at higher speed than has yet been attained, but how much higher I am not prepared to say. As to the speed point at which a plane would catch fire, I have not carried my studies that far."

Certain it is that the Wright brothers never figured the possibility of catching fire from air friction when they were gliding over the sand dunes at Kittyhawk—any more than they dreamed that the results of those experiments in "hopping off" would one day set the world afire with a flame of appreciation for their work and cause one of them to go down in history as "the father of aviation."

RANKS OF 'IRRECONCILABLES' WILL BE STRENGTHENED BY RETURN OF HARVEY AND CHILD

Retiring Ambassadors to Come Home More Confirmed in Views That U. S. Should Stay Aloof From Europe, Friends Hear.

By David Lawrence,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—TWO powerful voices will be added to the "irreconcilable group in American politics when Ambassadors George Harvey and Richard Washburn Child return home. Both men, after a period of first-hand acquaintance with European problems and old world diplomacy, from London to the Near East, are coming back to America more confirmed in their views that the United States should stay out of Europe than they were before they left.

Word to this effect has reached friends of the two Ambassadors on this side of the Atlantic. Mr. Harvey originally was one of the most bitter critics of the League of Nations and his first speech in London was an announcement that the Harding administration would have nothing to do with the league or any of its creations, either directly or indirectly. Mr. Harvey was compelled to modify his views somewhat when President Harding came out for the Permanent Court of International Justice, which was created by the league, and while he did not like the idea he did not break with Mr. Harding, but gave out a diplomatically worded statement to the effect that he saw nothing inconsistent in the President's position.

Harvey Against Foreign Aid.

Both Harvey and Child assisted Warren Harding in the preparation of his 1920 speeches at Marion and they both urged him to steer away from European questions as much as possible. Ambassador Harvey always has been a member of that group of American literary men who cherished a traditional fondness for Great Britain, and the belief prevails now that he comes back just as friendly to Great Britain, but not exactly won over to the idea of any special arrangement for a world league. There was a time when he advocated a new type of association of nations with the principle embodied in it of investigation of disputes under the Bryan treaty plan of nine months' wait before hostilities are begun, but the shifting currents in American politics make it seem likely that Mr. Harvey will not line up with those who have a formula for co-operation between Europe and America but a policy of continued nationalism.

Child Favors Nationalism.

As for Mr. Child, he has become a disciple of the theory of intense nationalism which is sweeping Europe today. He thinks the Fascisti movement is an excellent example of the reawakening of the virile spirit in nations and that democracies can achieve their greatest objectives by following the doctrine of Mussolini's party in Italy. Premier Poincare, in France, is following the nationalistic theory of getting all possible advantage for France, irrespective of the effect on Germany or the rest of the world and there are Britons who feel their Government should withdraw from the continent and take care of the home problems that are pressing for attention. The opposing school insists that Continental economic conditions must be corrected before domestic affairs can be improved.

And so runs the conflict between the policy of isolation or national aloofness and formulas of co-operation and international conference. Messrs. Child and Harvey are leaders in the nationalist school and they have on their side in the American embassies in Europe Ambassador Alexander P. Moore of Spain, one of Hiram Johnson's original boosters. On the other side are Ambassador Allan B. Houghton, American Ambassador to Germany, who favors a more active program of co-operation with Europe and aid for Germany, and Myron T. Herrick, American Ambassador to France, who feels that American moral support should be thrown to the French and that America should assume a position of alert interest in European affairs. It will be interesting to see what types will succeed Messrs. Harvey and Child.

ST. LOUIS BAPTIST ASSOCIATION TO HOLD 106TH ANNUAL SESSION

The St. Louis Baptist Association will hold its 106th annual session at the Water Tower Baptist Church Thursday and Friday. The association was organized in 1817, meeting for the first time in the home of the Rev. T. R. Musick, a few miles west of the present city limits.

The first non-Catholic church to be organized in this vicinity was the Free Baptist Church, Pattonville, St. Louis County, which has continued its organization throughout the years. The Rev. O. E. Morey is the present pastor. The St. Louis Association is now composed of 27 churches, one new church, the Bethel Baptist, having been organized in St. Louis within the last year. It will apply for membership in the association. The total church membership represented in the association is more than 11,000.

Principal out-of-town speakers at the annual session will be Dr. W. O. Lewis, a former St. Louis pastor, who has been the representative of the Baptist Foreign Mission Society in Europe for several years, and Dr. H. C. Waymen, president of William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Too Many Grouches.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I PRESUME there are some worthy purposes served by this column, but it at times becomes overburdened with plaints from disgruntled young men who, because the home folks said many nice things and did many handsome things during the time they were serving their country, and afterwards, have from unsound reasoning and shiftless dispositions come to the conclusion that their life's work is done and from henceforth the Government or anyone who is better equipped financially than they should provide for them.

The straw that broke this private's back and is responsible for this letter is the wail from "An Ex Myself" in the column of Oct. 1 in regard to two ex-service men who have been soliciting financial backing from business men for a business venture on which they have embarked. If they have a sound business proposition why should they bring in the old song, "Ex-Service Men"? If they haven't, why should they expect backing except from those who belong on someone's "sucker list"?

Further, the harpoon has been thrown promiscuously at the Veterans' Bureau. I personally know of instances where men are receiving more assistance than they are entitled to, but none of the worthy cases being neglected. The Veterans' Bureau should be encouraged in keeping the moochers away from the trough instead of allowing unjust criticism to go unchallenged.

A BUCK PRIVATE.

A Movie Theater Improvement.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHILE the producers of moving pictures are scouring the country for new talent, in the way of actors and scenario writers, the exhibitors are still spending fortunes on new houses, having the same mechanical defects that have existed from time immemorial.

Let us try and visualize the home of the silent drama as it may be in 1925, or perhaps sooner, who knows? Mr. Hodcarrier, with his family of three, alights from his limousine at the curb, and enters a brilliantly lighted room, below the level of the street. After securing tickets and entering an inclosure, they find several vacant seats before them, scattered about the room. Selecting those which seem best fitted for their purpose, they are seated, and an attendant, by a mechanical device, raises them to the floor above, where the play is in progress.

There they remain seated and have an uninterrupted view of the screen from start to finish.

When the great climax of the play arrives, where the hero stands flourishing a custard pie, with the villain but a few feet away, no more will it happen that several human obstructions, looking as high as a mountain, will flit by in succession, shutting off all view of the scene. No more will their souls be torn in anguish as to the fate of that pie, and when the screen is again revealed showing both the villain and the pie missing. No more will they despairingly wonder whether the hero with the misplaced orebrow decorated his rival's countenance with the missing pastry or whether he ate it.

Mr. Tired Business Man, when he is ready to leave, will not longer be forced to grope his way toward the exit, stumbling over various portions of human anatomy in his progress, with apologies on his lips and curses in his heart. He will remain seated and, reaching down at his side, release a small lever, thus noiselessly and safely sinking down into the entrance room below.

There he may go over to the cigar stand and select a smoke, or perhaps treat himself to a near-beer highball. He may then resume his way homeward, satisfied with a well-spent evening, with his composure unruffled and his corns untrampled.

O. SPAULDING.

Free Street Cars Proposed.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IF the threatened foreclosure against the U. R. system takes place, the City of St. Louis should bid in the property and operate it with a small service charge until such time as the people are willing to pay the cost of operation out of public revenue.

The most sane and economic method of operating public utilities is to furnish free service, as is done in the public schools. If no fare is charged, two-thirds of the pay roll can be eliminated and the cost will not exceed 2 cents per passenger, giving every passenger a seat. Every manufacturer and wholesaler is directly interested in having the cheapest service possible, because the street car fare of every employe must be added to the selling price of products and passed on to the ultimate consumer in St. Louis' trade territory.

No one has made any money out of the street railway business except a bunch of financiers and lawyers. Shall we continue to add $12,000,000 annually to the selling price of our goods solely for their benefit? Let's get sane and operate our transportation system without fares. Let's do something once that will make the country talk about St. Louis in a manner in which we can have some pride. Let's have a new slogan: "Free street cars! Everybody ride!"

M. KUHN.

WHY THE KLAN MUST GO.

The men's club of a local Presbyterian church asks the Post-Dispatch to give the reasons why the Ku Klux Klan should be suppressed, as a basis for a debate, pro and con, on this important topic. In order that others who may be looking for such reasons may be informed, the following facts are cited:

The modern Ku Klux Klan, as to disguises, masks and methods, is modeled on the old klan, which was founded to prevent negro domination in politics in the Southern states after the Civil War, and which was disbanded because it became a system of terrorism and brutal mob vengeance. The modern klan, knowing that the masked and sheeted figures had been a source of terror and had been a potent aid in the midnight mob atrocities of the original klan, deliberately chose to revive this hideous disguise and in doing so inevitably revived and has vastly magnified the evils of the old klan.

Numerous atrocious crimes have been committed by mobs, either in full or part klan disguise—crimes so brutal and shocking that the country has stood aghast at their recital. The klan officials have disavowed responsibility for these crimes. Where klan members have been convicted, klan leaders have charged that such crimes are committed by weaker brethren, and that the klan does not countenance such acts, but is ready to dismiss from membership any persons so convicted. But klan leaders themselves have been proven to have instigated these crimes in some cases, and even to have taken leading parts in whippings and other lawless acts. The klan is responsible.

The klan, calling itself an invisible empire and arrogating to itself the task of purging the American Government, national and local, of corruption, is in several states, through propaganda or by working on the fears of officials in office, gradually seizing or bringing under its control public offices, until today we have klan Judges, klan Sheriffs, klan militiamen and policemen, and even, it is claimed, numerous klan Congressmen. Klan boosters have claimed that the Cabinet at Washington is becoming a klan tool.

It is evident, as Gov. Walton says, that the existing visible government and the klan "invisible empire," with such aims and objects, cannot exist together. If the klan is to triumph, the American system of government must go under. The American Government, based on the Constitution, is for all the people, regardless of race or religious differences. The klan, while disavowing hatred of Catholics, Jews, negroes or "aliens," has for its basic doctrine that the only Americans fit to govern this country are the so-called "100-per-cent, white, native-born" Americans. If this idea prevails, as the klan intends, no Catholic, Jew, negro or naturalized American could hold office. Millions of men and women who either fought side by side in the World War or gave their devoted services to their country as nurses or in other public work would be disfranchised. The Ku Klux doctrine, disregarding the methods of its application as revealed in court records, is narrow, bigoted and un-American.

Besides its antagonism to certain religions and races, the Ku Klux Klan has assumed the right to censor the people's morals and punish what klan leaders hold are infractions of the moral code, without resort to the law. This is, perhaps, their most abhorrent course. It lends itself to all sorts of violence and revenge, leads to atrocious wrongs against individuals, and would completely upset the organized legal machinery and result in chaos. The klan claims that this course of action is necessary because the law is too slow and too lenient. The answer to this, of course, is that the legal machinery must be improved by the people; not that it must be superseded by a masked secret organization, working in disguise, and without authority from the people, from whom, under the Constitution, all power must be derived. The klan, allowing its full claims as to numbers, is but a very small and insignificant part of the population, and its triumph would be a triumph of a minority, as much so as the triumph of the bolshevists in Russia or the Fascists in Italy. Popular government would be at end. Democracy would be no more.

The arrogant claim of the Ku Klux Klan that it was needed in order to prevent Catholics, Jews, negroes or "aliens" from getting control of the Government is not based on anything but pure assumption. Since the Government was founded, it has been administered with more or less success by men of any or no religion. The Ku Klux would make a man's religion a test for his eligibility to public office. And they claim this to be 100 per cent Americanism!

ANOTHER ROAD SCANDAL.

"An agreement between bidders to stifle competition" is the language used by Attorney-General Barrett in describing a deal alleged to have been entered into by A. C. Crow and Albert Creek on road projects in Dunklin County. It is charged that Crow agreed to refrain from bidding, in consideration of which Creek was to pay him $2000 and 10 cents a cubic yard for gravel. Crow, it is said, had secured options on all the available gravel pits in the vicinity of the road projects.

The Attorney-General's office is reported to have come into possession of the written agreement through the action of Crow, who surrendered the document "in order to show up the situation." If this fact should be established in the investigation that has been ordered, Crow, a former Congressman, will have to be credited with praiseworthy motives, whatever may be thought of his methods.

It is a question, too, with the Attorney-General whether other persons may not have been involved in this "agreement." Under the circumstances that is a proper subject for investigation, as is also the matter of annulling the contract let to Creek by the State Highway Commission.

The whole unsavory affair, following the identical bids submitted recently by a number of supposedly competitive cement companies, should arouse the Highway Commission and, indeed, the entire administration to the necessity of vigilance in all its negotiations.

Financed as it is by the progressive citizens of Missouri, the road construction program is an enterprise in which they are keenly interested. The project, seemingly, should appeal to the public-spiritedness and integrity of everyone, including contractors and supply houses. It is evident, however, that the cement combination regards the proposition from a strictly mercenary viewpoint and is determined to profit by charging all the traffic will bear. If this mean and lawless spirit is contaminating contractors, if there is a general determination all along the road to gouge the people to the limit, Gov. Hyde ought to tackle the situation, promptly, and with bare fists.

SOME MISSOURI RANKINGS.

"Conservatively and safely speaking," says a statement by the Missouri State Board of Agriculture, Missouri ranks fifth in agriculture out of the 48 states of the Union. In many things, the board states, Missouri ranks higher, and in a few it is always first. Missourians may be proud of this rank when they consider the number, size and quality of such agricultural states as Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Kansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Texas and California. Missouri is also better favored with large rich cities than most of the states mentioned. Cities mean markets and great revenue resources.

But after congratulating ourselves on our wealth and resources, let us ask a soul-searching question or two. Where do we stand in rank of education political institutions and good roads? True, we have set about to correct all these weaknesses, but the job is far from finished. Although the rating of the Russell Sage Foundation giving us thirty-fourth rank in schools has been competently attacked, none will contest that our educational rank is far from the rank of the State in agriculture or general wealth. We are to be given the opportunity soon of voting on a revised Constitution. Our road program is well launched, but there are formidable obstacles yet to be surmounted.

At the bottom of most of our shortcomings is politics. They have blocked good roads and good rural schools. And want of good roads and good rural schools has been the bulwark of provincial, partisan politics. Improvement in one of our weak spots will brace up all the other weak spots. The only thing to do is to keep at the job. Knowledge of our high rank in agriculture should arouse Missouri's ambition to achieve high rank in all fields of endeavor.

THE COMRADE.

IT is averred that this occurred
Long years ago in Illinois—
A simple tale that I have heard
These thirty years now, man and boy.

Along a road that scarcely showed
At early dawn an old man went;
Then far across the fields he sowed;
And farther down a long descent.

With resolute will he made a hill,
Which wearily he rested on—
A lonely shadow standing still,
A silhouette against the dawn.

There was a time that, in his prime,
Such walks were made less wearily—
When, with a hundred hills to climb,
He went with Sherman to the sea.

This was the day the lifeless clay
Of that great Captain, westward borne,
Far from the east, should pass that way,
Far to the west, at early morn.

A distant hail—an echoing vale!
A deepening thunder in the wood!
The vibrant air—the singing rail!
At close attention now he stood.

Out of the night a glaring light
Swiftly followed the gleaming track;
And in its wake, with roaring flight,
The long, dim coaches draped in black.

His spirit stirred, but not a word
Came from the thin lips, pale and mute;
The hand was raised—the vision blurred;
The Comrade made a last salute.

WHEN ST. LOUIS HAD THREE STREETS.

THE following paragraphs are copied from "The Western Gazeteer, or Emigrants' Directory," said directory being gotten up by one Samuel R. Brown and published by H. C. Southwick, Auburn, N. Y., in the year 1817. The directory was part of an ancient library at the Maclay home at Tipton, Mo., built in 1857. We are indebted to Miss Agnes D. Drummond for the copy, which runs:

FLORISSANT, a flourishing French village, is situated on the north side of the Missouri about 12 miles above Bellefontaine.

ST. CHARLES is a handsome village, settled by the French, but at present containing many American families. It contains about 1000 inhabitants.

ST. LOUIS, the largest town of the territory and at the present seat of government, stands on a high bank, 18 miles below the entrance of the Missouri and in N. lat. 38.39; the buildings are scattered along three parallel streets, extending upwards of two miles along the river, and each rising above the other, which gives to the town a neat and romantic appearance. Most of the houses are built of stone. Almost every house has an extensive garden or park around which high stone walls are built. The population exceeds 3000. There is a ferry from this town to the Illinois side of the Mississippi, from whence passes the main road to Kaskaskia.

CARONDELET is a small French village six miles west of St. Louis in the direction of the mines.

SIXTY-SIX TRILLION MELONS.

Below is a little figuring which I have done in connection with a watermelon:

You often hear of the enormous rate at which flies, insects and certain bacteria reproduce themselves. You have also heard of the man who began with one grain of wheat, planted it and harvested the yield, planted this yield the next year and continued this operation, sowing the following year the seed he had harvested the year before, for five years. I forget the amount of wheat, but he had a lot of wheat at the end of the fifth year. This story does not concern itself with flies, rabbits or wheat, but tells a tale of a Missouri watermelon.

We will begin with the assumption that one seed will produce two 40-pound watermelons. We will plant this one seed next spring, 1924, harvest our two 40-pound melons and eat them, save the seeds and plant them in the spring of 1925. We will continue this procedure until the spring of 1928. At that time, if we planted four seeds to the hill and the hills eight feet apart each way, we would require an area equal to one-tenth of the surface of the earth to plant the seeds. If each of these seeds raised the official two 40-pound watermelons, we would have 66,355,200,000,000 melons to eat, or approximately 33,178 watermelons to every man, woman and child in the world. If each of these persons ate one melon per day, it would require 91 years to consume our crop. But, if we saved all our seed from the fifth year crop and planted them, we would need an area 120 times the area of the surface of the earth. Some watermelon field.

Tobacco as a Pain Easer.

In your article of Sept. 28, under the heading of "Just a Minute," you mention the denunciation of tobacco by the plant wizard, Luther Burbank. There is no doubt that tobacco, like all other indulgencies, is injurious if used to excess. Personally, I have smoked either a pipe or cigars all my life, and have always thoroughly enjoyed the solace it gives.

I also know from an incident I witnessed many years ago, that some men can stand terrific pain if they can only smoke.

At that time I was the Mayor of a small Western town of about 5000 inhabitants. One Sunday I was seated on my porch reading, when the City Marshal came and told me that he had a tramp down at the city hall on a cot, who had slipped in getting off a box car and had fallen under the wheels and his leg was crushed below the knee.

It was a very hot day in August, and I found this man, being fanned by a sympathizer, lying on the cot in a shady place, smoking a cigarette. He was an Austrian, and spoke broken English. I told him I would soon have the doctor to ease him. We carried him to a furnished room that I hired at once, as we had no hospital.

When the doctor told him that he would have to give him an anesthetic, as he would have to cut off the limb below the knee, he cried out "No, no! Give me a cigareet, I stand him. I no sleep, only cigareet." So I stood by and put cigarettes in his mouth and lit them, all through the operation.

As the doctor worked, he clenched the bed clothes, while the perspiration stood out in beads on his forehead, and he grimly puffed and puffed.

So you see that tobacco has its uses to help relieve pain, as well as a solace to the tired business man. JOHN J. SUMMERSBY.

THE FUNCTION OF THE CHURCH.

From the Columbus Dispatch.

THE function of the church in state, national and international affairs was discussed recently by the Rev. John H. Lathrop of Brooklyn, before the Unitarian General Conference. "We will have no time or enthusiasm to give to the church, unless it gets to work on a program of social service for remedying the present practices of society," he said, adding that the church must "create the instruments by means of which disputes of nations may be brought to the settlement which resort to arms has never accomplished." If this means, as it seems, that the church is directly to do all these things, then existing organizations of philanthropy and international peace are to be cast aside and the church as such is to take command and bring heaven down to earth, it is putting upon the church a large and unnecessary order. It is wiser to regard the church as a great power-house which is sending the current of right doing and right living to all the agencies of good. So many such agencies now existing, there is no recognition of the church, and yet the inspiration for all their good works has come from the church. There is no doubt that the power-house has been out of order and that the current proceeding from it has been weak and ineffective. What is needed is a correction of these defects, more power religion in the pulpit and pews, and a more intelligent presentation of the gospel, which is now sufficiently attractive if it is preached right. If these things right at hand were done effectively the current would run strong into all the affairs of men, and the utmost would be accomplished.

AMERICAN COLLEGE GIRLS.

From Daily Science News Bulletin (Washington).

DR. CLELIA DUEL MOSHER, medical adviser of women in Stanford University, declares in a report in The Journal of the American Medical Association that less and lighter clothing, more physical activity and bigger appetites have made the college girls of today larger and stronger than those of three decades ago. She has analyzed the results of thousands of measurements taken on women in three prominent colleges, Stanford, Vassar and Smith, and as a result believes that the increase in height and weight is due largely to the exercise indulged in and the more healthful clothing worn by the modern woman. A study of the physical activities of women at Vassar shows that, during the years 1894 to 1905, only a quarter of the entering girls had engaged in no form of sport before entering college, while from 1916 to 1920 only six-tenths of one per cent were so classified. With increasing physical activity a change to lighter and looser clothing was made. The increased height and weight are explained by the argument that increased physical activity and lighter-weight clothing create increased appetite and permit better functioning of the bodily organs. "It is time," says Dr. Mosher, "that we cease thinking in terms of the delicacy and weakness of women. This splendid modern woman, grown taller and more vigorous because free from restricting fashions of dress, eats more and consequently eats more, and has become better fitted to become the mother of strong sons and daughters, the promise of a stronger race." During 30 years, 4170 women who have passed through Stanford University show an increase of 1.2 inches in average height. Dr. Mosher found. Out of 7044 women passing through Vassar in 37 years, there is a gradual increase of 2.5 inches in height, and the same measurements are confirmed by the examination of 18,243 women during a period of 23 years at Smith.

CITY LEGAL DEPA... LIKELY TO FILE ... REHEARING I...

State Supreme Court Rule... nance Is Null, Being a... Use of Private...

Following the State Supreme Court's ruling that the St. Louis zoning ordinance is null, the City Law Department, in all probability, will file a motion for a rehearing. The court held that, under the Missouri Constitution, cities have no power to restrict the use of private property without compensation when the end in view is esthetic and has no direct relation to the health, safety, comfort or welfare of the inhabitants.

First Associate City Counselor Senti stated that the ruling means that unless an industry or business enterprise is proven to effect the health, safety and welfare, under the general police powers, of a certain neighborhood, that neighborhood cannot be restricted against business property.

He gathered that inference, he said, from the published account of the decision, and if it proves to be correct, he added, a conference will be called this week between the City Law Department and counsel representing the Chamber of Commerce and other civic bodies, at which steps will be taken to ask for a rehearing.

Decision of Judges, 4 to 3.

The court's action was taken in three St. Louis cases, one involving an alleged violation of the law and the other two an attack on the validity of the ordinance. The decision of the judges was 4 to 3 in each case.

Chief Justice Woodson, Judges Walker and David E. Blair concurred in the opinion holding the ordinance invalid, and Judge Graves concurred in the result but filed a separate opinion. Judges White, Ragland and James T. Blair dissented. The opinion invalidating the ordinance was written by Former Judge Higbee when Division No. 2 of the Court ruled adversely on the ordinance in February, 1922. He now is a Commissioner of the Supreme Court.

The three cases were the City of St. Louis against Morris Evraiff and Morris Friedman, charging violation of the ordinance, and two mandamus actions brought by the Penrose Investment Co. and Better Built Home & Mortgage Co., against Director of Public Safety McKelvey to compel issuance of building permits for buildings not conforming to the provisions of the ordinance.

Constitutional Amendment Drafted.

Fearing such a contingency as that created today, St. Louis delegates to the constitutional convention have caused that body to prepare for submission an amendment to the Constitution which would remove this bar to zoning ordinances. The proposed amendment which will be voted in February provides that: "Every city shall have the power to provide for the division of the territory within its boundaries into zones or districts and for the regulation and restriction in the use of the land and structures within such zones or districts to the extent and in the manner provided by general law."

A dissenting opinion was written by Judge White in the Penrose case, applicable to the others. "I am unable to agree with the conclusion reached in the majority opinion," Judge White wrote. "The effect of that conclusion, instead of protecting the citizens of St. Louis in the enjoyment of their property rights, is to render the city powerless to protect them.

"The person's use of whose property is restricted, alone is considered. The great majority, the enjoyment of whose property requires such restrictions, are ignored. In balancing the individual against the public good, the latter is given no weight. The right of the city to provide for future growth and development by dividing its territory into residence districts, commercial districts, industrial districts, etc., is denied. The Legislature cannot invest the city with the power to segregate its factories."

"Nothing Unfair or Arbitrary."

Judge White stated further that neither the Board of Aldermen nor the City Plan Commission of St. Louis had done anything arbitrary or unfair in the cases pending and he held that the writs of mandamus sought in the two cases attacking the validity of the ordinances should be denied.

The St. Louis zoning ordinance, effective July 15, 1918, divided the city into five districts, known as first residence, second residence, commercial, industrial and unrestricted districts, in an effort to enable the development and beautification of the city along systematic lines.

Death of the measure today is the end of a fight, whose first round was in Police Court in St. Louis on June 5, 1919. On that day, Morris Evraiff and Morris Friedman, who operated a junk yard under the name of the International Iron and Metal Co. at 2026-2028 O'Fallon street, were haled to Police Court. They were charged with violating that provision of the zoning ordinance which placed the O'Fallon street address in the industrial district and forbade the operation of junk yards therein. The Judge found for their favor, however, and they were discharged.

The city appealed to the Court of Criminal Correction, where 15 days later, it lost again. Judge Chauncey I. Krueger sustaining a demurrer to the complaint on the ground that the ordinance was "not authorized by statute or law of the State, and is unreasonable and violative of certain sections of the Federal and State Constitutions."

CITY LEGAL DEPARTMENT LIKELY TO FILE MOTION FOR REHEARING IN ZONING CASE

State Supreme Court Rules That St. Louis Ordinance Is Null, Being a Restriction of the Use of Private Property.

Judge White stated further that neither the Board of Aldermen nor the City Plan Commission of St. Louis had done anything arbitrary or unfair in the cases pending, and he held that the writs of mandamus sought in the two cases attacking the validity of the ordinances should be denied.

The St. Louis zoning ordinance, effective July 15, 1918, divided the city into five districts, known as first residence, second residence, commercial, industrial and unrestricted districts, in an effort to enable the development and beautification of the city along systematic lines.

Death of the measure today is the end of a fight, whose first round was in Police Court in St. Louis on June 5, 1919. On that day, Morris Evraiff and Morris Friedman, who operated a junk yard under the name of the International Iron and Metal Co. at 2026-2028 O'Fallon street, were haled to Police Court. Krueger sustaining a demurrer to the complaint on the ground that the ordinance was "not authorized by statute or law of the State, and is unreasonable and violative of certain sections of the Federal and State Constitutions.

The city then took its second appeal, which brought the case to the State Supreme Court. There, in Division No. 2, it lost again on Feb. 18, 1922, when Judge Higbee, with Judges Walker and David E. Blair concurring, held the ordinance in violation of State and Federal Constitutions.

Kansas City Zoning Plan.

Such a storm arose, however, that the three Judges participating in the unanimous decision consented to sustain a motion of the city of St. Louis to transfer the case to the court en banc, where it has lain since.

The original defendants dropped out long ago, going out of business but the litigation has been kept alive by business interests opposed to zoning.

Meanwhile, another method of zoning had come into question through attack on a Kansas City ordinance authorizing zoning by means of benefit districts, a plan based upon the principle of eminent domain. Under this plan owners are compensated for property depreciated in value by zoning restrictions. That ordinance first was held to be invalid; then, after the Supreme Court had given a rehearing was declared to be sound, Justice White wrote the final opinion in the Kansas City litigation, known as the Leibi case, Justices Graves, Ragland and James T. Blair and Chief Justice Woodson concurring. Judges Walker and David E. Blair dissented.

Other Attacks on Ordinance.

While this was going on, two other attacks against the St. Louis ordinance were begun. A writ of mandamus against Director of Public Safety McKelvey was sought in Supreme Court, to compel issuance of a permit for erection of a four-family apartment building on Skinker road, opposite Forest Park. In the other the Penrose Investment Co. asked for a similar order to force McKelvey to permit construction of an electrically driven ice plant in a second residence district. The zoning ordinance prohibited erection of these structures on the sites selected.

The three cases were argued in May of this year before the entire court, it being the third time that the Evraiff case had been argued there. All three then were referred to Judge Walker, who whote a ten-page opinion in the Penrose case, following the same lines as Judge Higbee in the original Evraiff opinion. In the apartment building proceeding and the Evraiff case, Judge Walker contented himself with two paragraph memorandum opinions. He found "no reason for differing from the conclusion reached by Judge Higbee" in the latter, and declared issues in the former to be the same as those in the Evraiff and Penrose cases, so ordered them determined similarly.

Question of Police Power.

The vexing problem in these three cases, Walker says, is the question, is the ordinance valid in that it constitutes such an exercise of the police power as will sustain the limitation therein prescribed in regard to the use of private property by the owner of same?"

Police power, broadly interpreted, authorizes cities to prescribe regulations for protection of the peace, public health, morals and safety and to promote the general welfare. Judge Walker held. When these are accomplished, the limit of the police power contemplated by the Federal and State constitutions and the charter of the city of St. Louis has been reached, he argues.

Courts of the land, although unwilling to acknowledge beauty as a justification, are giving more and more weight to the consideration of fitness and propriety i. a man's use of his own, Judge Walker conceded.

Not for Esthetic Purposes.

"While their reasoning recognizes the esthetic, their rulings, following the principles which had their origin in the common law concerning individual and property rights, are definitely utilitarian," he added.

"The arbitrary exclusion of a definite business from a prescribed district, therefore, is in excess of the police power of the city, which only extends to the regulation of employments prejudicial to the public safety, health, morals and good government of the citizens and ends where their public interests are not beneficially served thereby," he quoted from a prior decision of the Missouri Court. His deduction is that police power "cannot sanction the confiscation of private property for esthetic purposes."

Judge Higbee arrived at much the same conclusion in the original Evraiff opinion. "Regulations based on esthetic considerations are not in accord with the spirit of our democratic institutions," he declared. As to the St. Louis ordinance in particular, so far as it was involved, he held it is "unreasonable and oppressive; that it imposes restrictions upon the use of private property that have no relation to the health, safety, comfort or welfare of the inhabitants of the city; that it is an unlawful deprivation of the use of property without compensation or due process of law, a denial of the enjoyment of the gains of their own industry, and that the enactment of the ordinance is not within the powers delegated to the city."

If any of the businesses zoned out of defined districts of the city constitute a menace to the health, comfort, safety or morals of the citizens, they may be attacked as nuisances, Judge Higbee ruled. But they may not be moved against on what he terms esthetic grounds.

The zoning ordinance established five classes of districts, prescribing the use to which property in each class might be put. It also defined the permissible area and height of buildings in the districts. The districts were scattered over the city and, in some cases, mixed, because it was provided that buildings already constructed or under construction were not affected.

The Districts Provided.

The districts provided were: First Residence, for homes almost exclusively; Second Residence, for apartment houses, churches, hospitals and other public or semipublic buildings; Commercial, for stores, shops and business establishments generally, but not factories. Industrial, for factories; Unrestricted, for any use. Buildings of higher classes were made permissible in lower class districts. The Evraiff-Friedman junk shop was in an industrial district.

The ordinance became a pattern for similar laws in other American cities.

Mayor Kiel said the zoning ordinance was passed on the theory that it would protect property values and help create a greater city.

Gov. Walton's Own Story of His Fight on Ku Klux Klan

When the police came they conferred with the "Kowardly Kurs" and, upon learning it was a klan party, the police returned to their stations and the neighbors rescued the children and extinguished the fire.

The husband and wife were taken out of town and whipped. The blanket was removed from the wife and she was whipped to unconsciousness. Upon recovering consciousness, she found her nightgown was saturated with blood, and these hounds of hell were calmly speculating on whether she was dead or alive. She was about to become a mother and, after crawling home, was prematurely delivered of a child, which after a few hours died.

4. A married man, member of the Klan, did not want his relations with a widow interfered with. A single man started to pay her attention. He could not well report the relation of this man with the widow, so he had a fellow Klansman report. The "intruder" was taken out and lashed with a piece of heavy baling wire, double and redoubled. Every stroke tore flesh from his bones. He is now a helpless and a hopeless cripple.

"Truthful Lying."

These few illustrations must suffice, as the testimony comprises several thousand pages. Upwards of 40 Klansmen now stand charged with similar crimes, from "Grand Dragon" down to poor dupes who did his bidding. We found numerous ministers of the gospel who had supplanted the cross of Christ with the flaming cross, who upheld the Klan and had become active members therein. The State Klan adopted a rule that any Klansman summoned for jury duty was thereby automatically suspended from the Klan. This enabled him to lie under oath and perjure himself. When a law enforcing officer was asked if he was a Klansman, propounding of the question automatically suspended him, and he could "truthfully lie" and reply "No," and after so "truthfully lying" he was automatically reinstated.

We were regaled with the spectacle of a Judge of District Court, a prosecuting attorney and a Sheriff denying in newspapers membership in the Klan. But when subpenaed before a military court and confronted with the evidence they were forced to admit membership. We find the same Judge holding Klan meetings in his courtroom at night.

Proposal of Impeachment.

The Governor must be impeached at all hazards. Under our law, citizens may petition for a grand jury. Klansman circulated such a petition, presented it to this klansman District Judge, who ordered the klan Sheriff and the klan Court Clerk to go into the clerk's office and, behind locked doors, draw the grand jury from the jury box, in which names of prospective jurors had been placed by a klan Jury Commissioner.

Then charges were preferred by a klan Prosecuting Attorney, who could produce witnesses who could "honestly perjure" themselves. An indictment was returned, with a klan trial jury, selected by the klan Clerk and Sheriff, the trial would be had before the honorable Judge who could so "honestly lie," and prosecution would be conducted by the honorable Prosecuting Attorney, who could also "lie like a gentleman." Martial law defeated their ends.

Recourse was had to the Legislature. The Constitution provides for convening of the Legislature every two years in regular session and in extraordinary session only when called by the Governor. The slimy trail of the serpent was found in the Legislature's halls. Klan members in the Lower House controlled that body by a small majority. They attempted unlawfully to meet and were checked by the militia. They then attempted to take advantage of the initiative law that provides for amendment to the Constitution by the vote of the people.

This petition was prepared and circulated by Campbell Russell, acknowledged klansman, who placed it in the hands of klansmen for the purpose of obtaining a sufficient number of signatures to entitle them to vote on the question of permitting the Legislature to convene itself for the purpose of impeaching the Governor.

The Special Election.

Although thousands of forgeries, duplications and false affidavits were discovered, the klan Secretary of State declared the petition sufficient and Tuesday, Oct. 2, they attempted to hold an election thereon, without complying with any one section of the law governing State-wide elections, and with upwards of 2000 armed klan gunmen in one county, deputized by the klan Sheriff and stationed at the polls, they rolled up a vast majority for this measure. As not more than 30 per cent of the total State vote was cast, the question of the legality of this alleged election will be determined by our Supreme Court.

Men cannot insure their property against fire and collect insurance if they oppose the klan. We know of one instance where a dwelling was saturated with oil and the house and furniture totally destroyed. The owner had gained displeasure of the klan. He made proof of loss, but had not recovered on his policy.

We need money for development but money invested in Oklahoma will never be safe under klan rule. But, if God gives me strength, this hydra-headed monster called the "Invisible Empire" will be crushed effectively and completely and capital can find safe, profitable investment within our borders.

I have determined that the klan, "invisible government" must unmask and give way to visible government or leave the State, or I must seek habitation elsewhere.

BIG GRAIN ELEVATOR TO BE OPENED OCT. 15

Structure, Erected by Missouri Pacific, Will Have Capacity of 2,000,000 Bushels.

The new 2,000,000-bushel-capacity grain elevator erected by the Missouri Pacific Railroad on the river front at Primm street, in South St. Louis, will be formally opened Oct. 15, when the first grain will be placed in the structure, although it will be a few weeks later before the entire plant will be in operation.

The building, which is constructed entirely of re-inforced concrete and steel, is said to be absolutely fire-proof, and will be, by far, the largest grain elevator ever erected in St. Louis. It will be the tallest structure of the city, rising 225 feet above the ground, which exceeds the height of the Railway Exchange Building.

It will be operated by the J. H. Teasdale Commission Co. of St. Louis under leasehold. The designing and construction was supervised by the Folwell-Ahlskog Co. of Chicago. It represents an investment of approximately $2,000,000, taking into account the cost of the buildings, switching facilities and the value of the site.

Members of the Merchants' Exchange requested the erection of the elevator to help relieve the shortage of grain storage space at this point. It will increase the storage capacity in St. Louis about 66 per cent and the storage capacity of St. Louis terminals on both sides of the river combined by approximately 60 per cent. The present capacity of St. Louis elevators is about 3,025,000 bushels.

The structure is equipped with modern devices specially constructed for the handling of grain on a large scale and some of the contrivances are new in elevator construction.

ALDERMANIC COMMITTEE TO REVISE CITY LICENSE TAXES

A special committee of nine Aldermen has been appointed by President Neun of the Board of Aldermen to revise license taxes assessed by the city on the recommendation of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. Alderman Eilers, chairman of the new committee, said the license taxes had not been revised since 1911 and that some classes of business were escaping such taxes entirely.

Among the industries it is proposed to tax are laundries and soft drink parlors. Increases have been suggested in the taxes of theaters and motion picture shows. A committee appointed last year to take up license taxes failed to reach an agreement.

FARM CONDITIONS "ON UPWARD TREND"

Real Estate Board Gives Out Results of Questionnaire Sent to Farm Land Specialists.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Farm conditions have passed the time of deepest depression and are on the upward trend, according to a survey just completed, the National Association of Real Estate Boards announced today. A questionnaire sent to 1200 farm land specialists by the association, the statement said, showed:

"That the economic condition of the farmer, in a decidedly preponderant proportion of the districts covered in these observations, is better than at this time last year. Approximately 76 per cent of the districts so far reporting indicate bettered conditions, not quite 13 per cent report conditions worse, and more than 11 per cent report them about as last year.

Better Crops This Year.

"That crops this year are better than last. In 58 per cent of the districts the report is of better crops, in 21 per cent crops on a level with last year, and in 21 per cent crops poorer than last year.

"That on the other hand, the farm population decrease, noted in the 1920 census, still continues and must be checked, returns from 72 per cent of the farm districts reported. However, 29 per cent of the districts are showing increases.

"Conditions in the farm land market, an accurate though conservative reflection of general farm conditions, are held to be inactive by 43 per cent of the dealers in the reports so far received, fair by 35 per cent. The farm market is already reported encouragingly active by almost 16 per cent of the dealers.

Report on Land Demand.

"However, the demand for farm lands has been found better this year than last by a fraction more than one-third of the dealers. More than another third find them unchanged. Something less than a third find them worse.

"Little enthusiasm for Government action for farm relief is evidenced by the land men's analysis of the situation. Time, rather than legislative tinkering, is what must be depended upon to effect a return of healthy activity, they hold."

Return of farm confidence, correction of adverse publicity and a general change in the public attitude toward the farm and the possibilities of the farm, is the underlying need for a promising farm future, the survey emphasized, the announcement declared.

4626 STUDENTS ENROLLED AT WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

Total Expected to Exceed That of Last Year—576 Students at Mary Institute.

Indications are that this year's enrollment at Washington University will exceed that of last year. An unofficial count of students in all departments of the institution, compiled hurriedly Friday, placed the total at 4626, which is only 168 fewer than the total number of students enrolled through Oct. 9 of last year. There are approximately 838 freshmen registered this year.

The number of students enrolled for membership in the extension department—evening and Saturday classes—is tentatively placed at 1590, or 283 more than the total extension department enrollment of last year. Co-eds represent about one-third of the total registration at the university. The registration in Mary Institute, Lake and Waterman avenues, is 576, or 26 more than last year.

FOUR ACQUITTED AFTER 6-DAY MURDER TRIAL

Men Were Charged With Killing Railroad Foreman in Fight Growing Out of Strike.

After a trial lasting six days, an acquital verdict was returned by a jury in the Circuit Court at Belleville yesterday in the case of four men charged with the murder of Aaron Arhold, a Terminal Railroad foreman, who was fatally wounded in East St. Louis in August, 1922, in a pistol fight with five men growing out of the railroad shopmen's strike.

The men acquitted are: James Callahan, 29 years old, of 7126 Idaho avenue; Fred Benish, 23, of 2114 De Kalb street, and George and James Lewis, brothers, of St. Louis. A fifth man, Hosea Venable, 40 died a short time after the fight from wounds inflicted by Arnold.

The fight began after a group of men had approached Arnold as he was getting into his automobile with his wife and two daughters at his home, 504 North Forty-third street, East St. Louis. His fire drove off the men, but Benish and Callahan were arrested when they drove up to the city hospital with the wounded Venable. Callahan also was wounded.

Benish and Callahan declared at the trial that Venable had fired the shots which killed Arnold, after they had gone to his home to try to induce him to go on strike. They said Arnold had shot first. The Lewis brothers denied being present.

M'KELVEY PAYS FINE OF $17 FOR SPEEDING IN MAPLEWOOD

Plea of Guilty Entered by Attorney After City Attorney Refuses to Dismiss Case.

Charges of speeding and failure to observe a boulevard stop, filed in Maplewood against Director of Public Safety McKelvey of St. Louis, were heard in the Maplewood Police Court Friday night and fines and costs totaling $17 imposed after a plea of guilty had been entered through an attorney. Of this amount $5 was for the boulevard stop violation, $10 for speeding and $2 for costs. The attorney, Patrick Lavin, paid the fines and costs.

City Attorney Eaken said that since the case was put on the docket following the alleged offense, Sept. 22, he had received many telephone calls and visits from persons asking that the case be dropped. Some of these visitors, he said, had referred to many favors extended to Maplewood by McKelvey in the loan of Fire Department aid, and that pushing the case might affect such assistance in the future.

Eaken declared Maplewood officials would not be influenced by politicians, either from St. Louis or St. Louis County. He said, however, that he believed the efforts to get the case dropped had been carried on by friends of McKelvey without the knowledge of McKelvey. Included in the calls, Eaken stated, were requests from mayors of neighboring municipalities that the case be not pressed.

VALUABLE STAMP COLLECTION LISTED IN BOISSELIER ESTATE

Public Accountant Had Collected 17 Albums, Including U. S. Stamps With Face Value of $1700.

Richard W. Boisselier, 4127 Botanical avenue, a public accountant, who died Aug. 1, was a member of the American Philatelic Association and had collected 17 albums of postage stamps, an inventory filed yesterday shows. Among the collection are uncanceled United States stamps of unusual issue, with a face value of $1700. He paid $35 a year for a safe deposit box in the St. Louis Union Trust Co., in which to keep the collection.

Besides the stamps, the inventory lists the following property: Stock of the Granite Bi-Metallic Mining Co. with a par value of $15,280; $2010 of the Southern Zinc Co. at par, 6500 shares of the Fifty-Fifty Oil Co., not appraised; about $5000 of various mining stocks, listed as probably worthless; memberships in the Merchants' Exchange and the Philatelic Association and $2000 life insurance. He left his estate to his wife, Mrs. Carrie Boisselier.

Actual value of the postage stamps is not given. Expert collectors probably will be asked to appraise them.

MISTRIAL IN CASE OF MAN IDENTIFIED BY JUDGE MIX

Jury, Standing 7 to 5 for Acquittal, Dismissed in Robbery Case After Deliberating 15 Hours.

The jury in the case of Edward Wietholter, charged with first degree robbery was discarged yesterday after it failed to reach a verdict. Eight ballots were taken in 15 hours of deliberation and the vote stood 7 to 5 for acquittal.

Wietholter was accused of being one of three men who held up the Judge & Dolph drug store at De Ballviere avenue and Kingsbury boulevard the night of Jan. 18, when the cashier, Miss Nona Douglas, was robbed of $160 in the presence of 10 persons, including employes and customers.

Circuit Judge George E. Mix, one of the customers, was the only witness who identified Wietholter. The nine others could not say that he even resembled one of the robbers. Miss Douglas, who has gone to her home in Carbondale, Ill., did not testify. Wietholter had an alibi. Relatives testified he was at his home, 1933 Wright street, listening to a radio concert at the time of the robbery.

ENCYCLOPEDIA FOR PROTESTANTS PLANNED

Members of 12 Denominations Unite for Advancement of Christian Knowledge.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Representatives of the 12 leading Protestant denominations have joined recently in the incorporation of a new religious educational body known as "The Institute for the Advancement of Christian Knowledge."

This was announced today by Judge Henry Wade Rogers, L. L. D., president of the institute. The first step in the institute's program, which contemplates the study of religious problems and engaging in religious surveys and research, will be to secure the publication of an American Encyclopedia of Christianity.

Plans for getting out the encyclopedia for American Protestants are already under way with an editorial board of nine Protestant scholars, headed by Dr. Joseph Cullen Ayer, professor of ecclesiastical history in the Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia. The work will be in 12 volumes of approximately 1,000,000 words each, and will take six years to be completed. The editorial policy will be strictly impartial from an objective point of view, and it is proposed to let at least two different writers handle subjects that are open to controversy.

"The need for a body like the Institute for the Advancement of Christian Knowledge" its president, Judge Rogers said, "arose out of present-day conditions. This is a day of a new and widespread religious renaissance. It is an hour in which the Protestant church of the United States faces new duties, hears a new call to new activities. The purposes of the institute, in general, are to function as a laboratory of religion."

Plans for Debutantes Still Principal Society Topic as Season's Pace Quickens

Opening Dinner Dance at St. Louis Country Club Occasion of Parties for Misses Frances Collins and Louise Bemis — Many Functions Announced.

THE debutante, her parties, her gowns, her flowers, her motor cars and her newest fad, in spite of the many weddings, are the absorbing topics of the day. From autumn, when the season is formally opened by the Veiled Prophet, until spring, when tired out, she goes away for a rest, the debutante is in the limelight. Now, crowding the October and November days, are plans for coming-out parties, balls and luncheons, to launch the new buds on their careers as future social leaders.

The opening dinner dance at the St. Louis Country Club last night was the occasion of at least two debutante parties. Miss Frances Collins, daughter of Mrs. H. Blakesley Collins of 50 Portland place, was honoree at a party given by Miss Elizabeth Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Ray Carter, whose marriage to Wayman McCreery Allen will take place Nov. 17. The guests other than Miss Collins, Miss Carter and Mr. Allen, were Misses Emily Shepley, Mary Christy Tiffany, Mary Francis Dickson, Jane Parsons, Katherine Steedman, Mary Etta Randolph and Margaret Chandler, and Messrs. Loisel Papin, Francis Drew, Field Goltra, George Knapp, Cliffton Scudder Jr., John Curlee, Sidney Allen and Mahlon B. Wallace Jr.

At the other table, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Anderson entertained a group for Mrs. Anderson's sister, Miss Louise Bemis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Judson S. Bemis of Brentmoor. Their guests were Misses Grace Wallace, the Veiled Prophet Queen; Janet Collins, Rachel Lee Cuendet, Lucy Turner and Messrs. Warren Chandler, Chapin Newhart, Lindell Gordon, Kenneth Drummond, Tom Reyburn, Andrew McCreery and Frederick Gardner.

Among the parties recently arranged are the ball that Mrs. Arthur B. Shepley will give for her daughter, Miss Emily, at the St. Louis Country Club. There was some question as to the date, but the evening of Dec. 19 has been decided upon. Another is a reception which Mrs. James M. Carpenter of Westminster place will give the afternoon of Oct. 25 for Miss Trimble Hoblitzelle, daughter of Mrs. George K. Hoblitzelle. Still others are dinners to be given at the Country Club. Next Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. J. Porter Tirrill will have a table for Miss Grace Wallace and Miss Trimble Hoblitzelle and Mrs. John O'Fallon Delany for Miss Marie Wygant. The following week, Mr. and Mrs. George Fox Steedman will give a similar party for their daughter, Miss Katherine. Oct. 27, Miss Wallace and a party will be the guests of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Wallace, and Nov. 3, Mr. and Mrs. Ephron Catlin will have a table for their niece, Miss Emily Shepley.

Miss Wygant will be honor guest at a luncheon Oct. 16 at the Country Club at which Miss Emilie Maffitt is to be hostess. Mr. and Mrs. James M. Franciscus entertained the debutantes at dinner Thursday night at their home, 10 Lenox place. As has been told, Miss Wygant is a cousin of Mrs. Delany of Ithaca, N. Y., who is making her debut here this winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Moss of 20 Lenox place, have sent out invitations for a dinner dance to be given the evening of Oct. 19 at the St. Louis Country Club in honor of Mr. Moss' debutante sister, Miss Frances Fristoe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wallace Fristoe of Washington boulevard.

Miss Dorothy Cramer, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emile Cramer of Webster Groves, was hostess at a luncheon, followed by a bridge party, Friday, for her guest, Miss Mary Simpson of Milwaukee, a classmate of Miss Cramer at Miss Wright's School in Byrn Mawr last year. The guests included the following debutantes: Misses Julia Lawnin, Elizabeth Tupper, Grace Layman, Dorothy Folk, Ruth Cornet, Trimble Hoblitzelle, Jane Parsons, Lucy Hoblitzelle, Mary Elizabeth Edwards, Josephine Moffitt, Katherine Sipple, Janet Phelan and Lauralouise Price, and Marguerite Moll, Margaret Chandler, Marie Clarkson and her guest, Ida Mann Webb, of Louisville, and Louise Cramer.

As the autumn season gets under way, hardly a mail passes without its invitations to the fortunate group of young women who are making their bow in society. Today, invitations were sent by Mrs. Louis D. Lawnin for the tea she will give Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 23, for her daughter, Miss Julia Lawnin. While the debutante will meet many of her mother's friends on this occasion, she is to be presented at a theater party for 100 guests Monday evening.

Miss Lucile Walthew and Charles Thorn Married in East

Cornatzar-Banister and Lucy-Hammond Weddings Also Solemnized During Past Week.

A WEDDING of much interest to society in Washington and Philadelphia as well as St. Louis, was that of Miss Lucile Le Bourgeois Walthew, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Walthew of St. Louis, and Charles Stellwagel Thorn, son of Mrs. Charles G. Thorn of Washington, D. C., and a brother of Mrs. Frances Thorn Valle, formerly of St. Louis, which took place yesterday afternoon in Wayne, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Charles Cavanaugh, in the Church of St. Katharine of Sienna at 4 o'clock. The edifice was decorated in the autumnal shades of flowers and ferns.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her cousin, Gerald Walthew of New York, was gowned in white satin, made on long slender lines with slight drapery at either side, trimmed with old English point lace, belonging to her maternal grandmother, the late Mrs. Joseph Le Bourgeois of New Orleans. Her bridal veil was of tulle embellished in old family rose point. It was held to her hair with a wreath of orange blossoms and fell to the length of her court train. She carried lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Valle, as matron of honor, wore cornflower blue taffeta, trimmed in crystal beads in a rose design, made with a silver girdle. A large brown lace hat and silver slippers completel the costume, and her flowers were chry-anthemums, shading from yellow to a rich brown.

Miss Maemie Webre, a cousin of the bride, maid of honor and Miss Margaret Le Bourgeois of New Orleans, another cousin, and Miss Jane Charles of New York, bridesmaids, were dressed alike in frocks of yellow georgette embroidered in crystal. They also wore brown lace hats and carried yellow and brown chrysanthemums.

Joyce Valle, daughter of the matron of honor and Jules F. Valle of St. Louis, was flower girl. She wore a French organdie frock and poke bonnet of the same material, shirred. Her flowers were pink roses arranged in a French basket.

Columbus W. Thorn of Washington was his brother's best man, and the ushers included Jerome Graham and Albert Thorn of Washington, Dr. George Stuhl of Ridley Park, William Brown of Pittsburg and Alfred Webre of St. David's, Pa.

A large reception followed the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred L. Webre, cousins of the bride, in St. David's, another suburb of Philadelphia.

Upon their return from their honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. Thorn will reside at 113 Carpenter Lane, Germantown, Pa. The bride is related to the old Le Bourgeois family of New Orleans. She was educated at the Sacred Heart Convent in St. Louis, and later became interested in the Montessori system of teaching children, which she went to Italy to study. During the war she served with the Catholic Welfare Workers. Mr. Thorn was educated at the Frund College and at Troy, N. Y.

The wedding of Miss Marion Burnett Cornatzar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John N. Cornatzar of 6170 Pershing avenue, and Theodore Herbert Banister, was solemnized at 8 o'clock last evening in St. George's Episcopal Church, the Rev. Robert Hall Atchinson officiating. Vases of pink gladolias flanking the candlelighted altar were the only decoration. The bride was preceded by Miss Marjorie Chapline as maid of honor, and Misses Elva Ruler and Alice Shryock as bridesmaids. The bridesmaids wore nile green moire, made with long sleeveless bodices and long full skirts. They carried sheaves of pink dahlias. Miss Chapline's gown was of the same material in peachblow, and made similarly. Each wore a silver wreath in her hair and a pearl choker, the gift of the bride. The maid of honor carried bronze dahlias.

The bridal gown was white satin trimmed with orange blossoms. Long sleeves which fell over the hand characterized the boat-necked bodice, and the skirt was draped to the left side and caught with sprays of the blossoms, which fell to the hem. At the back there was a bloused satin panel. The tulle veil, caught with orange blossoms, fell over a brocaded silver court train. She carried roses and lilies of the valley.

Earl Banister of Chicago was his brother's best man, and Ralph Reed, Arthur Young, Arthur Heman, and Robert Henderson of Jackson, Mo., groomsmen. Their gifts from the bridegroom were bill cases. Mrs Cornatzar wore black satin and lace and a corsage of pink roses. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Banister will make their home in St. Louis. Mr. Banister is the son of Theodore Banister of Springfield, Mo.

The Tyler Place Presbyterian Church was the scene yesterday afternoon of the wedding of Miss Kathleen Lucy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matt Lucy of 4048 Lafayette avenue, and Fred R. Hammond, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Cady Hammond of 3642 Cleveland avenue. The Rev. R. C. Williamson officiated at 5:30 o'clock. There were no attendants. The church was decorated with yellow chrysanthemums, Southern smilax and quantities of palms and ferns.

The bride wore her traveling suit of dark brown cloth trimmed with fox fur, and a brown velvet hat. Her corsage was of Ophelia roses and lillies of the valley.

Miss Ann Gordon of Yankton, S. D., a cousin of the bride, played the wedding march, and Clifford Taussig, Albert Maack, Raymond Herbert, and George Mangolo, classmates of Mr. Hammond's at Washington University, were ushers. Mrs. Hammond is also a graduate of the university and a member of Pi Beta Phi. Following a wedding trip East Mr. and Mrs. Hammond will reside at 3679 Lafayette avenue.

Among the recent parties given for the bride are a bridge by her sister-in-law, Miss Edith Hammond; a bridge party and shower at the College Club by Misses Shryock, Amenda, Kelly, and McLaughlin, and a luncheon bridge by Mrs. J. W. Geppert and Miss Clara Parks. Mr. and Mrs. Lucy gave a dinner party Friday night for her at the College Club, following the rehearsal.

Lieutenant-Commander Lee Petit Warren, Mrs. Warren and her daughter, Miss Lenore Scullin, returned to the United States last week from Europe, and are now in New York. Commander Warren had previously been ordered to Egypt for service by the Navy Department. They will come to St. Louis for the holidays, and will give a tea dance Christmas afternoon at the St. Louis Country Club for Miss Scullin.

Miss Dorothea Nagel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nagel of 44 Westmoreland place, will not make a formal debut this winter, but will participate informally in the social galeties of the younger set. Mr. Nagel is expected home this week from Hartford, Conn., Mrs. Nagel's return date is not set. Mr. and Mrs. Nagel's elder daughters, Mrs. Homer Sweetser of Boston, and Mrs. Henry Putnam, are now at the Sweetser summer home, formerly belonging to the Nagels, in Marion, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Putnam will make their home in New York this winter.

PARTIES OF LAST WEEK AND COMING EVENTS

Although parties for the debutants occupy important places on the social calendar of the fall season, other affairs, too, come in for their share of attention. Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Josiah A. Parker of 5540 Enright avenue, assisted by her daughter, Miss Josephine, was hostess at a reception honoring Mrs. Frederic G. Wooster of Chicago, formerly Miss Augusta Parker, another daughter of the hostess, and the latter's sister-in-law, Mrs. Percy E. Brey of San Francisco, who is her guest. More than 200 guests called between 3 and 6 o'clock. The house was profusely decorated in the fall colorings, with yellow the predominating note at the tea table. The receiving party stood in the living room against a high background of bronze and scarlet. Presiding in the dining room were Mrs. Bryant Voris and Misses Ethel and Addie Sennott. Elizabeth and Emma Grojean, Ethel Mohrstadt and Louise and Eleanora Morrison. Mr. and Mrs. Wooster will make their future home in St. Louis. They have lived in Chicago since their marriage several months ago.

A luncheon will be given Oct. 10 by Mrs. Gilbert Candy of Kingsbury boulevard, for her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Brittingham Jr., of Madison, Wis., who is visiting her.

Interesting among the week's parties was the luncheon given Tuesday at the St. Louis Country Club by Assistant Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis for the visiting aviators. The army, navy and marine corps were represented and each man appeared in uniform. Guests included some of the debutantes of this year and last, and a few of the young matrons. Dancing followed until 4:30 o'clock, after which the honor guests returned to the flying field.

One of the many dinners at the St. Louis Club Veiled Prophet night was that for Miss Lauralouise Price, at which Mr. and Mrs. Harold Reed Wilson, brother-in-law and sister of the honor guest, were hosts. The Most Modern Shoe

Scientists today deplore the wearing of Shoes which bind the foot and prohibit the free action of the muscles. Primitive people, who wore simple foot coverings of soft skins, had feet that were graceful and sturdy. Their walk was elastic and untiring.

The ordinary stiff-soled Shoes of "civilized" races cause many serious foot troubles because they check the circulation and weaken the muscels by disuse. But the Cantilever Shoe gives the foot perfect freedom. It supports a weak arch without harmful restraint. The flexible shank encourages the foot to arch and bend, to EXERCISE. It strengthens the muscles surrounding the twelve bones of the arch. In this splendid natural way, Cantilevers prevent and correct flat foot.

The Most Modern Shoe

Scientists today deplore the wearing of Shoes which bind the foot and prohibit the free action of the muscles. Primitive people, who wore simple foot coverings of soft skins, had feet that were graceful and sturdy. Their walk was elastic and untiring.
The ordinary stiff-soled Shoes of "civilized" races cause many serious foot troubles because they check the circulation and weaken the muscels by disuse. But the Cantilever Shoe gives the foot perfect freedom. It supports a weak arch without harmful restraint. The flexible shank encourages the foot to arch and bend, to EXERCISE. It strengthens the muscles surrounding the twelve bones of the arch. In this splendid natural way, Cantilevers prevent and correct flat foot.

NEWS OF MISSOURI FOLKS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The air pilgrims to St. Louis are returning sounding the praises of the entertainment given them by hospitable folk of that city and enthusiastic about the air meet. Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Naval Aeronautics, flew back to Lakehurst on the ZR-1 and then came to Washington in a regular plane. Mrs. Moffett returned by motor, while Assistant Secretary of War Dwight Davis came by train, as did many of the other visitors.

Gen. Pershing has gone to Mount Prospect, N. H., where he is a house guest of the Secretary of War and Mrs. John W. Weeks at their summer home. The guests include Gen. Charles G. Dawes, Gen. J. G. Harbord, Representative Mayhew Wainwright, former Assistant Secretary of War, and others from Boston.

Gen. Pershing will return to Washington in time to escort Gen. Joseph Haller, the Polish hero, who will be entertained at the Polish legation. Gen. Haller comes to pay an official call on President Coolidge and also to lay a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington.

President and Mrs. Coolidge have started a series of informal receptions for delegates to large conventions in Washington. These are very popular with the visitors. No refreshments are served, of course, but frequently the President and Mrs. Coolidge please visitors by having their pictures taken with them.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge probably will have Lloyd George, Mrs. George and Miss Megan George at luncheon at the White House on Thursday, Oct. 25, the day they arrive in Washington. It will be an informal luncheon, and the other guests will be the Secretary of Labor and Mrs. James J. Davis, because the Secretary is a brother Welshman of Lloyd George. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hughes will entertain for the Lloyd Georges at dinner the following day.

Mrs. Howard Jay Vrooman and her daughter, Miss Howard Vrooman, of Kansas City, Mo., spent several days at the New Willard Hotel last week. Miss Vrooman will enter Mt. Vernon Seminary for Girls.

Among the distinguished in Washington this week were a number who came to attend the convention of the Military Order of the World War. Brigadier-General E. J. Spencer of St. Louis was prominent in arranging the military ball and reception which was one of the features of the convention.

Washington society has learned with regret of the serious illness in Boston of Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War. Mrs. Davis was ill all the summer, but it was only recently that her illness took a serious turn. Mr. Davis is now in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long entertained a large company at dinner on Friday at their home in Sixteenth street.

Mrs. James M. Thomson, daughter of the late Speaker and Mrs. Champ Clark, is a guest of the Ambassador to Great Britain and Mrs. Harvey at their home in London.

Prof. and Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins returned from Missouri last week in time to attend the opening exercises of George Washington University, of which Prof. Hodgkins is Dean of Arts and Sciences.

Mrs. Edwin S. Puller entertained a company of 16 at luncheon on Thursday at the Chevy Chase Club for Mrs. Clarence Richmond Day, who will depart Oct. 10 to join Col. Day at San Antonio, Tex. Mrs. Puller, who is from St. Louis, had among her guests Mrs. Edward L. Preetorius of St. Louis, who will make her home in Washington this winter.

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET

Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With a Home-Made Mixture.

Joicey Williams, the well-known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair and how to darken it, with a home-made mixture:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

No More Gray Hair or Dandruff

No longer is it necessary to use dyes to restore the original color to the hair

THOUSANDS of men and women have restored the original color of their hair NATURALLY with a genuine tonic which feeds and nourishes the hair, restores its luster and life, promotes its growth, cleanses the scalp and banishes dandruff.

Because of universal dissatisfaction with hair dyes an American chemist sought to develop a genuine tonic which would restore the original color of the hair by reproducing Nature's process and WHICH SHOULD NOT BE A DYE. After thirty years of patient experimentation he successfully produced a tonic which restored the color to all hair, whether it be black, brown or blond, by feeding and nourishing it with the coloring elements the body had ceased to furnish. He aptly named this tonic NOURISHINE.

NOURISHINE is wonderfully beneficial—so much so that many who do not have gray hair use it regularly to keep the hair healthy and the scalp clean and free from dandruff. NOURISHINE CANNOT cause the hair to become brittle, deaden or split. On the contrary, it revitalizes the hair. It restores the original color evenly, naturally—no streaks. Does not stain scalp or hands. NOURISHINE is not applied like a dye, does not operate like a dye—because it is not a dye. It is pleasant to use and can be applied by anyone at home. One bottle is usually effective. The one loquid restores for all colors, whether black, brown or blond.

If NOURISHINE did nothing else but remove dandruff it would remain a remarkable testimonial to scientific accomplishment. We have many cases where one-half of a bottle, used, has banished dandruff. The average case requires one bottle. It stops itching, cleanses, invigorates. Act today, for your hair health and regeneration. For dandruff alone is worth many times the price asked. Whether you have gray hair or not use it as a tonic or to banish dandruff.

No matter what you have tried—try NOURISHINE. Sincerely we tell you it is different. Price $1.25 per bottle, all drug and department stores.

MODIFICATION OF LUMBER OUSTER DECREE REFUSED

State Supreme Court Confirms Previous Order, Which Included Aggregate Fines of $96,000.

OPINION SEVERELY ARRAIGNS COMPANIES

Barrett Announces Plan to Invoke Law Forbidding Successor Corporations From Dealing in Same Commodities.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 6.—The St. Louis Lumber Trade Exchange and the 19 St. Louis lumber companies constituting it, today lost in the Missouri Supreme Court in their effort to obtain a modification of the court order of July 28, finding them guilty of illegal trade practices, fining them an aggregate of $96,000 and ousting them from business in the State.

In an opinion by Justice Graves the court confirmed its previous order, and severely scored the companies, Justice Graves holding their plan of organization to be a studied scheme to violate the law and to endeavor to prevent detection.

Refusing to modify the order of ouster that the companies might continue in business under a change of plan to meet the court's objections, the opinion stated flatly that that course had been tried by the court in other similar cases, and had failed, and "that the spirit of combines, profiteering and price fixing has grown so that now every branch of commercial business is infected."

Barrett's Plan.

Attorney-General Barrett said today he expected to invoke in the lumber cases a statute which had just come to his attention, and which prohibits any corporation formed as the successor of an ousted corporation from dealing in the commodities that corporation dealt in. Although this law has never been subjected to the scrutiny of the courts, it would appear to prevent the lumber companies from reorganizing and continuing in business.

The motions for rehearing and modification passed on today constitute the last resort of the companies in the Missouri court. Some doubt is expressed here that the United States Supreme Court will take jurisdiction of the case, no Federal question having been raised in the trial in the State court.

Defendants Changed Plans.

Two days after the Supreme Court had announced its ouster decision, W. Frank Carter, counsel for the defendants, said that motion for a rehearing would be presented. Plans of the defendants were changed, however, and on Aug. 6, motion to modify judgment was filed by Carter on behalf of all defendants.

In the motion the court was petitioned to revise the order of ouster from an unconditional one, which would force the liquidation of the defendant corporations, to a conditional ouster which would permit them to continue in business. The court also was asked to reduce the amount of fines assessed.

The motion for modification requested that the Lumber Trade Exchange be permitted to continue in existence "if it shall eliminate, within a time to be fixed by the court, from its charter, bylaws and plans of business, such provisions and features as the court has adjudged to be unlawful."

Three Individual Motions.

Three of the 19 defendant corporations on Aug. 6 and 7, filed individual motions asking for reductions of fines assessed against them and a setting aside of the ouster order. They were the Shellabargor Lumber Co., The Vandeventer Lumber Co. and The Holekamp Lumber Co. The Vandeventer Co., stated in its motion that it had resigned from the Lumber Exchange and the Holekamp Co., pleaded that it had paid no dues to the exchange nor made reports to it since last January.

Attorney-General Barrett, in an answer to the motions for modification of judgment, which he filed Aug. 9, asked that the fines of $96,000 imposed against the defendants be increased to at least $2,500,000. He also urged that the original ouster order be adhered to.

A supplemental motion for modification of judgment was filed Aug. 13 on behalf of three of the defendants: The Julius Siedel Lumber Co., The Goodfellow Lumber Co. and the Wiles-Chipman Lumber Co., Allegations in this motion were virtually the same as contained in the same motion on behalf of all defendants.

Judge Graves in the opinion filed today on the motion to modify judgment went even further, declaring that guilt of the lumber companies is "written in red letters" between lines of the "holier-than-thou" language of the preamble and articles of association of the exchange.

Text of Graves' Opinion.

The text of the Graves opinion follows:

no reason now to depart from opinion upon the motion to ify the opinion to the extent of ing the ouste rconditional. That defendants are guilty there can no doubt. Courts are not blind the bats of the air. They are entitled to draw inferences from undisputed facts before them.

"The intention of the parties to do an unlawful act is not often disclosed by the language used. On the contrary, they usually try to hide the intent by their language and acts. But like sentinels in the forest there will be found (unintentionally left) earmarks which point to the real intent and purpose. That these parties are guilty is apparent from the "holier-than-you" language used in the preamble and the articles of association. It requires no particular insight to read these documents and between the lines find written in red letters the guilt of respondents.

"The high-soundig language of these two instruments is but a gilded garment to hide a cloven hoof. They never consulted counsel (eminent or otherwise) in good faith. Their purpose was to violate the law, but to cover their tracks and escape results, if a day of reckoning came as it has come. Who, before this, ever heard of a necessity to form an organization to eliminate alleged evil practices of the members of such proposed organization? If lumbermen were guilty of petty thefts in the way of short measures, and substitution of grades, they would soon eliminate themselves from business by their own conduct. The law afforded the public all necessary redress for such conduct.

"Founded in Bad Faith."

"The very declared purposes of this organization (gilded by studied use of words as they are) bespeak an organization founded in bad faith and for wrongful ends. Not only this, but each of respondents went into the organization with full knowledge of its real purposes, ie.: the stifling of substantial competition and filching the pockets of the general public by fixing prices. Honest, law-abiding business men need no such organizations in order to conduct a legitimate business. The real intent and purposes of the organization are as clear as the noonday sun. The respondents knowingly entered into the unlawful agreement, and should abide the consequences of their deliberate act.

"It is urged that this court has heretofore adopted the plan of a suspended ouster. This is true. In the Polar Wave Ice Co. case, the writer hereof undertook to assign our reasons for that course. To us the reasons seemed to be sound, but conditions have changed. A great war has come and gone, and with this period the spirit of combines, price-fixing and profiteering has grown, so that now (if current events can be read aright) every branch of commercial business is infected. Within an hour's ride from this temple of justice a producer sold the hide of a calf, and, wanting a measly pair of half soles for hi shard-worn shoes, had to add 15 cents to the price of the hide to buy the soles.

"Orgies of Profiteering."

"We have tried out the suspended ouster, and in the face of our judgments unlawful combinations are holding orgies of profiteering by price fixing and otherwise, throughout the State. Need we cite current events? What these are is known by all, and courts are presumed to know such current history. It is true, in the language of the opinion in this case, that we should exercise the full force of the law and where we find a corporation guilty, put that corporation out of business for all time.

"Where corporations deliberately form another corporation for the purpose of fixing prices and curtailing competition, it is time to stop their existence in view of our past experiences with conditional ousters. They have not proven to be a deterrent as we thought. The Federal Government has been forced to handle at least one of our conditionally ousted corporations. Without further elaboration, I am against the modification of our present judgment and vote to overrule the motion to modify."

History of the Case.

Proceedings against the lumber companies were instituted in 1921 by Attorney-General Barrett, as the direct result of an investigation of building material prices in St. Louis by the Post-Dispatch in December 1920, and January, 1921, and an editorial suggestion by this newspaper that a more searching official inquiry was in order.

Barrett conducted preliminary hearings under authority from the Supreme Court before Dorsey W. Shackleford of Jefferson City as special Commissioner, at which were heard officers, employes and customers of most of the incorporated building material concerns in St. Louis and vicinity which were members of trade associations. Transactions in lumber, sand, gravel, cement, millwork, brick and similar materials were laid bare and the trade practices were disclosed as a result, suits in the nature of quo warranto, asking for unconditional ouster and heavy fines were filed against members of the St. Louis Lumber Trade Exchange, St. Louis Building Material Dealers' Association and the St. Louis Planing Mill Men's Association.

19 Firms Fined and Ousted.

The lumber suit was tried first. The exchange had 23 members, four of which were not incorporated, hence not open to this character of prosecution, leaving the 19 defendants against whom fines and judgment of ouster were entered on July 23. Barrett has delayed further action in the suits against the material dealers and millmen pending outcome of the lumber case, that he might have the benefit of the Supreme Court's findings on the antitrust statutes before proceeding with the other two.

Judge Blair, in finding the Lumber Trade Exchange and its 19 incorporated members guilty, declared that it was impossible to read the record of the case without arriving at "an abiding conviction that price-raising and fixing and restriction of competition were the main purpose and object of calling the exchange into being."

Keep Your Feet Young

YOUTH has trim foot lines and neat ankles. You can keep that girlish foot beauty with very little thought and care.

Avoid old, loose shoes that let the feet spread under the body's weight—and heelless slippers that put such a strain on the foot muscles.

Do your "foot work" in Ye Olde Tyme Comfort Shoes. Examine a pair—feel the soft, satiny kid leather. Note the flexible yet durable sole—the in-built steel arch and the well proportioned heel finished off with springy rubber. They are good looking, and long wear is certain.

Ye Olde Tyme Comfort Shoes are not broad heeled, square toed "health shoes," or "foot doctor" shoes, but are made in trim oxfords and strap patterns in black and brown kidskin.

There is one chief reason for their comfort—they are made over scientifically designed lasts and from correct fitting patterns by men who have specialized for the last twenty years in making comfort shoes for women. Comfort is built into this shoe.

SWEDISH INVENTOR HAS NEW OIL LIGHT

Claims Whiter and Much Cheaper Light Than Electric or Gas.

Edison enabled us to enjoy the benefits of electric light, Count Welsbach's mantle made it possible to have the incandescent gas light, but it remained for a Swedish engineer named Johnson, now living in Chicago, to devise a lamp that would burn ordinary, everyday kerosene oil and produce a light said by the many scientists who have seen it to be whiter than electric. The lamp is as simple to operate as the old style oil lamp, burns without odor, smoke or noise and is proving a sensation where oil light is needed.

Mr. Johnson offers to send a lamp on ten days' free trial and will even give one to the first user in each locality who will help introduce it. A letter addressed to L. D. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, will bring full particulars about this wonderful new lamp. He has an interesting agency offer, too.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes —Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 15c and 30c.

Postmaster Alt Says Increased Force Will Provide Better Service in Outlying Sections.

Postmaster Alt has received an order from Washington authorizing the appointment in the St. Louis postoffice of 35 clerks, 95 carriers and 12 laborers. The Postmaster said this increase in the force would mean adequate service to residents in outlying sections of the city which have been built up in the last five years.

It was announced in Washington yesterday that St. Louis postal receipts for September were $878,757, an increase of 3.92 per cent over the same period last year. The average increase in 50 selected offices was 2.23 per cent. St. Louis stood fifth in receipts.

PLANS FOR EDUCATIONAL WEEK

Conference Called to Arrange for Observance in St. Louis.

Plans for observance in St. Louis of National Educational Week, Nov. 18 to 24, will be considered at a conference next Friday night called by the College Club at the club's headquarters, 5428 Delmar boulevard. All educational institutions and societies and civic organizations have been asked to send representatives. A tentative plan for the observance, outlined by the College Club, provides for special exhibits in schools, a series of conferences on the various branches of educational work and a general mass meeting.

The College Club is undertaking three surveys to determine educational facilities of St. Louis and Missouri. One seeks to establish Missouri's relative rank among states, a second groups educational facilities in St. Louis outside of the schools, and a third lists scholarships available here.

"Sally," Three Years Old, Arrives Tomorrow Evening at American

Luxurious Ziegfeld Musical Comedy Stars Marilyn Miller and Leon Errol—Chauncey Olcott Warbles Tonight at Shubert-Jefferson.

THE most prosperous musical comedy of recent years, "Sally," a Ziegfeld production, arrives at the American Theater tomorrow night, in the third year of its career. Since its New York premiere on Dec. 21 1920, "Sally" has been performed more than 1300 times, to gross receipts said to exceed $5,000,000. It ran 70 weeks in Gotham, four months in Boston and five months in Chicago. Virtually the same company is promised for the St. Louis engagement that has played the piece since its beginning, including Marilyn Miller, Leon Errol and Walter Catlett.

Chauncy Olcott begins a week's engagement at the Shubert-Jefferson tonight in his new romantic comedy "The Heart of Paddy Whack," by Rachel Crothers, author of "The Three of Us" and "Marry the Third." The Woodward Players, at the Empress, are undertaking "Brewster's Millions," a well-known play based on George Barr McCutcheon's tale of frenzied finance. The Orpheum announces a bill with four featured acts—those of Blossom Seeley, Sylvia Clark, Emma Carus and Fritzi Ridgeway.

"Sally" owes its book and lyrics to Guy Bolton and Clifford Grey, its music to Victor Herbert and Jerome Kern, its scenery to Joseph Urban and its staging to Edward Royce. Max Bendix, former musical director of the Municipal Theater Association, conducts the orchestra. In the cast are Felice, Paul Frawley, Kathlene Martyn, Frank Kingdon, Alfred P. James, Phil Ryley, Agatha De Bussey, Jacques Rabiroff, Mary McDonald, Floyd English and fourscore others. Because of the length of the show it is announced that the evening curtains will rise at 8:10 o'clock.

Variation on Cinderella.

THE story is a variant of Cinderella's fairy tale, describing the evolution of a little dishwasher in an humble restaurant into a Ziegfeld "Follies" celebrity, and her wooing by a rich youth who pursues her through the garden of a Long Island country house and across the ballet stage to the portico of the Little Church Around the Corner. It ends with a triple wedding among the principals.

Miss Marilyn Miller was known principally as a dancer until she was starred in "Sally," in which her role calls not only for a dancer, but for a singing comedienne. Leon Errol was for some seasons leading comedian of the Ziegfeld "Follies," and gained a following as a whimsical droll and grotesque dancer. Walter Catlett appears as a flippant, nimble-tongued Broadway booking agent. Since the first presentation of "Sally," Miss Miller has missed only three performances, Errol five and Catlett two. In every case the absence was due to illness.

According to figures made public at the Ziegfeld offices, the costumes for "Sally" have been renewed five times, and Miss Miller's gowns have been replaced eight times. Three sets of costumes for a butterfly ballet have been imported from Paris at a cost of $14,000 a set. Since the piece opened it is estimated that 15,372 pairs of stockings have been supplied for the 84 young women in the show. "Sally" will play here at a $4.40 top, including war tax.

Little information is given in advance concerning Mr. Olcott's play, save that it affords the singer an opportunity to appear in his familiar role as a noble, witty and melodious Irish hero, who sings a number of ballads in the course of the plot. "The Passing Show of 1922," a Winter Garden revue, with Willie and Eugene Howard, comes to the Shubert-Jefferson next week.

A Storm at Sea.

ACCORDING to the comedy at the Empress, youthful Montgomery Brewster must spend $1,000,000 legitimately in one year in order to come into an inheritance of $7,000,000. He decides to take a party of friends on a yachting cruise around the world, and this introduces a spectacular scene showing a storm at sea. With the fourth act, the hero contrives to get rid of the remaining $500,000 at one stroke. The principal parts will be played by Alexis Luce and Hazel Whitmore, and there will be a largely augmented cast.

Miss Seeley, at the Orpheum, will present a new version of her "Miss Syncopation," with the assistance of Bennie Fields, comedian; Warner Gault, singer; and Charles Thorpe, pianist. Sylvia Clark, an exponent of high-class buffoonery, has an act written by Blanche Merrill. Emma Carus promises a budget of new songs, patter and dances, in which she will be aided by J. Walter Leopold. Fritzi Ridgeway, stage and movie actress, is announced with a company in "A Wife's Honor," a playlet by Frank Condon. Others on the bill are Margaret Severn, with an exhibition of Benda masks; Lahr and Mercedes, in "What's the

Guild to Produce Galsworthy's "Windows"

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.

THE first production of the sixth Theater Guild subscription season will be "Windows," by John Galsworthy, "a comedy for idealists and others," which opens Monday night at the Garrick Theater. In the cast will be Phyllis Povah, Kenneth McKenna, Helen Westley, Henry Travers, Moffat Johnston, Friedа Inescort, Alice Belmore Cliffe and George Baxter. Moffat Johnston is director, and the settings are by Carolyn Hancock.

On Monday night also, at the Selwyn Theater, George Choos' musical comedy from London, "Battling Butler," will have its local premiere, co-featuring Charles Ruggles and William Kent. On Tuesday night "The Nervous Wreck," by Owen Davis, will be presented at the Sam H. Harris Theater. In the company are Otto Kruger, June Walker, Edward Arnold and William Riley Hatch.

For Wednesday night comes the important announcement that Miss Pauline Lord, formerly of "Anna Christie," will be presented at the Plymouth Theater in "Launzi," a drama by Ferenc Molnar, and adapted by Edna St. Vincent Millay. Others in the cast include Adrienne Morrison, Charles Millward and Albert Bruning.

ALTHOUGH various Theater Guild casts have been seen on the road, this is the first season that the Guild itself has been directly associated with a touring enterprise. Its initial road company, headed by Basil Sydney, opens Monday night in Baltimore. In the repertory are three plays, "He Who Gets Slapped," "Peer Gynt," and "The Devil's Disciple." St. Louis is on the list of cities to be visited.

Four companies playing "The Fool" are said to have done a total gross business of nearly $60,000 during a recent week. Three additional companies are now under rehearsal. • • • James Montgomery Flagg has been commissioned to write a series of sketches and scenes for the

Maugham Assails Titled Yankee Wives

LONDON, Oct. 6.

THE latest play by W. Somerset Maugham, "Our Betters," at the Globe Theater, is about American wives and European husbands; and it is symptomatic of the general tone that while there are three wives among the persons of the play, not a single husband appears. Mr. Maugham seems, in fact, to be suffering from a complex in this matter of the titled American woman, for he leaves her without a shred of reputation, says the critic of the Telegraph.

According to the playwright, she marries a title without any particular thought of the man who may be attached thereto, and proceeds to amuse herself in a world which recalls nothing so much as that of the

"If Winter Comes", "Ruggles", "Potash" and "Rouged Lips"

"Daytime Wives" and "A Chapter in Her Life" Are Other First Run Offerings at Local Picture Houses.

THE much-heralded photoplay, "If Winter Comes," based on A. S. M. Hutchinson's famous novel of the same title is the week's feature at the Liberty Theater.

Those familiar with Hutchinson's book recall the cunning, hypocritical, whimpering Twyning, who, using every unfair device, sought figuratively to crucify Mark Sabre to satisfy his own greed and ambition. Twyning even went so far as to attempt to have Sabre convicted in the death of Effie Bright and her child, the father of which later was proved to be Twyning's own son. And then the pitiful selfishness of the man who, when Sabre comes seeking to avenge those wrongs, lets himself believe that Mark has come to offer sympathy for the death of his son at the front. You hate Twyning with a vengeance that is increased by the contrast drawn by Percy Marmont, as Sabre, sympathetic and generous even to his enemy. Ann Forrest plays the role of Nona, Lady Tybar; Margaret Fielding that of Mabel; Eleanor Daniels and Dorothy Allen as Low Jinks and High Jinks. Gladys Leslie is Effie.

"Potash and Perlmutter," with Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr, creators of the stage roles of Abe and Mawruss, is the feature attraction at the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol theaters. The story is based on Montague Glass' early accounts of the adventures of Abe and Mawruss in the cloak and suit business.

The firm of Potash and Perlmutter stages a fashion show in which are any number of beautiful models, headed by Martha Mansfield. The film also takes the principals to a cabaret, where a remarkable show is given. In this scene the London Tiller dancing chorus appears.

An added attraction at the Grand Central only is the appearance of the Pantheon singers, assisted by Miss Adelyn Hood, violinist.

"The Spider and the Rose," featuring Alice Lake and Gaston Glass, comes to the West End Lyric the last half of the week, starting Wednesday.

Viola Dana in her latest production, "Rouged Lips," is the feature photoplay attraction at the Delmonte Theater for the week. It is taken from Rita Weiman's famous story, "Up Stage."

"Rouged Lips" follows the fortunes of a girl who is a member of a musical comedy chorus. She meets her Prince Charming, who recognizes her innate sweetness and innocence, but who is led astray by false rumors and fails to realize the secret wishes of her heart. In the end she wins his love.

In the cast are Tom Moore, Nola Luxford, Sydney de Grey, Arline Pretty, Francis Powers, Georgie Woodthorpe, and Burwell Hamrick. On the bill also is novelty picture entitled "Is Conan Doyle Right?" It deals with spiritualism.

"Ruggles of Red Gap" by Harry Leon Wilson, is the photoplay attraction at the Missouri Theater this week. The cast includes stars of the "Covered Wagon," Lois Wilson and Ernest Torrence. The story of "Ruggles of Red Gap" is of rival factions in the town of Red Gap for social pre-eminence. But in the town some who detest social usages and when through the efforts of an English valet, all social traditions are upset, situations abounding with laughs are numerous. Lois Wilson plays the part of Klondyke Kate, who is ostracized by the social lions of Red Gap. Ernest Torrence plays the part of Cousin Egbert who will be pushed into society just so "far" and no further. Edward Horton plays the part of Ruggles, the English valet, won in a poker game. His duties consist of polishing the manners of Cousin Egbert. Ma Pettingill is played by Lillian Leighton.

Egbert Van Alstyne, song writer and author of popular songs, presents some of his recent numbers, assisted by Clem Dacy. Gould and Rash, harmony singers, are held for a second week.

"Daytime Wives" is the leading attraction at the Kings. It shows three distinct types of women—each of which provides a character study. With huge building operations as its background, this is a story of a rising young contractor, his indispensable office assistant, and a frivolous wife that squanders his income and seeks the attention of other men with more leisure to devote to her

Seek Local Talent for Soloists at "Pops"

ST. LOUISANS ambitious to appear as soloists at the "pop" concerts this season are asked to apply for questionnaire forms at the new offices of the Symphony Society, 302 Odeon building. The management states that more than 50 applications are already on file. Director Ganz will hold auditions after his arrival here on Oct. 22, and probably ten will be chosen from among the aspirants. There will be 18 or 19 "pop" concerts, and it is planned to choose St. Louis soloists for at least half the series.

Several professionals of unusual attainments have already been engaged for the "pop" concerts, among them Marjorie Squires, contralto; Mieczyslaw Munz, pianist; Gladys Swarthout, soprano; and Genevieve Rice Cowden, soprano, of Kansas City. The first "pop" concert will be held on the afternoon of Nov. 4, and the opening number will be the "St. Louis Symphony March," which Mr. Ganz composed this summer and dedicated to the symphony drive fund.

What is declared to be the authentic Sistine Chapel Choir, of Rome, is announced for a concert at the Odeon on the evening of Nov. 20. There will be classic liturgical music and modern church music by Abbe Lorenzo Perosi, director of the choir. Owing to illness, Abbe Perosi will not accompany the singers, whose concerts will be conducted by the assistant director, Monsignor Don Antonio Rella. Some of the music, it is said, has never before been sung outside the Sistine Chapel, where it exists in manuscript. The first American concert will be given Oct. 18 at Carnegie Hall, New York.

THE annual St. Louis appearance of Lieutenant-Commander John Philip Sousa's Band will take place on the evening of Nov. 1, at the Odeon. This is the thirty-first season of the organization, which has presented more than 16,000 concerts. The opening number will be the overture to Wagner's "Tannhauser," and one of the numbers, "Fancy of the Town," is a potpourri, by Sousa, of recent popular song hits.

The October musical calendar includes two events of first magnitude—the St. Louis debuts of Feodor Challapin, basso, and Sigrid Onegin, contralto. The dates are respectively Oct. 23 and Oct. 27, and both concerts will be at the Odeon.

The Morning Choral Club's first rehearsal of this season will be held at 10:20 o'clock Tuesday morning at St. John's Methodist Church, King's highway and Washington boulevard.

Free community noonday organ recitals will be given every day until spring at Christ Church Cathedral, Thirteenand and Locust streets. Tomorrow's program, arranged by Organist Arthur Davis, includes "Overture Fantastique," Sellars; "Song of India," Rimsky-Korsakoff; "Caprice," Guilmant; "Melody in F," Rubinstein, and grand march from "Aida," Verdi.

RUBBER GROWING POSSIBILITIES OF PHILIPPINES TO BE STUDIED

Comparative Report to Be Made to Washington on Acreage, Soil and Weather.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News.

MANILA, Oct. 6.—Thorough investigation of the rubber growing possibilities of the Philippine Islands has been started by the Federal Departments of Commerce and Agriculture, four specialists from Washington having just arrived in Manila for that purpose.

The program calls for four months' study of the southern part of the Island of Mindanao, and will include possible acreage available, soil productivity, liability of the section to typhoons and whether higher wages paid Filipinos as compared with British and Dutch rubber growing will make Philippine rubber growing commercially profitable.

ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION AID FOR HEALTH WORK IN BULGARIA

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 12.—The Rockefeller Foundation is about to embark on a campaign to develop sanitation and preventive medicine in Bulgaria. The first step has been the selection of two Bulgarian physicians for a year of study and hospital practice in America; other selections will be made later.

Miss Elizabeth Crowell, of the foundation has outlined a project for the establishment of a nurses' training school here which is to be submitted to the officers of the foundation in New York.

Dr. Edwin R. Embree, general secretary of the foundation, has inspected the hospitals of Sofia, and conferred with the Minister of Health and a number of local physicians.

GERMANY TO REVISE HISTORIES

By the Associated Press.

HEIDELBERG.—Germany is to have a modern history based upon developments from the time of the French Revolution to the outbreak of the World War. Criticisms from democratic sources that present day instruction in history was still subject to the old ideas of militarism, brought about the decision of the Government to publish a book more properly suited to teachers and instructors and school classes in the new republic of today.

A prize for the accepted work has been offered by the Minister of the Interior, and Germany's best known professors of history have been appointed as judges.

CLEAN KIDNEYS BY DRINKING LOTS OF WATER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

RADIO ENABLES SHIP TO SKIRT EDGE OF GALE

Vessel Avoided Vortex of Storm Though Wind Blew 100 Miles an Hour.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—When the steamship Southern Cross of the Munson Line reached quarantine recently from Buenos Aires, her passengers told of her experience in what the skipper described as the worst gale he had experienced in 17 years. The Southern Cross ran into the big storm immediately after passing the Bermudas.

It brought 96 first-class and 165 steerage passengers from various South American ports.

Capt. Zearfoss said they were out where the wind was blowing 100 miles an hour and in the midst of waves that were 35 to 40 feet high.

"That we came through it without serious trouble," the skipper said. "I attribute to the radio warnings sent out from New York by the Weather Bureau. The bureau let us know what to expect, and, acting upon its advice, we skirted the rim of the biggest blow I have seen in all my experience.

"We left Buenos Ayres on Sept 13 and up to midnight before the storm the weather was beautiful. At midnight the wind increased and at 4 o'clock in the morning was a veritable gale. The barometer fell at the rate of 10-100 an hour, the lowest drop being point 28.79. Within 15 hours we witnessed a drop of from 29.88 to 28.70. These figures mean danger.

"At 11 o'clock that morning the figure remained at 28.70 for a time and by 8 o'clock that night was 29.60.

"The 100-mile-an-hour wind was blowing at 10 o'clock in the morning, and the gale continued until 4 in the afternoon. The wind shifted until it came from three directions at once, southeast, southwest and northwest, with waves 40 feet high.

"We were not in the vortex of the disturbance because we had had 24 hours' warning."

Admiral Leigh C. Palmer, U. S. N., retired, one of the passengers, said Capt. Zearfoss' handling of the ship was masterful. "He was on the bridge 24 hours," Admiral Palmer said, "without a wink of sleep."

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

WHAT TO EAT TO PUT IRON IN YOUR BLOOD AND MAKE YOU STRONG

PHYSICIAN TELLS HOW IRON-CONTAINING VEGETABLES SUCH AS LENTILS, SPINACH, APPLES, ETC. WHEN REGULARLY TAKEN WITH ORGANIC IRON BUILD GREAT STRENGTH AND ENDURANCE

"At their own doors—in the very gardens of those who are weak, nervous and ailing all the while is one of the most valuable tonics and strength-builders known to medical science," said Dr. Emile Sauer, well known New England physician, when consulted recently.

Dr. Sauer further said:—"If your daily diet contains an abundant amount of iron you are giving your body the red blood it needs. But if your blood lacks iron and is thin, pale and watery you cannot expect to be strong and well. On the contrary, your nerves become weakened and you become irritable, fussy and easily upset. In such cases, what you need is iron—organic iron to remove the cause of your trouble, and the moment organic iron is supplied it is often wonderful how quickly your multitude of symptoms will disappear and how strong and vigorous you will become." But be careful to distinguish between ordinary metallic iron which people usually take and true organic iron. Metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on iron filings, while organic iron is a true red blood food, like the iron in your blood itself and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. In fact if you will eat a pint or two of spinach, half a pint of lentils and three or four baked apples each day you will probably not need to take any other form of organic iron; but most people prefer to eat a smaller quantity of iron containing vegetables and take organic iron, like Nuxated Iron, with them. It is like eating one-half pound of eating pounds of meat. To prove to yourself what Nuxated Iron can do for you, get your doctor to take a specimen of your blood and make a "blood count" of your red blood corpuscles; then take Nuxated Iron for a month and have a new blood count" made and see how your red blood corpuscles have increased and how much stronger and better you feel; see how the color has come back to your cheeks, how steady and strong your nerves have become. At all druggists.

Can Now Insure Against Appendicitis

London Firm Offers New Insurance Policy

Due to the enormous prevalence of appendicitis, a firm of insurance men have evolved a scheme whereby people can insure the appendix against the cost of its removal by operation. This removes any anxiety regarding the expense of an appendicitis operation but does not, of course, remove the worry or possible chance of loss of life.

A Treacherous Disease.

Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by so-called stomach trouble, constipation or similar disturbances. Often when there is a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against in the same manner in which one guards against the spread of throat infection, because that is just what appendicitis is—an infection in the intestines spreading to the appendix. When one has sore throat, one can often prevent further trouble by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. The same procedure is necessary to fight the intestinal germs and cause appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows: It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here. It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on both upper and lower bowel and removing matter which poisoned the system for months and which has been doing the lodging. It brings out all matter and immediately relieving pressure on the appendix. It is astonishing the great amount of sonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. You feel right after a natural movement of the bowels how much more foul matter it has contained which was poisoning you. Adlerika acts on both upper and lower bowels, so orders, such as occasional sour stomach, sick on the stomach, headache, one spoonful Adlerika often brings relief. A lasting cure, however, is necessary in cases of chronic constipation and long standing cases of trouble, preferably under direction of a physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I found Adlerika the best in my 37 years' experience." (Name given.)

"I use Adlerika in all appendicitis cases, requiring only one dose." Dr. E. M. D. (Name given on request.)

"I have found nothing in my 20 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Name given.) James Weyer.

"After taking Adlerika for 3 days for 20 years. Having used it to prove the AWFUL INFLUENCE of appendix from my system." (Name given.)

Adlerika is a constant surprise to those who have used only ordinary bowel or stomach medicines, on account of its pleasant and COMPLETE action. Sold by leading druggists everywhere. Sold in St. Louis by Weber Drug Co., 7th and Washington, Doan Co. and other leading druggists.

As wonderful for a quick brilliant polish—as Cutex is for soft smooth cuticle

For years you have known Cutex. You have blessed it a thousand times when you have been in such a hurry and you have just had to get those neglected nails shapely and gleaming in soft smooth cuticle. You have adored the convenience of the little manicure sets. You have marvelled at the magic of their cake and powder polishes.

Now after years of fastidious experiment, Cutex has perfected a wonderful new Liquid Polish. As splendid for a brilliant lasting polish as Cutex is for soft, even cuticle.

This most famous manicure house in the world has perfected a polish that in every particular is ideal. If you had planned it yourself, what more could you have desired than this in any detail?

A polish that won't peel off

spreads evenly and smoothly won't dry in ridges dries almost instantly lasts a whole week
gives a beautiful rose brilliance that water will not dull needs no separate polish remover

Cutex Liquid Polish more than meets all of these requirements for the perfect polish. It spreads smooth and thin. It dries almost instantly into such a lovely gleaming smoothness. It never leaves ugly ridges or rough brush marks as you have known other polishes to do. And it would never think of cracking or peeling off or leaving dull discolored spots at the edges of the nail.

You will be simply delighted with its dainty rose lustre—just the color beautiful women demand today when they wish to be delicately smart. And for a whole week this polish will not fade or grow dull. After a whole week's dishwashing, your nails will keep their smooth unbroken brilliance.

No separate polish remover

And finally here is just another new convenience that Cutex planned in making this new liquid polish. You need never have the bother of a separate remover to take off the old polish. Just a touch of the polish itself wiped off while it is still wet will leave the nail absolutely free of the old polish and ready for the new application.

Cutex Liquid Polish, as well as all the other Cutex preparations, is 35c separately in its smart little rose and black box. Or you can get it in the $1.00 and $3.00 sets. Sets with other polishes are 60c and $1.50.

Every Gray Hair a Sign Post of Age

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

GUILD TO PRODUCE JOHN GALWORTHY'S PLAY, "WINDOWS"

next production of "Artists and Models," which will be made an annual affair • • • Peggy O'Day of New York, who won first prize in the amateur class in a recent beauty contest in Atlantic City, has been engaged for the chorus in the forthcoming production of "The Courtesan."

The first American production of John Drinkwater's "Robert E. Lee" will be given at Richmond, Va., on Nov. 5. After four nights in the former capital of the Confederacy, the play will visit Norfolk briefly, and appear in New York about the middle of November.

"The White Desert," a play of the West by Maxwell Anderson, goes to Stamford for a try-out the end of next week, and opens here the following Monday night at the Princess Theater • • "Sally," departed from the New Amsterdam tonight for St. Louis and eight weeks' further touring before folding up for good.

New "Follies" Almost Ready.

OPTIMISTS in the Ziegfeld office predict the opening of the new "Follies" for Monday week, although the impressario himself has been ill at home for several days. More girls than ever appeared in the revue before are promised, and for the first time chorus men will be among those absent. John Tiller will have a galaxy of his dancing girls, and Gertrude Hoffman will stage a ballet of 18 toe dancers.

The full cast will include Fannie Bryce, Paulette Duval from Paris, Hap Ward, Edna Leedom, Paul Whitman and one of his bands, Florianne and Revelle, Brooke Johns, Olga Steck, Quinault and Rowe, Lew Hearn, Arthur West, Linda from London, Bert and Betty Wheeler, Hilda Ferguson, Harlan Dixon and Marie Callahan. Hap Ward, reputed to be the richest American actor, returns to the stage after a retirement of some years. He was formerly of the team of Ward and Vokes.

Granite City Girl in "Follies."

A DEBUTANTE in the new "Follies" will be Miss Jewel Nadine Binney of Granite City, Ill. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Binney of that town. She is 18 years old, and was educated in St. Louis at the Sacred Heart Convent and at Hosmer Hall, from which she was graduated last June. She is said to be an accomplished dancer and pianist.

Francine Larrimore has signed a long-term contract with Robert McLaughlin, Cleveland and New York producer, and will appear next in "Nobody's Business," by Guy Bolton and Frank Mandell. • • • The Equity Players have asked Cyril Maude to stage their next production, a historical play on the life of Queen Victoria.

When Lynn Overman relinquished the leading role of "The Song and Dance Man" on a recent Monday night in Cincinnati, the author of the piece stepped into the breach and won the highest acclaim. He will remain in the cast another week, by which time he hopes to find another star to relieve him. This versatile playwright is George M. Cohan.

For his forthcoming production of "Cyrano de Bergerac," Walter Hampden has engaged Anita Damrosch, daughter of Walter Damrosch, and Isobel Garland, daughter of Hamlin Garland, the novelist. • • • Florence Reed is to give a series of lectures this winter in New York on Oriental art, one of her hobbies.

Rumor has it that the Colonial Theater in Chicago, one of the finest playhouses in the country, is to be sold to the Masons, who will tear it down in order to erect on its site and that of adjoining property a titanic temple of their order. The total amount of money involved in the transaction is estimated at $21,500,000.

Pass Losses $200,000 a Week.

A STEP towards the abolition of the pass nuisance was recently taken by the managers of the Musical Arts Association, who adopted a resolution pledging themselves to limit the number of free seats at all concerts henceforth given at Carnegie, Town and Aeolian Halls. It is hoped that the idea may be extended to theaters and sport exhibitions. One of the sponsors of the resolution estimated that the pass losses in New York on all amusements total $200,000 a week.

David Glassford, an actor, appears at each performance in the first two scenes of "The Lullaby," at the Knickerbocker; rushes over to the Empire to play an episode in "Casanova," and then scurries back to the Knickerbocker to play in the last scene of "The Lullaby."

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

"The Man From Brodney's," based on the novel by George Barr McCutcheon, is an elaborate film. J. Warren Kerrigan plays the title role. Other stars in the cast are Alice Calhoun, Miss du Pont, Wanda Hawley, Pat O'Malley and Kathleen Key.

Indications are now that Mary Pickford will go to San Francisco shortly for a number of the exterior scenes for "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." If arrangements can be made for the desired locations, the trip will be taken soon after the first scenes are shot at the studio.

Jack Pickford is placing the final touches on his second Allied Distributors and Producers' Corporation release, "Valley of the Wolf," at the Pickford-Fairbanks studio in Hollywood this week.

The dangers of glaring automobile headlights, which violate State laws, are startlingly demonstrated in one of the most exciting sequences of Maurice Tourneur's newest M. C. Levee picture just completed, "Jealous Fools." Carl Miller, speeding along a high-banked road, is blinded by the sudden glare from the lights of an approaching car and crashes into the dirt bank, which turns the car turtle. Through novel camera effects a graphic picturization of the cause and the effect of glaring headlights is offered in the film.

Lillian Gish is to re-create the life story of the most famous of all French heroines, Joan of Arc. According to an announcement by Inspiration Pictures, Inc., Miss Gish will begin work on "Joan of Arc" soon after she completes "Romola," her next big picture.

Paul Doucet, who has a responsible role in "The Leavenworth Case," a Whitman Bennett production distributed by Vitagraph, is a French actor of note, who, during his youth, appeared in a number of plays with Sarah Bernhardt. With him will be seen Seena Owen, Martha Mansfield and Wilfred Lytell.

Ethel Shannon is attempting to popularize the modification of the old hoop skirt costume for present day flappers. She has become so accustomed to the freedom of the spacious skirts during the filming of the Preferred Picture production of "Maytime," that she refuses to return to sport attire without a struggle.

After considerable speculation and experimentation, it was decided that the entire production of "Ben Hur" will be filmed abroad. Nothing, not even the interior shots, will be made in American studios. Models of the settings for the picture have been made and these will be taken abroad to be constructed on a vast scale in Italy, Egypt and the Holy City.

"His Darker Self," the feature blackface comedy starring Lloyd Hamilton, has just been completed at the D. W. Griffith Studio at Mamaroneck, N. Y. The picture marks the first serious effort to bring blackface comedy to the screen in feature length productions.

The second Educational-Juvenile Comedy, "Three Cheers," just completed at the Fine Arts Studio in Los Angeles, will present a comedy in which all the principal actors are children. The cast will include such well-known juvenile stars as Roger Keene, Ernest Butterworth, Tom Hicks Jack McHugh, Peggy Cartwright and the 2-year-old diving and swimming marvel, little Bonnie Barrett.

Final arrangements have been completed whereby Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., will distribute the microscopic films, "Secrets of Life," the first of which have recently been completed by Louis H. Tolhurst.

Baby Peggy is gathering her makeup boxes, powder puffs, trunks of costumes and dolls, preparatory to moving to Principal Pictures studio to begin work on her recently signed three-year contract with Sol Lesser.

Assignment of Z. Wall Covington and Jack Gardner has completed the cast of the James Cruze's next Paramount picture, "To the Ladies," and work has been started. The featured players in this adaptation of the stage play are Edward Horton, Helen Jerome Eddy, Theodora Roberts and Louise Dresser.

Winifred Allen, former star in Triangle Pictures, is returning to motion picture work after several years absence from the screen. She has been signed to play in Allan Dwan's new Paramount picture, "Big Brother." Miss Allen appeared in seven of the pictures which Mr. Dwan directed for Triangle. She will have the role of Kitty Costello and will share honors with Tom Moore, Raymond Hatton, Joe King and Mickey Bennett.

Twenty-five cowboy motion picture actors made up their faces recently from the world's largest makeup box—the colored clays from the famous painted desert in Arizona. In the filming of Zane Grey's "The Call of the Canyon," a Paramount picture, near Flagstaff, Ariz., the company ran out of grease paint. The clays have long been used by Navajo Indians as war paint.

Ernest Torrence, now very much in vogue in motion pictures, once won a scholarship in the Royal Academy of Music in London and also a gold medal for operatic singing. He began his stage career at the Savoy Theater in London, playing romantic lover roles and singing baritone. At present Torrence is playing the part of the Orthodox Minister in "West of the Water Tower," Glenn Hunter's first Paramount picture, at the Long Island studio.

A single teaspoonful of DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN Will restore good humor

Mothers!! Apply Common Sense

THIS is the era of the prevention of disease and sensible people do not wait until sickness has actually come before remedying the trouble. The crowded hospitals everywhere are sad examples of the results of neglect. Be especially watchful of children. Restlessness, lack of normal appetite and feverishness usually indicate constipation. Stop it that instant with a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and you will have prevented real sickness. Mrs. Ida Williamson of 1637 Pine St., Long Beach, Cal., and Mrs. Lou Brawley of Self, Ark., never have illness in the family because of their prompt use of Syrup Pepsin.

A Great Family Laxative

It may be difficult to decide just which medicine to use out of the many that are offered, but it would not be if you knew the facts. There are laxatives, cathartics, purgatives and physics, and they vary in their reaction on the system. Naturally, the stronger the medicine the more it shocks the system, so wise parents never give anything but a laxative to children. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a mild laxative, a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and desirable aromatics, and so appreciated that it is now the largest selling preparation of its kind in the world, over 10 million bottles being used annually. The formula is on every package.

Three Rules of Health

Purchase a bottle of Syrup Pepsin at a drug store and always keep one in the family medicine chest. Give it to anyone from infant to grandparent, for it is safe, and the cost is less than a cent a dose. You can keep a family healthy with just this simple medicine. Give it for constipation, torpid liver, indigestion, biliousness, headaches, colds and other evidence of bowel obstruction. Dr. Caldwell, who was a practicing physician for 47 years and who originated this formula, had three rules of health that he found very effective among his patients and which you can follow with great benefit: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

EARLY PRESIDENTS SIGNED SHIPS' PAPERS

Signatures of Washington and John Adams on Clearance Documents.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Modern presidents may have a large amount of routine work devolving upon them, but there are some details, attended to regularly by their early predecessors, that are hardly considered important enough nowadays to refer to the White House.

Among these, according to Charles Kohen, Washington philatelist and document colector, was the trifling detail of signing ships' clearance papers. Among a number of ancient documents Kohen recently picked up were two such clearances for small vessels, one signed "G. Washington," the other bearing the large, scrawled signature of John Adams.

The paper signed by Washington, in September, 1794, attested the fact that the 82-ton schooner "Eliza" of New York was owned by citizens of the new nation and was duly allowed to set sail for the West Indies with a cargo of flour, hoops, onions, staves, shingles and scantlings. The form was made out in English, French and Dutch.

The document signed by President Adams bore also the counter signature of Timothy Pickering, Secretary of State; was dated August, 1798; showed the nationality of the sloop, "Endeavour," and gave it leave to depart from Portland, Me., to Demerarra, with a cargo of boards, oars, butter, fish, flour, tar, pitch and beef.

The most interesting part of these clearance papers was an attest at the bottom of the sheet praying "Most Serene, Serene, Most Puisant Puisiant, High, Illustrious, Noble Honorable, Venerable, Wise and Prudent, Lords, Emperors, Kings Republics, Princes, Dukes, Earls, Barons, Schepens, Judges, Councillors" and a long list of other officers "of all the good cities and places who shall see these presents or hear them read" to recognize the American registry.

Kohen also has a number of envelopes that show the difference in postal rates and speed of service since the early days of the post office. One contained a letter, signed by James Madison as Secretary of State, in 1804, addressed to James Sheafe of Portsmouth, N. H., and bore a stamp showing the fee for the trip was 10 cents. Another carried a letter from the recent Amundsen polar expedition, addressed to President Harding, which was sent by airplane mail to Nome, Alaska, and thence across the continent to Washington for 12 cents, including registration fee.

Another document in this collection is one relating to Lord Fairfax, who was granted large estates in Virginia by the King of England in early colonial days. In it, Lord Thomas prayed the Sheriff of Londoun County, which adjoined his estates, to take into custody Ann Seward, who was charged with trespassing upon the Fairfax estate in 1763. According to the yellowed torn manuscript, the said Ann had wrought damages estimated at 550 pounds, for which Lord Thomas required payment.

LEGISLATORS IN PHILIPPINES MAY RETURN TO NATIVE DRESS

Member of House Proposes Shirt Like "Barong" Be Worn Instead of American Attire.

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, Oct. 6.—Restoration of the colorful native "barong" as the attire of Filipino legislators, is proposed in a resolution submitted by Representative Rafael Villaneuva in the House of Representatives. Heretofore native lawmakers have sported the approved American dress, but many believe it would be more patriotic to return to the original fashion of the Philippines.

The "barong" is a shirt-like garment, with a narrow neckband and takes the place of both shirt and coat. Worn outside the belt of the trousers, it gives Americans the impression that the wearer had dressed hastily and neglected to tuck his shirt into his trousers.

WAR-TORN FLANDERS NEARS REGENERATION

AMSTERDAM, Holland, Oct. 4.—On the invitation of the Government, a number of newspaper men made a three-days' motor trip to see the reconstruction work that has been accomplished on the Belgian battlefields of the war. Nearly the whole of the Flemish war zone was traversed, and Ypres, Nieuport and Dixmude, places famed for the fierce and bloody fighting which took place there in the great conflict, were visited.

It was surprising to find that Ypres, where not one stone was left upon another, substantially rebuilt with churches, public buildings and other structures risen from their ruins. Great Britain, it may be recalled, offered 10,000,000 francs ($2,000,000) if the Belgian Government would leave the ruins of the famous medieval Cloth Hall and the cathedral intact as impr[illegible] war memorials, but the Belgians did not accept the offer, preferring to restore them and other buildings as soon as possible.

Of the 19,407 inhabitants in Ypres before the war, 12,631 have returned. The reconstruction of most of the old buildings in medieval style is criticised by Belgian experts, who hold that the attempt to copy the incomparable work of the ancient architects is a profanation.

It is interesting to see how the small Flemish towns and villages have risen from their ashes with large sections devoted to dwellings for artisans and with fine, modern streets. In the course of the war 78,000 homes were destroyed in Belgium. Twenty-two thousand others were more or less damaged. Of the total number 85,000 have already been rebuilt or repaired. Out of 1200 public buildings destroyed in the war 1000 have been rebuilt.

Many hundred miles of roads and railways have been placed in their former condition, while bridges, aqueducts and sewers have been rebuilt. Something like 400,000 acres of ground have been cleared of shells and other old war material.

Up to July, 1923, Belgium had spent 7,000,000,000 francs ($1,500,000,000) for the restoration of the devastated regions. The almost complete regeneration of Flanders is splendid evidence of the vitality, spirit and enterprise of the Belgian people.

MANY OPPORTUNITIES OPEN FOR GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Despite the fact that the number of Federal employes has been reduced by nearly 400,000 since the close of the war, the Civil Service Commission sees no prospect of a considerable decrease in the number of opportunities for Government employment.

To meet the normal turnover, which in a tremendous force like the Government's is necessarily large, the commission held examinations in the year ended June 30, 1923, for more than 600 different kinds of positions, in which more than 200,000 persons competed. Present indications are that the number for this fiscal year will be as great.

A study of the examinations held during the past two years reveals an interesting range of position all the way from charwoman and laborer, for which the primary requirement is good physical condition, to those which demand qualifications of a very high order, such as agricultural transportation economist at a salary of $4000 to $5500, and mechanical and electrical engineer at a salary of $5000.

New German Oil Formula Rubs Out Rheumatic Pains

Remarkable Discovery Promises Relief to Rheumatic Sufferers

German chemistry, that has given to the world the boon of Aspirin for the relief of headache pain, and Novocaine for painless dentistry, has now come forward with another scientific discovery that promises to make rheumatic pain a thing of the past for thousands who have suffered terrible tortures.

A new combination of certain oils has been discovered, which produces a clear amber liquid that affords immediate relief from pain in many instances. It is so penetrating that it disappears within a few seconds, so that it must be entirely absorbed by the body tissue. Even in the most advanced and stubborn cases the use of this remarkable oil has shown astonishing improvement at once in many cases. Tired muscles regain life, creaking joints with the pain all gone become supple, and the annoying twinges cease.

Rheumatism, in many cases, is due to internal abscesses, such as a blind pus pocket in a tooth, which gives off poisons. These poisons are carried by the blood to the muscles and joints and this new oil is designed to neutralize these pain-causing poisons.

So astonishing have been the results from the use of this oil that the American distributors have authorized local druggists to dispense it to rheumatic sufferers in this city, with a positive written guarantee, signed by themselves, to return the full purchase price of the first bottle if the rheumatic pains are not wonderfully relieved. All who suffer from rheumatic pains should take advantage of this liberal offer. Unless you get relief from the very first bottle, your druggist will return your money. It is called Buhler Oil, and can be had at most good druggists, such as Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph (3 stores), Keiffer Drug Co. (2 stores), Enderle Drug Co. (6 stores), Johnson Bros. Drug Co.

Perhaps the greatest moment occurs with the collapse of the skyscraper in process of construction. The premature release of a huge girder being hoisted to the upper floors of a tall building results in the dislocation of some beams in the framework. Lucile Mayer, contralto, also is on the bill.

"A Chapter in Her Life," founded on the novel, "Jewell" by Clara Louise Burnham, and adapted to the screen by Lois Weber, is the featnre photoplay offering this week at the Rivoli Theater. The story is that of a little child, who by her innocence and the good she sees in people, works a miracle and brings happiness to replace hate.

Claud Gillingwater plays the role of the little girls' grandfather, whose only conception of happiness is something that his riches strangely enough has failed to buy. Jane Mercer has the role of the child. Others in the cast are Jacqueline Gadsden, Frances Raymond, Robert Frazier, Eva Thatcher, Ralphy Yearsley, Fred Thomson and Beth Rayon.

Occupational Therapy Classes Begin.

The Missouri Association for Occupational Therapy has opened the fall term of its training school, and because of the big demand from hospitals and institutions all over the country for trained therapists, will admit a few more students to the new class. The course is for two years and includes lectures at Washington University, and training in crafts and arts. Dr. Malvern B. Clopton is president of the association, Mrs. Elias Michael, vice president, and Miss Geraldine Lermit, director. Students must have a high school education. The school is at Euclid avenue and King's highway.

Unitarian Women's Meeting.

Mrs. Oscar C. Gallagher of Brookline, Mass., president of the National Alliance of Unitarian Women, will be in St. Louis tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday to attend an informal conference of the Mississippi Valley Associate Alliance. Sessions tomorrow at the Church of the Unity include a reception for Mrs. Gallagher. She will speak at a luncheon at 12:30 Tuesday at the Church of the Messiah and on Wednesday will visit the First Unitarian Church at Alton.

What does it mean to you?

WE call it Wolff's Greater Store for Men; that includes all St Louis men

It's a larger store; we've added a lot of space—double our former space We didn't do that just for the privilege of paying more rent The larger space was needed to take proper care of our customers

But a larger store isn't necessarily a greater store We use the word "greater" in another sense than size

We started this business with the idea that it would grow in proportion as it rendered a service to men

You have to have clothes and things to wear; somebody has to protect your interests in getting the right qualities —you want things to wear well Somebody has to buy goods at the right prices in order to sell them to you at the right prices There's such a thing as paying too much for what you get

These things are our job; we're trying to do it conscientiously We want St Louis men to know that we're doing the job well Our expansion to larger and larger space seems to indicate that a lot of them do know it

Restoration comedies—a world in which everybody has at least two concurrent love affairs all the time, and the only rule observed by anybody is: "If you must be unfaithful to me, for heaven's sake don't let me find out."

It is by a puncture of this extremely elastic code that all the trouble is caused in Mr. Maugham's play. Lady George Grayston (still married) is being financed in her social endeavors by a rich American, Arthur Fenwick; the Duchesse de Surennes (divorced) is financing an unpleasant tame cat by the name of Gilbert Paxton.

A kind of trade-union feeling of fellowship draws Paxton and Lady George together, and they are so ill-advised as to transgress the single rule of their code. Fenton so far forgets himself as to call Lady George names, and the Duchesse threatens to turn really nasty; but a little tact next day smooths everything out, and leaves everybody in statu quo. Everybody, that is, except Lady George's debutante sister, who breaks off her just-concluded engagement to a young peer, and bolts very wisely back to America.

Too Bitter to Convince.

THE bitterness which Mr. Maugham has put into the writing of this play destroys any conviction that it might have carried. His indictment is too sweeping; we feel that even if the picture he has drawn is true of the particular subsection of society which it is supposed to portray, so fierce an attack against a small class of people who matter very little to anybody but themselves is hardly worth the powder and shot Mr. Maugham has expended.

It was probably owing to this intense bitterness that rumors cropped up that this or that character was intended as a personal portrait. (On the program at the Globe a note is inserted wherein the author disclaims any such intention.) The result, at all events, is an effect of overdrawing which robs the play of any very general appeal. Doubtless it will be seen by all those who are able to feel themselves even remotely implicated in its structures on society; but whether the general public will find in it anything to draw them to the Globe Theater seems open to question.

There is some excellent acting. Mr. Maugham's work is of a quality high enough to ensure that. Perhaps the surprise of the evening is Miss Margaret Bannerman's work as Lady George, the unscrupulous climber and hedonist who has solved with such satisfaction to herself the old problem how she may eat her cake and yet have it. Miss Bannerman here ventures with success into deeper waters than she has hitherto been accustomed to swim in. Miss Constance Collier gives a fine performance as a slack-mouthed, sensual fool of a woman. Miss Marion Terry is very sound as a disillusioned and semi-detached Italian princess. Miss Alice Mosley plays the young sister with charm. None of the men matter much.

"SALLY," THREE YEARS OLD, ARRIVES AT THE AMERICAN TOMORROW

Idea?"; the Three White Kuhns, in a song act, and Mme. Jewell's mannikins.

The Rialto's announcement includes Harry Stoddard and his band, in "The Streets of New York"; Rae Eleanor Ball and Joseph Ball, violinist and 'cellist; Mlle. Janet, in a costume and musical skit, "A Little Touch of Paris"; Marion Murray, in "Likes and Dislikes"; Will Burns and Ed Lynn, in a song and comedy turn, and Crystal Bennett's troupe of athletic girls.

Columbia, Grand, Gayety.

A MINIATURE rodeo will be given at the Columbia by the Cheyenne Days company, and James, Anderson and King will give a petite act of singing and dancing called "The Rose Revue." A musical program will be given by Carol and Louise Dore, violinist and pianist. Others listed are Milton and Lehman, "nut" comedians; Fitzgerald and Carroll, in a song and comedy turn; and Dashington's cat and dog circus. The film feature is "The Man Who Won," with Dustin Farnum.

The Grand Opera House announces Eleanor Pierce, with Howard Baker and Jerry Benson, in a gambol of dancing and flirtation; Callahan and Bliss, the Solis brothers' marimba band, Fries and Wilson, Jean Barrios, the Cavana trio, Lou Browne nad Muriel Rogers, and Gordon's comedy canines. The Gayety's show is "The Bon Tons," featuring John Barry. The German Theater Stock company, at the Eagle Auditorium, presents tonight a three-act comedy entitled, "Boersenfieber" ("Stock Speculation Fever").

PLAYGROUND BUILDING BEGAN WITH SAND PILE

Start of Movement Was in 1885 in Yard of Little Chapel in Boston, Leaders, Say.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 6.—A heap of yellow sand and a pile of "sand pies" in the yard of a little chapel in Boston in the summer of 1885, was the starting point for a movement which has made America the greatest playing nation of the globe, according to the leaders of the Playground and Recreation Association of America.

The association, bringing some 800 delegates from all parts of the United States and Canada, will meet her in annual convention Oct. 8 to 13. Some of the leaders who will attend the convention have been leaders in the play movement from its infancy. From that little sand pile in the yard of the Parmenter Street Chapel they have seen this movement grow to 4401 supervised playgrounds of America.

Passed Through Seven Stages.

Mabel Travis Wood, of the playground association, compares this growth to Shakspeare's typical man who passed through seven ages. The seven ages of the playground movement, she said, are sand gardens, model playgrounds, small parks, recreation centers, civic art and welfare, neighborhood organization and community service.

From the sand garden developed the model playground, which added to the sand box for small children apparatus for physical activity such as swings, ladders and horizontal bars, with their appeal to older boys and girls.

The year-round playground soon developed into the small park, and gymnasium apparatus, baseball diamonds, tennis courts and public baths came into evidence. The next period of the movement saw the building of field houses to add indoor activities to those of the open air.

Public recreation by 1912 was sufficiently advanced to branch out into the field of civic art and welfare, and six years later community councils and neighborhood associations began to appear.

Present Stage of Movement.

As a result of the World War there has come the present stage of the play movement, the age of community service. During the war, the Playground and Recreation Association proposed to the Government that it mobilize its play leaders and play facilities to give the soldiers proper recreation. War Camp Community Service was the result, and when peace came Community Service became the successor of the War Camp Community Service.

Now, more than 250 communities have organized their spare time for the common good. Some of the things Community Service, which is a branch of the playground association, has accomplished are training volunteer leaders, organizing neighborhoods, decreasing juvenile delinquency, transforming cluttered lots into playgrounds and supplying community music and drama.

The home of Lincoln was chosen for the recreation congress in October, because the association, according to Joseph Lee, its president, "is striving for the development of the kind of communities Lincoln wanted the country to have."

Sure Way to Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads—that is to dissolve them.

To do this, get two ounces of calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The calonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

Housewife Becomes New Woman

"All of our best doctors had given me up. I was unable to leave my bed for 10 weeks and was yellow as a pumpkin, besides the terrible stomach pains I suffered. Our druggist advised my husband to try Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and it has saved my life. I am a new woman now." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Renewing Complexions at Home by Absorption

If your complexion is marred by sallowness, muddiness, or such blemishes as liver spots, moth patches, pimples, freckles, it's useless to putter with powders and paints, jellies, creams and things if you really want to get rid of the condition.

The rational way is to take off the complexion itself, with all its offensive marks. Just get an ounce of pure mercolized wax at the druggist's and use at night same as cold cream. Remove next morning with water and soap. The mercolized wax actually absorbs the affected scarf skin, so gradually no one suesses you are treating your face—unless it be by the result, which is truly wonderful. There's nothing like it for restoring a natural, healthy and beautiful complexion.

ILLINOIS CITY STUDIES WIND TO MITIGATE SMOKE NUISANCE

Plans to Locate Factory Section According to Prevailing Direction of Air Currents.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 6.—Hoping to avoid thes moke nuisance prevalent in some cities with factory districts, the planners of the proposed rearrangement of the city of Springfield have enlisted the aid of the United States Weather Bureau in determining which way the wind usually blows.

They plan that the smoke of factories shall blow out over the country side and not over the residential district. Records of the past 44 years have been examined by Meteorologist Clarence J. Root, and he has informed them that the prevailing wind direction is from the south all months, except January and February, when it is from the northwest.

Consequently, the planners have set aside the extreme northwest part of the proposed new city for the industrial section.

"A study of the diagram," Root said, 'clearly indicates that the wind from any of the directions which it usually blows will carry the smoke from the industrial zone out into the country, and that the smoke-bearing winds will blow over the city only a small part of the time."

Direction of prevailing winds will have a determining part in all city planning in the future, Lyron H. West, city planner, declared. "It is obvious," he said, "that it is greatly to be desired that the residential sections of the city be to the windward, rather than to the leeward, of a large factory district, especially where the use of soft coal is prevalent. Even though electric energy may be used to a large extent in such a factory district, there are always odors and noises which tend to make homes to the leeward undesirable. A case in point is the large area of Chicago to the leeward of the stockyards. Unquestionably, millions of dollars have been lost to property owners whose property has been affected by this condition.

Sale of Floor Samples Continues

Savings of 15% to 40%

THERE is more to tell our patrons about this Sale of Sample Suites than the borders of this advertisement will hold. Scores of suites, odd pieces, too numerous to list here, are all marked at close-out prices to effect immediate clearance.

OUR floors are over-crowded with furniture and new shipments are pouring in. We have leased additional warehouse space to take care of the over-flow, but even that is insufficient. We are therefore selling out many floor samples, suites that have been in stock for some time, as well as stylish new suites recently purchased at the market. The discounts range from 15% to 40%.

WE are holding this sale for our benefit as well as yours. The benefit to us is not so much in the profit we make for, as you can see, the furniture is marked pretty low, but we dispose of this surplus stock and make a quick turnover. The benefit to you is obvious. Be convinced by comparison.

Out of Little Acorns

How often are we tempted to ignore the "little things" that present themselves in the day's work!

But it is the little things which in the aggregate constitute the big things. It is well here to recall the saying of Robinson: "Trifles are trifles, but a great trifle is good."

Every large oak tree is a testimonial to the greatness of the little acorn.

In any business the little courtesies and small favors are what ultimately build great public confidence.

Strange Features of Webb Poisoning Case, a Tangle of Suspicion, Mystery and Gossip

WIDELY DIFFERENT STORIES OF COUPLE'S AFFAIRS RELATED BY FRIENDS OF DEAD WIFE AND HER SURVIVING HUSBAND

For Many Years, Charles A. Webb, With Little, if Any, Means of His Own After Financial Reverses, Had Courted Gertrude Emily Gorman, Heiress to $2,000,000, but She Had Rejected Him Repeatedly Under the Order of Her Mother, Who Refused to Approve the Union—Then, After the Mother's Death a Little Over a Year Ago, She Married Him, "More," She Told a Friend, "to Get an Escort Rather Than a Husband"—From a Healthy Woman, She Became in a Short Time an Invalid, and Then Death Quickly Followed.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.

ONE of the most baffling death problems which the authorities here have been called upon to solve in recent years is that of Mrs. Gertrude Gorman Webb, heiress and bride of 10 months, who expired under unusual circumstances at the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club at Rye a little more than a week ago and over whose $2,000,000 estate there now rages a bitter contest between relatives of the woman and her surviving husband.

Seldom, perhaps, has a case presented so many strange angles or remained so long a puzzle to the investigators after offering at the very start what seemed to be definite and obvious clews for solution.

New phases continue to develop almost daily, but instead of throwing more light on the situation, they seem only to deepen its mystery. The maze of theories and suggestions of murder by poisoning that have flown back and forth from the time the woman was known to be dying have remained just what they were at the beginning—theories and suspicions, not yet tangible enough to justify the placing of a formal charge against the person at whom they have been consistently directed.

However, after more than a week of wrangling and post-mortem tests since Dr. William J. Meyer, Mrs. Webb's attending physician, refused to issue a death certificate because of his belief that her fatal illness had been brought about by poisoning, toxicologists have at last definitely established the fact that bichloride of mercury was present in the kidneys, liver and small traces of it in the brain of the woman. Whether or not it existed in quantities sufficient to cause death or even to bring about the kidney disorder from which Mrs. Webb presumably died, remains as much a question as before, and there now appears to be little means of answering it with enough accuracy to warrant criminal action unless further evidence of foul play is uncovered. In the meantime, friends of the woman continue to bring to light facts concerning the intimate affairs of Mr. and Mrs. Webb which they declare strengthen their murder theory, while the husband and his supporters tell almost equally convincing stories to show that the married life of the pair was happy and that the poisoning theory, at least in so far as it would involve him in any way, is untenable.

Greed for Millions on Both Sides

As a result of all these things, the case has held the attention of New York as few have done in the past. It holds an almost unlimited appeal to popular interest. There are in it not only the elements of mystery, of suspicion and hints of a subtle murder scheme unwittingly carried out by the victim against herself, but also features such as a 10-line will hurriedly written and signed on the deathbed, leaving an estate of millions in the hands of the husband; the exclusion of the husband from the wife's sick room by her physician a week before her death; the "mansion of mystery" where the couple spent several weeks prior to the woman's illness and where, it is suggested, the murder scheme was first set in operation; the declaration of a friend of the heiress that "Gertie Gorman married Charles Webb to get a male escort rather than because of affection for him," and last of all, the unseemly haste with which both factions rushed into contention over the woman's estate even before her funeral was held. Webb almost immediately filed the will for probate and Samuel Jennings Gorman, father of Mrs. Webb, filed a contest almost as promptly.

Where this jumble of theories and suggestions eventually will lead nobody can now forecast. It is doubtful whether there can ever be adduced enough direct evidence to convict anybody of a crime. But one thing at least is certain. That is, if any one actually did bring about her death by a slow poisoning process in order to inherit her estate, as her relatives believe, the method was a novel and a sinister one.

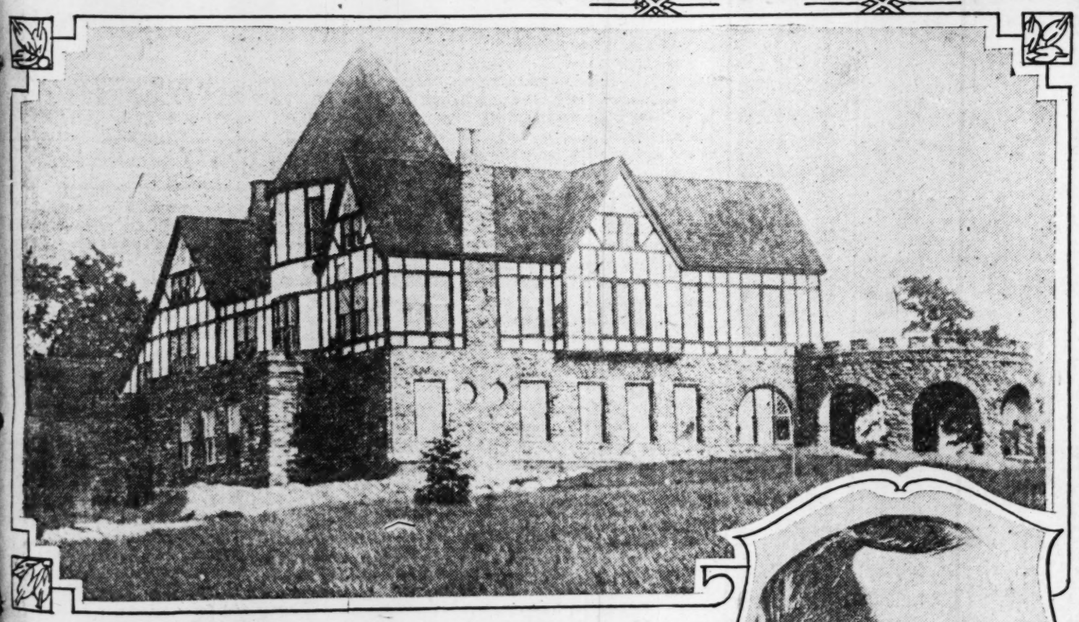
Examination has already disclosed with a fair degree of certainty that the corrosive sublimate was not administered as medicine or taken directly into the stomach as might have been expected in a poisoning case, but was applied externally in such a way as to reach the kidneys and their connecting passages and cause them to fail in their bodily functions.

The illness which proved fatal to Mrs. Webb was said to resemble Bright's disease, with other complications which at the time could not be fully explained. Before her death, however, there were discovered conditions which Dr. Meyer declared could only have been brought about by mercurial applications or injections. It was these conditions that led him to decline to sign a death certificate until an autopsy had been conducted and which prompted him to make known to her relatives his suspicion that the illness was not entirely from natural causes.

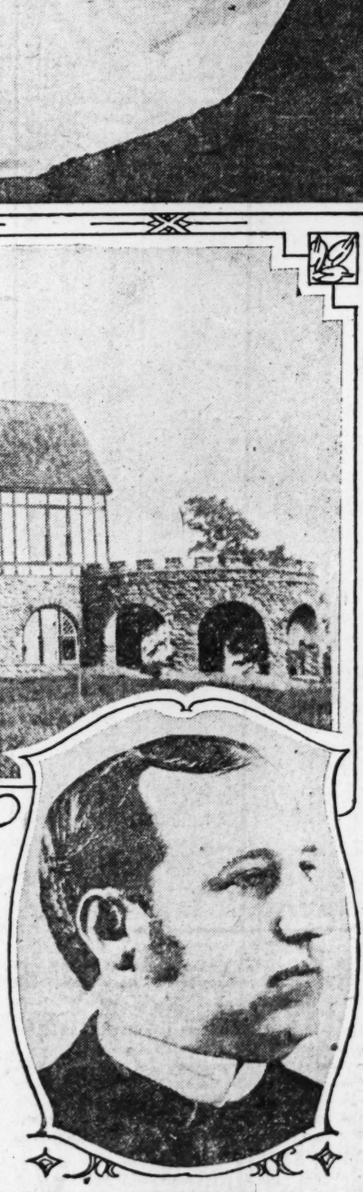
MRS. GERTRUDE GORMAN WEBB.

Wealthy New York woman whose mysterious death is baffling the authorities. She is shown here as she appeared in bridal costume at the time of her wedding 10 months ago.

At the right is a photograph of the bride and groom. Webb was several years younger than his wife and, before his marriage, was a poor man.



The "House of Mystery," an old mansion on the Gorman country estate near Bridgeport, Conn., where the Webbs spent several weeks prior to Mrs. Webb's illness. Though the house has been the property of the Gorman family for 30 years, it has never been occupied for a long period and since 1918 has been untenanted except by a caretaker. The floors are said to be rotting away beneath the sumptuous furnishings which adorn the spacious interior.



SAMUEL JENNINGS GORMAN.

Mow Mercury Was Used a Mystery

When these injections were begun, how long they were continued and whether anyone administered them or caused Mrs. Webb to administer them herself are questions yet unanswered. Physicians and chemical analysts in their efforts to ascertain in just what manner the mercury treatments of Mrs. Webb may have affected her have discussed extensively the theory that the patient's kidneys, already in a diseased condition, may have been the vulnerable spot attacked by the drug.

It is known that Mrs. Webb was suffering from a kidney disorder at the time the mercurial injections are alleged to have been given to her. Physicians now agree that if she was in such a condition she might have been more susceptible to the effects of poisoning than a person in normal health.

Dr. Wm. Hala, noted toxicologist and poison expert, has expressed his views of the case as follows:

"To my mind, it would seem a risky thing to give mercury in any form to a patient suspected of having kidney disorders. The stomach and kidneys are the first organs attacked by mercury and a diseased kidney would be a particularly fertile field for any trouble which the mercurial injections might set up.

"A person in normal health might readily resist the effects of small doses of mercury, regardless of the manner in which it was administered. In all probability a mercury solution, if used solely for sanitary purposes, would not adversely affect the kidneys, although that is possible if an unreasonably strong solution were used. If mercury were introduced into the blood stream by a hypodermic injection, it would immediately make its way to the kidneys and stomach. A person with impaired kidneys could not throw off its corrosive effects, and death might result.

"Mercury is now being used almost entirely by the medical profession as a means of combating syphilis. Besides bichloride of mercury, there are also iodide of mercury and salicylate of mercury, all of them deadly if not used with great discretion."

CHARLES WEBB.

WILLIAM T. HUNTER,

Former Mayor of Devon, Pa., and uncle by marriage of Mrs. Webb who was the first to charge openly that the woman had been murdered with mercurial poison administered externally.

How "House of Mystery" Figures in Story

It is a strange fact that in a case already so full of mysterious angles there should enter a "mansion of mystery" where, some believe, the sinister murder scheme, if one really existed, originated and execution began.

Near Bridgeport, Conn., stands a rambling old country house which during the 30 years it has been the property of the Gorman family has never been occupied for any extended period and which has not been tenanted at all since 1918 except by a caretaker. It was probably due to its desertion that an air of superstition has always hung about the place and its floors have been allowed to rot away under its extravagant furnishings, while neighbors have kept away from it and its surrounding spacious grounds. Standing thus in its seclusion, it well might have offered an inviting scene for furthering murderous designs.

TRAGIC FATE OF THE TWO PRETTY DAUGHTERS OF AN ENGLISH INN KEEPER WHO BECAME PRINCESSES

To the right is the beautiful Jessica Harrington, later Princess Abbas Halim, former Chorus Girl and daughter of a London "pub" owner, whose beauty won her a royal husband in whose palace in Cairo she was found dead. To the left is Beatrice Harrington, sister of Jessica, who married Prince Louis de Bourbon, Duke of Ansola, against the wishes of his domineering mother, who caused him to be kidnaped and withheld from her.

Both Married Members of Royal Houses, but One Recently Shot Herself to Death in Her Palace in Cairo, Whether by Accident or Design Is Not Yet Determined, Though the Police Authorities Give Her the Benefit of the Doubt by Calling It an Accident, While the Other, Married to a Cousin of the King of Spain, Lives a Lonely Life Since His Mother's Agents Kidnaped Her Bridegroom From Her Side and Took Him Into Enforced Retirement Because He Had Deigned to Wed Beneath His Station.

LONDON, Oct. 6.

A FEW days ago European capitals were stirred by the news that Princess Abbas Halim of Egypt had been found mysteriously shot to death in the palace of her royal husband on the banks of the Nile at Cairo. Although her death was presumably an accident, the story of the circumstances attending it echoed with the tragedy of a woman who rose from an humble station in life to that of royalty only to find bitterness where she had hoped to find happiness. It also recalls the almost equally tragic romance of her elder sister, who, like the other, became a Princess and a court favorite through her beauty and cleverness.

Twenty years or more ago, two pretty little flaxen-haired girls, Beatrice and Jessica Harrington, played about the door of their father's public house, the famous old inn known as "The Spread Eagle" at Wandsworth, a suburb of London, and vied with each other for the favor of the travelers who made pets of both. Brought up and educated to fill only the lowly station in which they were born, there was little in their early life to indicate that some day they would be proud ladies with palaces, priceless gowns and jewels of staggering value. But as years went on their beauty won for them what birth had not bestowed and they became the wives of members of two royal houses.

Not Fairy Story Ending

According to the fairy books, such a rise from humble beginnings should reap its rewards, the least of which should be "happiness ever after," but the tale of these two little Cinderellas who stepped from their fireside corners into the limelight of European courts is a notable exception to the usual trend of fairy stories.

In place of "happiness ever after," Beatrice who married Prince Louis de Bourbon, Duke of Ansola, found only hatred for her in her husband's household and a life of loneliness and wandering, the pathetic status of wife in name only. What the younger sister, Jessica, found after gaining fame on the stage as "Jacky Hamilton" and a title by her marriage to the Egyptian, is suggested by the report of her tragic death. One bullet from her pearl-handled revolver ended her tempestuous career. The little weapon was found on the stained Persian carpet beside her when her body was discovered. She had been cleaning the dainty blue steel "toy"—so the Coroner held after a lengthy examination of the evidence—and had accidentally discharged it, taking her life.

However, that verdict has appeared anything but convincing to many of her London friends, and especially to her father, James Harcourt Harrington. He has sent other members of his family to Cairo to make a further investigation while in London are heard tales in support of theories of both suicide and murder.

In the meantime, Beatrice has returned from her wanderings to the home of her childhood to be with her father, the innkeeper, in his sorrow.

The Proud Mother-in-Law

It was in 1913 when Beatrice left her father's roof to become the bride of Prince Louis, who is a cousin of the King of Spain. To all outward appearances, the match was one marked by devotion on both sides, but hardly had the banns been read by which the innkeeper's daughter became a Princess of the royal house of Spain when the bridegroom's mother, the domineering Dowager Duchess of Ansola, descended upon the pair to bring about their separation. She tried every means in her power to have the marriage annulled and even appealed to the Vatican. When these efforts proved futile, it is said, she maneuvered the kidnaping of her son and for years has managed to frustrate all his efforts to rejoin his bride, who has gone about from watering place to watering place, hoping that some time her dream of happiness as a member of royalty may be realized. She is now a well-known, although a tragic figure in European society.

The course of Jessica was more spectacular, even though hardly less unhappy in the end. She left her father's inn at an earlier age than did Beatrice. She was hardly more than a schoolgirl when, against her family's wishes, she obtained a position in the establishment of a famous costumier in Regent street.

As the daily fashion parade passed in and out Madame's doors the lovely young shop girl watched with envious, scheming eyes, and planned to lift herself out of her humble position into the same luxurious world in which these women lived.

Prince and Princess Louis de Bourbon, shortly after their marriage, which the mother of the Prince has broken up by the very effective method of causing him to be kidnaped and held a prisoner from his bride.

Got Job as Chorus Girl

Her vivid beauty and quick wit soon attracted the attention of a prominent theatrical man, who gave her a job as chorus girl. She graduated into the front row of the chorus in Andre Charlot's revue, "5064 Garrad," produced at the Alhambra Theater just before the war, and famous as the starting point of a number of bright theatrical careers.

"Jacky" Hamilton, as she called herself, soon drew to herself a circle of wealthy admirers. She became the toast of the hour among the dashing young blades who nightly haunt the highways and byways of Piccadilly's environs, in search of "high life."

A rich and youthful member of a titled family was the first favorite among her courtiers, and before their association ended, the man, according to report, spent a fortune of half a million on the fascinating "Jacky."

Whether this be true, it is a fact that she rode to and from the theater, always, in a luxurious car, kept up a beautiful home and entertained lavishly for her chorus girl friends and their wealthy acolytes.

Bought $350 Worth of Perfume

Her prodigality became legend. The story goes that a famous West End perfumer almost fainted one afternoon when the radiant Miss "Hamilton" walked into his shop, asked to be shown some bath salts and perfumes, and walked out, leaving an order for $350 worth of rare and delicate scents.

Her lovely home in the exclusive Mayfair district was cluttered with gowns, hats, slippers and furs of every description, and her set of sables was the target of photographers and the envy of stage women of infinitely greater talent and prestige for many seasons.

During the war, when everyone's thoughts turned to serious things, and even butterfly women like "Jacky Hamilton" paused in the giddy whirl of meaningless gaiety to cheer up the nation's defenders, she met Capt. Arthur Evelyn Ellis, an officer in the Third Rifle Brigade, and what was even more significant socially, a cousin of Lady Howard de Walden.

About this time the Harrington girls' only brother joined the Royal Horse Guards, the famous "Blues," and this fact gave the harum-scarum "Jacky" a very close personal interest in the army.

After a brief courtship she succumbed to the entreaties of Captain Ellis, and, leaving the "Bing Boys" revue, in which she was then playing at the Alhambra, was married to him at the Church of St. Charles Borromeo. To make the marriage possible, she embraced the Catholic faith.

Less than a year before, Beatrice, the elder sister, had secretly married Prince Louis de Bourbon, Duke of Ansola, in the same church, having also foresworn her own religion and adopted that of her husband, who was a Catholic.

Thus it happened that the name of the Princess of Bourbon appeared on the civil marriage register as a witness of Jessica's marriage, along with that of the Duchess de Seville, another member of Spanish aristocracy.

The Defeat of Beatrice

But while Jessica Harrington, now Mrs. Arthur Evelyn Ellis, was living happily in domestic seclusion with her army officer husband, Beatrice, Princess of Bourbon, was facing the defeat of all her hopes and the disastrous ending of her own romance.

Her marriage to the young Bourbon had been the climax of a courtship in 1913 at Folkstone, a fashionable watering place on the south coast of England.

The pair were very happy in a honeymoon cottage at Folkstone—which they had rented for the season—until news of her son's marriage to a commoner reached the Prince's mother, the Dowager Duchess of Ansola.

According to the story told by the Prince to her father, the Dowager Duchess hied herself immediately to England, accompanied by a party of friends, determined upon "[illegible]."

She appealed to the Spanish Ambassador and high officials of the church, imploring them to use every effort to free her son by having his marriage annulled.

The priest who performed the marriage ceremony was summoned, and his report to his superiors showed conclusively that the marriage was perfectly valid by both canon and civil law, and that there was nothing he could do about it. Then came the futile appeal to the Vatican.

Balked, the Dowager Duchess then, according to the Princess' story, took matters into her own hands. Accompanied by her determined band of sympathizers, she went to Folkstone, and soon after—although the Prince fails to accuse her mother-in-law directly, he points to the circumstance as a remarkable case of coincidence—the young Prince was drugged and kidnaped from the bridal chambers by persons in the Duchess' retinue and taken to Paris, where he was held captive.

Prince Tried to Rejoin Her

Days of agonized suspense were ended for the young Princess when she received a message from the Prince that he had escaped from his vigilant captors and was en route to Calais, where, on a certain day, at a certain hour and place, he would meet her secretly.

She hurried to the appointed spot, but the Prince did not arrive. Subsequently, the Princess is reported to have told the English police she learned that the Duchess' party had chartered a special train and overtaken the fleeing Prince on his way to keep his tryst.

She did not hear from him again nor see him. His movements, she alleges, were for many months watched night and day by two men. A special appeal made to the Prince's royal cousin, King Alphonso, was heard courteously and sympathetically, but it was without result.

Thus the unfortunate Princess, wedded, yet not a wife, is condemned to a solitary life, which for a time she spent in a feverish search for pleasure and forgetfulness in Europe's famous play places. The church which solemnized her marriage will not permit the dissolving of the bond, and she is thus forbidden to remarry.

Though the married happiness of the younger sister, "Jacky," was longer-lived, it, too, came to an end, but in the divorce court. Domesticity soon palled on the new Mrs. Ellis, and when her husband was called to army service she went to live in a large house in Park Lane, where the talents that made her a stage favorite made her a popular hostess among an ever-increasing circle of gay friends.

Her supper parties, made brilliant by young officers of the crack regiments and young debutantes of the best social connections, became the talk of social London. When she leased a mansion on the river at Datchet, she gave dances every week-end, the music for which was usually provided by Dan Kildare's Jazz Band, an organization of colored [illegible].

Mrs. Stokes Charges Multi-Millionaire Husband Buys Testimony Against Her Past

NEGRO WITNESSES QUAIL BEFORE HER ATTACK AND CONFESS THEY PERJURED THEMSELVES

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.

A REMARK said to have been made by William Earl Dodge Stokes, New York multimillionaire, which eventually reached the ears of his wife, Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, has opened a new and lurid phase in the battle which has been waged between them for four years, and which culminated yesterday in the indictment of Stokes and six others, by the Cook County grand Jury, on charges of subornation of perjury and conspiracy to destroy Mrs. Stokes' reputation.

"Why," Stokes is said to have exclaimed to a friend, "I married my wife out of the Everleigh Club in Chicago!"

When these words were repeated to Mrs. Stokes, she relates, she was so far from understanding what they meant that she wrote to a family friend in Chicago, Lieut. Paul Henderson, a naval officer, asking him to please find out for her who were the president, secretary and members of the Board of Directors of the Everleigh Club!

What was her horror, she declares, at discovering that the Everleigh Club was the most notorious resort that ever existed in Chicago, the wickedest days of its old levee district! It was a den famous from coast to coast, and known even on other continents, for its combination of depravity and opulent luxury. It was closed many years ago, under the administration of Mayor Carter Harrison.

The energetic Mrs. Stokes hastened to Chicago, engaged investigators, and soon laid before State's Attorney Crowe evidence tending to establish what she stigmatizes as "the most famous conspiracy ever engineered by a husband against the mother of his children." The plot, she alleges, comprised the suborning of perjured affidavits and the faking of photographs, tending to show that Mrs. Stokes had been an inmate of the Everleigh Club, that she was once the wife of a negro doorman, and that she gave birth to a half-caste child.

Six Participants in Plot Confess

Six alleged participants in the plot, all negroes, are reported to have confessed to State's Attorney Crowe that they were paid varying sums to sign affidavits to the effect that Mrs. Stokes was formerly a habitue of Chicago's underworld. When these revelations were made public, attorneys for Stokes announced that they had no interest in his wife's career before her marriage to the aged [illegible].

Those indicted, besides the rich hotel owner himself, were as follows: Daniel Nugent, New York attorney for Stokes; James H. Lee, negro, a former Deputy Sheriff, who confessed he was engaged to obtain signatures to affidavits; Joseph Bruner, a taxi driver, alleged to have been used as "paymaster" in the conspiracy and to have sought to hire perjured testimony; Ray Hubert, former head waiter of the Beaux Arts Club, a resort; Henry Tapsley, a New York negro charged with making an affidavit that Mrs. Stokes was formerly an inmate of a resort; and Hattie Johnson, negress, alleged to have been active in gathering evidence against Mrs. Stokes.

Among the counts in the indictments were the following: Conspiracy to charge and accuse Mrs. Stokes with having been an inmate in a resort; conspiracy to deprive Mrs. Stokes of her good name; conspiracy to circulate false rumors about her reputation and character; subornation of perjury in pending litigation; conspiracy to do illegal acts; and conspiracy to do injury to the public justice. Bond for each of those indicted was fixed at $5000.

Mrs. Stokes herself appeared before the grand jury and testified at length, telling in detail her allegations concerning her husband's supposed machinations, and denying all the accusations concerning herself. She was corroborated by other witnesses.

It will be remembered that in July, 1922, a decision in the Supreme Court of New York City restored Mrs. Stokes' dower right to one-third of her husband's estate, which is valued at from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000. Stokes began divorce proceedings in 1919, and his wife countered with a suit for separate maintenance. The hearing was held in 1921. The court refused a decree to Stokes, but granted Mrs. Stokes' petition for separate maintenance. However, the magistrate who heard the evidence was promoted before he signed the decision, and the Supreme Court ordered that the entire case be reheard. The second trial is scheduled for this month in the New York City courts.

Mrs. Stokes charges that her husband's plot is a desperate and "crazy" attempt to overthrow her dower interest in his estate. The conspiracy began, according to statements made to the State's Attorney, two years ago, when Stokes came to Chicago and sought out Dr. Maurice Rosenberg, a South Side doctor, formerly "official" physician to the Everleigh Club. In a signed statement, Dr. Rosenberg made the following assertions:

"Two years ago, a man came to me and said 'I am Mr. Stokes. Were you, as a doctor, acquainted with the Everleigh Club?' When I told him I was, he asked me whether I had known a woman named Helen Elwood, Underwood, or Norwood. I said I had not. Then he described the woman to me, especially the red hair. (Mrs. Stokes has auburn hair.)

W. E. D. Stokes, New York multi-millionaire whom his wife charges with resorting to perjured testimony from suborned negro witnesses to prove that she was an inmate of immoral Chicago resorts in order to destroy her dower rights in his estate, estimated to be worth from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000.

Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes and her mother, Mrs. Arthur Scott Miller, photographed together in Chicago, where Mrs. Stokes has been gathering evidence of the alleged activities of her husband in his effort to cast a shadow on her past through what she says is the perjured testimony of negro underworld habitues.

Tells of Stokes' Campaign Against Wife

"Stokes pulled a pile of photographs from his pocket and said they were pictures of his wife. I protested that I did not recognize the woman. The next day Stokes took me to see Anna Johnson, formerly day housekeeper at the Everleigh resort. He showed her the same pictures, but she failed to identify them. We sought out 'Vic' Shaw, a notorious dive-keeper; Lorraine Woods and Violet Phelps; all the negro maids who had worked at the club, doormen and taxi drivers; and a policeman who once raided the den and arrested its inmates."

Then, the physician continued, the millionaire sent him to New York to interview Minnie Everleigh, one of the sisters who once operated the resort. "I saw Minnie Everleigh and showed her a picture of Mrs. Stokes," said Dr. Rosenberg. "She declared that she did not recall any such person, and that to the best of her knowledge she had never seen Mrs. Stokes. She added that she wouldn't identify Mrs. Stokes even if she could, and that she thought Stokes was a beast to try to defame his wife."

The physician declared that Stokes made repeated visits to his office, and frequently said he "would certainly make it worth my while if I could remember that I had seen his wife in the Everleigh Club. I refused."

"I am a defenseless woman fighting alone for my honor and the honor of my children against a crafty old man with millions behind him," declared Mrs. Stokes to the State's Attorney. "I have affidavits to show that my husband engaged a former maid at the Everleigh resort on a salary to act as his guide to the scattered former inmates of the club; and that a notorious character admitted to another woman she had received $1000 for an affidavit identifying me as Helen Norwood. One woman cautioned another over the telephone to refuse to identify my picture until she was paid 'enough dough so you'll never have to work again.'

"Easy Money" Plentiful for Witnesses

"Another woman was approached, and urged to 'get in on the easy money' by making an affidavit against me. I have information that a lawyer was paid $2500 for procuring an affidavit from Mrs. Millie Phillips, a hairdresser, who swore she dressed my hair under compromising circumstances. I have learned also that in the last two months this lawyer spent $1200 in one evening at the home of one of the most notorious women in Chicago, in an effort to get her aid in identifying me as a former inmate of the Everleigh resort."

As a result of her complaint, 22 subpenas were issued, and many old characters of Chicago's former bright light district were dug up out of their obscurity. It was alleged that Stokes had attempted to prove his wife as a girl had had a friendship with Wallace Tyler, a negro dive-keeper now dead, and that she had borne a mulatto child.

Lorraine Woods and Bernice Hoyt, questioned by the State's Attorney, said they had been asked to identify as a picture of Helen Norwood an old photograph taken in 1906, and showing a girl seated at the wheel of an old-fashioned electric automobile. Both said they refused.

Thomas Lynn, former sergeant of police, testified he had been offered money to sign an affidavit that he had booked Mrs. Stokes, under the name of "Helen Norwood," after a raid on the Everleigh Club 15 years ago. He declared that he declined.

Benjamin Harrison, a negro, said that Stokes sent him to Denver two years ago to get information from negroes there—Denver is Mrs. Stokes' home—detrimental to her. When he returned without the information, Harrison said, Stokes refused to pay him a bonus of $2000 which was promised him if he would "get something" on Mrs. Stokes.

James H. Lee, a negro Deputy Sheriff, confessed that he was paid $75 to get in touch with others who would make affidavits. "It was explained to me," said Lee, "that evidence was wanted to show that before her marriage Mrs. Stokes had been an inmate of the Everleigh Club. The first person I asked, a former housekeeper, told me it was 'all bunk.' But the next six made affidavits."

Witnesses Quail When She Confronts Them

Mrs. Stokes confronted these makers of affidavits, mostly negroes, in the office of the State's Attorney, and defied them to identify her as a habitue of the Everleigh or any other resort. Frank Hubert, one of the affiants and a negro, declared that the Norwood girl he knew was not Mrs. Stokes at all. "She was a little girl," he said, 'with bobbed hair, and her name was not Helen but Dorothy." Nellie Finnich, an aged negress, who also made an affidavit identifying the picture of Mrs. Stokes as that of the Norwood girl, confessed that she had been paid $10 to sign a paper. "I can't read," she added, "and I don't know what was in it."

Charles Burnish, negro, said he received $5 for signing an affidavit which he did not read. John Scott, negro, testified he was hired by Dan Nugent, Stokes' New York attorney, to obtain affidavits from persons formerly identified with Chicago's night life. His pay was $75, he said.

"When I learned to just what lengths my husband had gone in his efforts to destroy me," said Mrs. Stokes, "I was astonished. Why, the man must be crazy. I can show by documentary evidence every move I made from childhood to the time I married. Everybody in Denver knows me and knows my family.

"My grandfather was Chauncey Elwood, an Illinois pioneer, who lived for years in De Kalb County. My grand uncle was the founder of the American Steel & Wire Co., and was many times a millionaire. I was brought up in Denver and attended Miss Wolcott's School for Girls. Then I attended the National Park Seminary for Girls at Washington, D. C. Afterwards I spent a year in Europe, with Miss Georgia Miller, a most estimable maiden lady, as chaperon.

"I made my debut in Denver, after returning from Europe, and later went to New York with my brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur Hendricks. I first met Mr. Stokes in his own Ansonia Hotel in New York, where my sister and her husband were living. He crowded into an elevator with us, and was palpably seeking an introduction. My sister refused to introduce him, because she knew of his reputation. Later he went to her and demanded point-blank to be presented to me. She couldn't get out of it, and we met.

"He was very lovely to me at first, and I want to say now that he can be lovely when he chooses. I married him, and I would have married him had he been a poor man. I loved him sincerely. But we had been married only three months when he was brought home full of bullets. He had been shot by two chorus girls, Ethel Conrad and Lillian Grahame, who were later tried and acquitted. Then, too, women called on my husband repeatedly, and when I remonstrated, he said it was hard to get over being a bachelor."

One of the pictures alleged to have been used by Stokes in an effort to besmirch his wife's character was said to have been sent to a private detective in his employ, with the label: "Mrs. Stokes in a chair with a mulatto baby in her lap." "In this picture," retorted Mrs. Stokes, "the baby looks dark because of poor printing. It was taken at the home of my sister, Mrs. Raymond Sargent, 181 Franklin street, Denver. The baby is hers."

How He Coached Negro Detective

There was another photograph showing a girl riding on a man's shoulders, and it was labeled: "Picture of Mrs. Stokes and Tex Rickard or a fellow named Meyers." Mrs. Stokes said the picture was taken when she was a young girl, romping with family friends. She added that she had never met Tex Rickard. Prosecutor Wharton announced that other pictures, purporting to show Mrs. Stokes in the company of negroes, had obviously been faked, and said that he was tracing a photographer who made the pictures by superimposing different negatives.

Another witness at the inquiry was once proprietress of a resort regarded as a rival to the Everleigh Club. She said she was offered money to identify a picture of Mrs. Stokes as that of a girl known to her in the old days as "Brick-top Helen," but that she refused.

"I know that Mrs. Stokes is innocent," she declared, "and I don't want to see a good woman dragged into the mud of the underworld of which I was a part."

These Chicago revelations throw a new light on letters from Stokes to Benjamin Harrison, the negro detective, which Mrs. Stokes introduced during her husband's divorce trial in New York. These letters were written to Harrison when Stokes sent him to Denver. One of them read:

"Go to the Bureau of Births and see if a child was born in about March, April, May, June, 1903 or 1904, to W. R. Underhill, or Diggs, or Harris, and get all particulars—or Helen Underwood or Helen Elwood. The last is Mrs. Stokes' maiden name." Another letter read, in part:

"You know the object of your trip to Denver—to get evidence of party's former marriages and of her being in houses in Denver. I sent you two photographs, and you were to find out when they were taken. We are ad-whose services were so much in demand in London that season that they became the most expensive attraction in the city.

It was the leader of this band who, it will be remembered, shot and killed two women in 1920 and then killed himself when his capture by police seemed imminent.

This brief return to a whirl of unrestrained gayety on the part of the irrepressible Jessica soon brought on a series of disagreements with her husband, and finally the dissolution of the marriage.

"Jackey," still the petted darling of a swarm of admirers, shook a heedless head at her husband's commands, and as soon as she was free, went back to the stage as a chorus girl in the revue, "Faust on Toast," at the Gaiety.

In 1921 she married again, and this time London gasped to hear that she had taken as a second husband a swarthy Prince of the royal house of Egypt, Mohammed Dinaled Din, a nephew of the present King of Egypt, and a brother of the ex-Khedive.

They were married quietly in the Henrietta street registry office, and shortly afterward left London for Alexandria. For two years little was heard of the former "Jacky" Hamilton except a line or two to friends, informing them that her second marriage had been a disappointment, and that she had divorced her husband.

Changed Religion Also.

Almost immediately she married Prince Abbas Halim, changing her religion once more and adopting the Moslem faith.

London had almost forgotten "Jacky" Hamilton, but when word came that she was about to pay a visit to England in company with her titled husband, it woke up—and remembered.

Many parties were arranged in her honor, every minute of her stay, night and day, was to be crammed full of pleasure, if it could be managed.

With the tragic news of her death, however, these preparations abruptly ended; flowers ordered for her home-coming were redirected to the Harrington home, to decorate her funeral bier.

No more news has been received in London of the manner of "Jacky" Hamilton's death than that she was found shot, and, so far as appearances go, accidentally.

James C. Harrington, the girl's father, however, is not satisfied with accounts that reached England, and, though unable himself to leave his business, his wife and son have set out for Cairo to ascertain the truth of the matter.

With the Princess was another sister, the eldest of the four Harrington girls having died some years ago.

With the sorrowing father in London is the remaining daughter, the Princess Louis of Bourbon, who has come up to occupy her flat in the Sloane Square district in order to be near her father and on hand for her sister's funeral.

vised they were taken from the rear of a disorderly house in Denver. Find out how well our party knew Jack Chenault, coolred. Also find out regarding Walsh, a very rich man in Denver, who knew our party."

During his stay in Chicago, the detective was instructed to trace the life of Al Austin, a saloonkeper. At first Stokes wrote that he was uncertain whether Austin was the man "with whom our Helen lived, and to whom she is said to have been married, and who died Feb. 22, 1816." Later the millionaire wrote: "Austin looks like our man."

As has often been told, W. E. D. Stokes, wealthy hotel owner and turfman, was married in 1911 to Miss Helen Elwood of Denver. He was 55, and she was 30 or more years his junior. They had two children, James and Helen Muriel, now 9 and 8 years old, who are in their mother's custody. Stokes had been divorced some years before by his first wife, now Mrs. Philip M. Lydig.

Stokes began divorce proceedings in 1919, and the case came to a hearing two years later. He named a long list of corespondents, including his own son by his first marriage, W. E. D. ("Weddie") Stokes Jr.; Mrs. Stokes' step-brother and cousin, Roland Miller and Hal C. Billig Jr.; Edgar T. Wallace, a wealthy oil man; James A. Stillman, James B. Lydig, divorced husband of the first Mrs. Stokes, and many others. Some of these declared they had never met Stokes or his wife in their lives.

In July of this year, Billig sued Stokes for $50,000, alleging he had been falsely named in the divorce suit; and soon afterwards Mrs. Stokes, in Chicago, sued "Weddie" Stokes for $1,000,000, declaring her feelings and reputation had been damaged to that extent by a letter beginning "Dear Pop" in which the boy confessed to his father that he had been guilty of wrongdoing with his young stepmother.

if anyone having access to it might have entertained such plans.

Early in the summer, it is said, Mrs. Webb determined to renovate and repair the old mansion for use as a summer home where she might entertain the friends she had abandoned upon her marriage and later went to the place with her husband to spend several weeks in planning alterations and designing Italian gardens for the estate.

It was on the day of her departure from this place, Aug. 20, that she first noticed symptoms of illness which led her to consult a physician. Immediately she was sent to Roosevelt Hospital and placed under the care of a specialist. An ocular trouble, it is said, revealed the kidney disease and traces of pneumonia also were found.

Superstitiously the old caretaker at the country home declares: "We knew she never would return because the night before she started a mirror fell from above the fireplace and broke. That was a sure sign of death."

A few days after her arrival at the hospital, Mrs. Webb showed improvement and decided to take a room at the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club at Rye, where she would have the benefits of fresh air and greater seclusion than in her palatial home on Madison avenue. There the couple went late in August, and at the club it was said they remained in their room most of the time, taking no part in the activities of the guests.

Will Controversy Began Before Death.

A short time after arriving, however, she became worse and Dr. Meyer was summoned. She was told that she had not long to live and was urged both by her relatives and her husband to make a will. A brief 10-line document was hurriedly written and signed, leaving all her holdings, totaling $2,000,000 or more, to her husband, with the stipulation that he should carry out certain expressed wishes of hers regarding bequests to other members of her family.

Later a more complete document making specific provisions for her relatives was prepared, but this she put aside, saying that she was too ill to fathom its complexities. It was about this time that Webb was excluded from the room upon orders of Dr. Meyer for reasons he has refused to make known except to the authorities.

The first suspicions that she had been poisoned were voiced when Mrs. William T. Hunter, aunt of the patient, arrived at her bedside in response to a summons from Dr. Meyer, who had noticed that her illness was marked by strange phases and had drawn from her the admission that "blue tablets" had been administered to her externally.

TANGLED WOOF OF MYSTERY WOVEN INTO WEBB POISONING CASE

and Mrs. Robert Johnstone, two intimate friends of the patient from childhood, were at her bedside to the last. Their suspicions that she had been the victim of a murder scheme grew daily, they said, as she unfolded to them, bit by bit, an account of her use of certain "tablets with which she was unfamiliar" and they quickly joined Dr. Meyer in a request for an autopsy.

Strange Deathbed Occurrences.

These women have related peculiar circumstances attending the deathbed scene. Just before Mrs. Webb breathed her last, they said, one of them sank to her knees to repeat the prayer for the dying. At that moment Webb appeared in the doorway. One of them called to him hysterically, "Come in; she's dying." But Webb, according to the same testimony, refused to enter.

"No, I won't come in," he is reported to have said, and turned away, walking out of the building and pacing the lawn until entreaties of Mrs. Burdick and Mrs. Johnstone finally induced him to return to the sick-room, where he knelt for a moment just as his wife expired.

Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora, of New York County, revealed that several hours before Mrs. Webb's death, he had been informed that her death was expected "under suspicious circumstances."

"On Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 24, some hours before Mrs. Webb's death, I was visited by a prominent member of the bar," said Pecora. "He said he had been in touch with the developments in the sick room, and that he had received information leading him to fear Mrs. Webb would die shortly. He said the circumstances were suspicious. He asked that, in the event of her death we permit Dr. Schultze to participate in the autopsy. He promised further information.

"I suggested that a statement be taken from Mrs. Webb immediately. Later in the afternoon I was informed that she was in no condition to make a statement, having become unconscious. She died without making an antemortem statement. I am still waiting for the promised information. We cannot proceed in this county on the meager information we have."

Husband Replies to Suspicions.

So far, Webb, who has shown signs of collapse from strain, has had little to say, but his attorney, Howard Thayer Kingsbury, has made this statement in his behalf:

'Suspicion came to Webb like a thunderclap. All this story of poison has been made up out of whole cloth by some unknown person who has no ground for such talk. Some time ago Mrs. Webb began renovation of her country home and worked so hard that she began to feel tired and worn out. Her eyes began to be troublesome and she called in a specialist. He suggested that her ocular disorder might have resulted from kidney trouble. On his advice Mrs. Webb went to Roosevelt Hospital, where she was treated for five days by Dr. Davenport West, following which Dr. West urged a complete rest.

"Accompanied by her husband, Mrs. Webb went to the Westchester-Biltmore, where she began to recover her strength, when she developed a heavy cold. She had no sooner recovered from this cold than she came down with pneumonia. This illness was aggravated by her kidney trouble and a weakened heart, the natural result of having been ill so long. Weakened in body, she was unable to throw off the pneumonia and the other disorders, with the result that she died. That is all there is to the case. I understand that the death certificate was signed and given out.

"As far as the autopsy was concerned, it was performed without the knowledge of Mr. Webb. Mr. Webb has nothing to conceal. He wants the facts disclosed in the case. He was happy to learn that the autopsy showed that there had been no metallic poisoning. Mr. and Mrs. Webb lived very happily.

Death Was Natural, Says Husband.

Later, in the course of a statement given out over Webb's own signature, he said, of the poison charges:

"I have no knowledge or information whatever in regard to the administration of any poison to Mrs. Webb in any way. Mrs. Webb was under the complete charge and control of Dr. Meyer and of two nurses (day and night) engaged by him during the entire period of her last illness, about three weeks, and for a part of this time I was excluded from the sick room by Dr. Meyer's orders.

"On the last day of Mrs. Webb's life I sent for Dr. West, who had attended her at Roosevelt Hospital. He came at once by automobile. Dr. Meyer refused to consult with him or to admit him to the sick room. Dr. Meyer also made objection to consulting with an yother physician, and it was only after a prolonged conference between Col. Kingsbury and Mr. Burdick, in which Col. Kingsbury insisted upon my right as Mrs. Webb's husband, to have a consultant called in, that Dr. Meyer consented to a consultation. Dr. Floyd was then summoned by telephone but did not arrive until after Mrs. Webb's death.

"I do not know what medicines may have been given or treatment administered by Dr. Meyer during Mrs. Webb's last illness, especially during the period when I was excluded from her room. I am informed that during the same period Mr. and Mrs. Hunter, Judge McIntyre and Mr. Burdick visited Mrs. Webb and went away again without communicating with me in any way. It is my belief that Mrs. Webb died from purely natural causes, but if there is any mystery connected with her death, I sincerely hope that it will be solved by the chemical examination, which I understand is about to be concluded.

"If a crime has been committed will devote myself to the utmost to the discovery and punishment of the criminal.

"I greatly appreciate the way in which the many friends of my wife and myself have assured me of their sympathy, affection and compliments and I am making this public statement in deference to their wishes."

Circumstances of Marriage.

Some of the circumstances surrounding the long courtship and the married life of the Webbs have been learned from relatives and friends of Mrs. Webb. Charles Webb is the son of the late Charles Henry Webb, author and journalist. The son, a graduate of Yale in the class of 1897, and a member of the Sons of the Revolution, became a curb trader, financing his operations with an inheritance of $100,000. He lost all this sum in Wall street ventures.

Ten years ago he met the family of S. Jennings Gorman. Mrs. Gertrude A. Gorman did not favor Webb's suit for the hand of the daughter, Gertrude E. Gorman, then 28 years old. Miss Gorman was willing to become Mrs. Webb. But the mother, possessed of a fortune of more than $2,000,000, which eventually would pass to the daughter, was openly antagonistic to the courtship.

Nevertheless, in the last few years of her life, Mrs. Gorman permitted Webb to help in the management of her properties. He acquired an intimate knowledge of these holdings, their values and potentialities. To the girl he confided that some day, as her husband, he would be able to put this knowledge to her advantage.

Inherited $2,000,000 From Mother.

Mrs. Gorman died in December, 1920. She, too, was said by friends to have manifested an affection of the eyes and to have died of kidney trouble. Her will left virtually her entire estate to her daughter, $1,500,000 outright and some $500,000 or $600,000 in trust. Her will provided that if the daughter died childless the inheritance was to revert to relatives specified in the instrument. If there was issue of her daughter's marriage, the will gave the daughter the right to dispose of her inheritance by will.

The trust fund was placed in the stewardship of the United States Trust Co. It included a five-story business building at 180 William street, the four-story building at 226 Madison avenue, which had been the Gorman home for four generations, and an unimproved property in the Dyckman section at Wadsworth Terrace. The estate willed outright to Miss Gorman included a $750,000 property at 146th street and Broadway and a $500,000 holding several blocks away, in that section of Washington Heights long known as "The Farm."

On her father's urging that she make provision for disposition of her large estate in the event of death, Miss Gorman in February, 1921, drew up a document in which she left the bequest received from her mother to relatives and friends. A considerable portion of it was designated to go to the young woman's aunt, Mrs. Hunter, and to W. T. Hunter, who formerly was Mayor of Devon, aP.

Weds Him After Mother's Death.

By this time, with the mother dead and her objections to the marriage, already deferred a decade, no longer an obstacle, Webb prevailed on Miss Gorman to accept him. They were married on Nov. 4, 1922, at the Gorman home in Madison avenue. A son of Robert S. Johnstone, former Judge of General Sessions, was a page at the wedding. Miss Gorman was godmother to Judge Johnstone's youngest daughter, and Mrs. Johnstone and Miss Gorman had been lifelong friends.

Several friends of Mrs. Webb have recalled that shortly after she had married she began to shun her intimate acquaintances.

"Gertie," one of these friends said, "was the most steadfast of friends—before her wedding. She did not smoke. She did not drink. She would not touch even coffee or tea, she cared so much for her physical well-being. But she did not frown upon those who liked to drink and smoke. Never a day passed that she was not a lavish hostess. She was the most brilliant of all at social functions. She took parties on automobile trips to the Adirondacks. She was a simple soul with a happy heart. She was accomplished in the arts and in language and was traveled. She was a rare companion among the most brilliant minds. She never forgot the birthdays of her friends—before her marriage. But after her marriage she never sent a card on a birthday. She ceased to write letters, and she had been a constant writer of letters."

Complaints have been voiced by some of her former chums that they were not notified of the seriousness of her malady until Dr. Meyer summoned the Hunters from Pennsylvania.

Statement by Friend at Bedside.

A statement purporting to have been uttered by Mrs. Margaret Pollock Johnstone, childhood schoolmate of Mrs. Webb and the wife of former Judge Robert S. Johnstone, goes much further than a similar expression of opinion by Hunter. The statement, said to represent the experience and views of Mrs. Johnstone, told of their attending a private school next door to the German home. She was quoted as saying:

"We were just two little girls. We both were 5 years old. She was little Gertie Gorman and I was little Peggy Pollock.

"I am convinced she was murdered. It would not be fair, it would not be just, for me to name the person I think killed her. But the true facts will develop shortly and then I think one of the most subtle crimes of the century will be revealed.

"Gertie died because her kidneys refused longer to function—failed to function, as I believe, because poison had been introduced. Until a short time before her death, poor, innocent Gertie did not know she was taking poison, as I and other dear friends believe.

"On Thursday, Sept. 6, we had a talk on the phone. She told me she felt ill and asked Dr. William J. Meyer and me to come to luncheon. We couldn't get to the club for luncheon, but we arrived in the afternoon.

"I had introduced Dr. Meyer to her at least a year before her marriage.

"I took off her clothes. Dr. Meyer examined her. He found evidences of pneumonia in one lung, the left. It was her left eye that was also affected. In addition there were black and blue marks on various parts of her body, blotches or spots.

"Constantly for the last three weeks of her puzzling illness I was with her. For three weeks she and her husband had told me things so curious, so strange, that I have jotted them down almost in diary form. I shall produce these notes when the Westchester County or New York authorities call for them.

"I shall not accuse anyone. But the authorities should act and act quickly. They are welcome to the knowledge I have. This knowledge, I believe, coupled with the trained medical observation of Dr. Meyer and other eminent physicians called into consultation, will be sufficient to point suspicion.

"Sufficient to say, Gertie's kidneys seemed to have been atrophied by the introduction of some outside element.

"So we watched; we watched like hawks. We kept records. We talked to various people. Especially I talked to Charles Webb. He told me many, many things, things enough to hang a certain suspect."

"Married to Get An Escort."

Mrs. Burdick also has made a statement which in many respects coincides with that of Mrs. Johnstone regarding the marital affairs of the Webbs and the circumstances attending the woman's death. She declared that Mrs. Webb often had intimated to her close friends that she had married Webb to get a "male escort" rather than a husband, and that she never cherished any affection for him although he remained a persistent admirer for some 10 years.

According to Mrs. Burdick's story, Gertie Gorman, denied by a jealous mother the usual opportunities for indulging in romantic affairs with men of her own age and thwarted in her hope of finding a suitor answering the description of her "tall, dark and handsome" ideal, accepted the hand of a man who was in many ways the antithesis of the man she had hoped to find.

"The actions of Mr. Webb toward the old set that Gertie used to mingle with have been strange indeed. From the moment of the wedding he began to shun all of us. Gertie sensed this fact, I am sure, and it worried her.

"Some of Gertie's best friends were the last persons to learn of the illness which proved fatal.

"Typical of the misunderstanding that had arisen between Webb and Gertie was the fact that he was barred from her sickroom during the final days of her life. We had understood that it was because he insisted on talking of money and business affairs, despite his wife's fearful condition, though later reports would indicate something else.

"Of all persons Gertie Webb was most surprised at the sudden illness which overwhelmed her. After I heard in a roundabout way that she was desperately ill, I rushed to her bedside. She had changed so in the few weeks since I had last seen her that I hardly knew her."

Mrs. Burdick quoted Mrs. Webb as saying, "Oh, Mary, why am I sick here? There is something strange about all this. I can't explain why I, of all persons, have been struck down. It is all so improbable, so sudden and so unusual."

According to Mrs. Burdick, Mrs. Webb had always been strong and healthy.

Mrs. Burdick, who was in the room at the moment Mrs. Webb substantiated the statement of Robert S. Johnstone to the effect that Webb, on being informed that his wife was dying, expressed willingness to come into the room. He entered only after being importuned to do so by Mrs. Burdick and Mrs. Johnstone. He knelt at the bedside just as his wife died.

Mrs. Burdick added:

"I think the action by Dr. William Meyer in declining to sign the death certificate is one of the outstanding features of this whole unpleasant affair. Dr. Meyer, who had the courage of his convictions, probably staked his whole professional reputation on the chance that subsequent investigation would vindicate his idea that there was something mysterious in connection with the patient's death.

"He had everything to lose and nothing to gain by raising a question as to what caused her death. All of Gertie's friends are standing loyally by Dr. Meyer and we are aware of the resistance which he had encountered by reason of his courage.

"Gertie's friends are inclined to censure Mr. Webb for the unseemly haste with which he rushed into the Surrogate's Court to file her will. We all feel that this was a bit indelicate in view of the unpleasant circumstances attached to the case.

SERVANTS IN BRAZIL REGULATED BY POLICE

Government Decree Compels Their Registration Before Accepting Employment.

By the Associated Press.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Oct. 6.—The servant question in Rio, which has been driving the housewives of this city to distraction for years and years, finally became so acute that it was taken up, studied and "solved" by the Federal Government.

The solution to this tormenting problem took the form of Decree No. 16,107, which delegates to the police the trifling matter of carrying the details into effect.

Problem Was Acute.

Before the decree was enacted, however, the servant question outstripped all competitors, even the high cost of living, in bringing worry into the average home. Servants came and servants went, but the question went on forever.

Not only was it impossible to count on the presence of any servant from one minute to the next, but hundreds of homes found that their ingratiating, new employe of the day before was in reality an experienced and clever thief. One of the routine tasks of the police was tracing thieving servants.

On the other hand, the servants complained that employers expected too much of them in time and kind of work, and that they were given no guarantees as to healthful working conditions and moral considerations.

Cause of the Decree.

For these and other reasons, decree 16,107 provides that all servants must possess cards of identification from the police. No servant can enter into employment without notifying the police and registering the terms of the agreement with the employers, nor can anyone employ a servant without registering the act with the police.

The decree applies to domestic service of all kinds: cooks, butlers, maids, laundry girls, gardeners, nurse girls, seamstresses, waiters in hotels and restaurants, bartenders, janitors and even office boys.

Whether servants or employers will be any better by effect of the decree, no one ventures to predict, but it is expected that the average time of a job will be longer than it has been, and that the servant disguise will go out of fashion among thieves.

Moving Pictures of Sunday School. Members of St. John's Methodist Church and Sunday school, King's highway and Washington avenue, will be photographed for a moving picture today. The camera will grind in the lecture room and outside the church, from 9:30 o'clock in the morning until 6:30 at night, filming all the church activities. The plan has been promoted by W. K. Kavanaugh and J. W. Fristoe, together with Joseph Lewis, president of the Board of Stewards. The filming of various societies and classes has been going on since Thursday. The pastor, Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, is to return from the annual conference at Sikeston in order to be in the picture.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

System of Directing Waves Successfully Tried Out at McCook Field.

American transcontinental air pilots will fly on cross-country trips guided from field to field by radio beacons when the plans of the Army Air Service and Signal Corps are perfected. This new radio navigational development for aiding fliers along the army model airways is not yet ready for use, but work on the first radio beacon at Wilbur Wright Field at Fairfield, O., will be undertaken shortly by the Army Signal Corps.

The new aerial radio beacon is the result of experiments conducted at the radio laboratory of the Signal Corps under the direction of Capt. W. H. Murphy of the army, during the past several months. A model directional radio transmitter was tried out at the laboratory and found operative and later used in practical tests at McCook Field, Dayton, O., up to distances of about 40 miles. Experiments with both single and crossed loops were employed, the best results being obtained with the latter.

The apparatus to be installed at the first station will be a 5-kw. transmitter, which will send out successive signals of a distinct type every five seconds, separated directionally by 30 degrees. That is, taking the station as a center and the exact north bearing as 0 or 360 degrees, a significant code signal, such as two dashes, is transmitted. This signal would only be audible at maximum strength for each dash on the line directly north or south of the station. Rotating clock-wise or toward the right, the station would follow the initial signal by transmitting every five seconds another distinctive signal of two dots; each successive signal indicating an angular distance of 30 degrees. An aviator, equipped with a standard radio receiving set, on picking up the station, would wait for the initial two-dash signal, then, with watch in hand, he would count the succession of signals until a pair of dots was received at equal intensity. By counting the number of elapsed seconds from the initial or north signal to the maximum signal, the flier will know his compass bearing in degrees from the beacon, or its reciprocal. For example, if he hears the two-dash north signal and four successive signals when the maximum is reached, he knows 20 seconds have elapsed, and that consequently, reckoning 30 degrees to each signal or each five-second period, his bearing is 120 degrees from the station, or approximately southeast by east on the old compass card. If, at the end of 15 seconds, the third signal is the maximum and each dot is of equal intensity, he knows he is directly east of the station; similarly, the sixth, after 30 seconds, would place him south.

Two Loops Used.

The double coils used in sending are fixed, but the effect of the rotating signal is obtained by varying the current strength in each coil by means of a rotating coupler in the station. After a complete rotation, 360 or zero degrees is again reached and the double dash signal is again emitted.

With the new station in operation, Air Service and Signal Corps experts expect pilots within a range of approximately 200 miles can be served with a directional signal. When each air field is so equipped, it will be possible for the fliers to travel from field to field in bad fog or at night with increased safety.

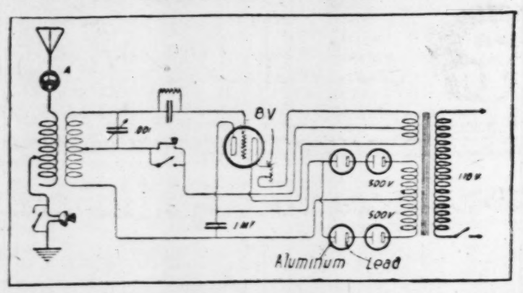
Fixed ground beacons of this type are favored against the development of special direction finding equipment on aircraft, in order to keep all special equipment on the ground, and use only standard radio equipment for communication and navigation on aircraft, saving space and weight. The system is different from light-house radio beacons in that succeeding equal strength signals rotate at the rate of one revolution per minute, whereas the light-house sends them in all directions at once.

The only drawback is that the direction or its reciprocal may be used, but as the pilot is usually approaching, there is little likelihood of his being north and thinking he is south or vice versa.

One useful adaptation for this radio beacon signal is its use by naval airplane carriers or battleships carrying airplanes for calling and "guiding home" their seaplanes after long reconnaissances or when lost in fog or darkness. Planes often operate far out of sight of their mother ships, and their compasses sometimes get out of order, in which event a guiding radio call on the rotating principle from their ship would be of great aid, especially when a plane was low in gas and not in a position to conduct a long search for its floating base.

Postal officials may also find use for radio beacons in guiding their air mail planes on long trans-continental flights.

FIVE WATT TRANSMITTER



This transmitter may be used for either voice or code. The combination transformer shown on the right may be constructed or purchased at a radio store. For rectification of the 500 volts for the plate current, six jars on each side of the line should be used. (Only two are shown in circuit). Eight volts are used on the filament of the 5 watt vacuum tube.

Weather Report From KSD Aided Building of Bridge 1000 Miles From St. Louis

Last Pouring of Cement Would Have Been Delayed Several Months But for Timely Warning Over the Radio.

How the completion of a large concrete bridge in Canada, more than 1000 miles from St. Louis, was made possible of execution within the prescribed time by the sole agency of weather reports broadcast by Post-Dispatch Radio Station KSD and picked up in Canada, is the subject of one of the most interesting letters ever received by this station.

The letter is from Reginald Todd of Caledonia, Ontario. After telling how much he enjoys the KSD concerts and how clearly he receives them, he gives the station this remarkable tribute for its practical value:

"I depend a great deal on your station for the weather reports issued at the close of your program each evening, mainly because I can always hear every word so distinct and clear and have no trouble copying the announcer's report.

"You may be surprised at me being interested in your weather reports when you are about 1000 miles airline from here. However, I have found that the most of our storms can be followed from one to two days ahead. The most of our heavy rains start down the Mississippi River, travel northward along it and sweep down across the great lakes over Ontario and eastward to the St. Lawrence River.

"You may be interested to know that the building of a large cement bridge last November was successful only by reason of your weather reports. There was long delay owing to unforeseen happenings and it was late in the season, close to freezing weather, before they were prepared to run the bridge. I got nightly weather reports from your station and local reports at noon from Toronto. We were having fine weather and they planned pouring the cement on Wednesday, but reports from your station told of heavy rains sweeping over your district and moving northward.

"Work was rushed and the pouring of the cement started early Tuesday morning and we worked without stopping, except half an hour at noon, 6 and 12 at night to eat, until 4 a. m. Wednesday morning when the bridge was finished. At 6 a. m. Wednesday, two hours after the finishing, the rain started and lasted nearly three weeks and then there was freezing weather. If the bridge had not been run the day it was, it would have been impossible to complete it before this spring. I hope I have not taken up too much of your time, but I wished to show you what radio means at times."

RADIO COMMUNICATION DEVELOPING IN CHINA

China will soon have five commercial radio stations and may develop broadcasting also, according to information received in Washington. Contracts have been signed for a high power station, similar to the French Lafayette Station, to be built at Shanghai, and four others of lower power to be located at Pekin, Harbin, Canton and Shanghai. They will be built by the Federal Telegraph Co. The last four will serve as feeders for the big Shanghai transpacific station.

Four attempts to establish radio broadcasting in China have been made at Shanghai, and although one 50-watt set is still in operation the right to continue is questioned by the Chinese Ministry of Communications.

USE OF RADIO SIGNALS IN NAVIGATION GROWING

Increasing Number of Compass Stations Throughout the World.

A recent survey of the use of radio signals in navigation, just completed by the Lighthouse Service of the Department of Commerce, states that the new radio-equipped light vessel on Nantucket Shoals is the eighth radio fog signal commissioned by the department. Three are located off the coasts of New York and New Jersey; one at Cape Henry, Va.; one off Diamond Shoals, N. C., and two off California, all but two being on light ships. Five more stations are being established on light vessels at Boston, Mass.; Five Fathom Bank, Del.; Cape Charles, Va.; Swiftsure, Wash., and Columbia River, Ore.

While more of these stations have been established in this country than in any other, the department points out that progress is being made throughout the world: France has four; Norway two; Spain two, but is planning to erect five more "beacons" and compass stations on its northwestern coast so as to test both methods thoroughly, and Holland is erecting a radio fog signal on a new light ship near Rotterdam. The above stations are designed for co-operating with vessels having radio compasses or direction finders aboard ship. A rotating radio compass station, or beacon, is being experimented with off Scotland and another is being erected in England. These operate as do the United States Naval stations, giving a ship bearings on request.

At the International Navigation Congress, which met recently in London, it was the general opinion that the most valuable application of radio direction finding in navigation will probably be through the use of means provided on shipboard to enable navigators to ascertain the direction of radio signals; this is the general solution of the problem, valuable to a vessel wherever it is, and also having the great advantage of retaining on the ship the responsibility for locating the vessel. The other systems of direction finding from shore and of revolving beacons, was also believed to have valuable uses, but it was pointed out by foreign experts that the cost of extending the system throughout the world would be prohibitive, even if liberal charges for bearings were made.

Continuing its report, the Department of Commerce states that the installation of radio compasses aboard ships has been making much progress recently, about 100 foreign vessels now being so equipped. On the Pacific Coast the American vessels President McKinley and the H. F. Alexander, among others, are now experimenting with ship radio compasses, while the Standard Oil Co. has just ordered 12 of its oil tankers so equipped. Several Coast Guard Cutters and five vessels of the Lighthouse Service now operate radio direction finders. Reports indicate constant use of the radio compasses and that a large percentage of the bearings taken are correct within two degrees. A French ship recently reported that in a test of its radio compass, a course set by radio bearings secured on stations 700 and 1000 miles distant was found to coincide exactly with the course set by astronomical observations and calculations.

Types of Radio Compasses.

There are two principal types of radio compasses or direction finders in successful use on ships, the rotaral use in this country, employs a large rotatable loop aerial, and the table loop type, and the fixed antenna type. The former, in more general, in use abroad, uses two fixed loop aerials, one tranverse and one parallel to the ship's axis, and a small rotatable coil in the receiver, the bearing in either case being taken by rotating the loop or coil until a minimum signal is obtained. With the former type the radio coil has in some cases been mounted directly over a magnetic compass, permitting direct magnetic readings to be taken. Recently on the steamer President McKinley the coil has been placed over a gyroscope compass repeater, thus giving true bearings directly. Companies both in the United States and abroad are now regularly supplying direction finders for installation on ships.

Aside from its direct navigational use, in locating the vessel, in approaching a leading mark, and in avoiding collisions, its great value in rescue work at sea is shown by numerous instances.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

Into a field already crowded with many and varied types of tuning instruments has been launched the "Peerless Universal Range Double Tuning Coil," designed for use with vacuum tube sets. It is a well-constructed instrument, the inductance of which is wound on a tube six inches long and three inches in diameter. Equally spaced from each end are two rotors connected by means of pigtails. The finished coils are baked and impregnated and present a very neat appearance. They were designed to cover a wave length range of 180 to 550 meters. A descriptive pamphlet containing operating instructions and wiring diagram is included with each coil.

The premier "Miscrostat" is a well designed instrument for controlling filament current. As the name implies it is a rheostat having both coarse and fine adjustments, the former controlled by a large knob and the latter adjustable by means of a smaller knob, the shaft of which passes through the larger.

Another premier contribution to the needs of the amateur is the "Jiffy" radio switch, the features of which are its positive indication, and its brass construction making it non-magnetic. It is supplied in three different types; the first is a two circuit "make" contact, the second one type is a two "break" contact, while a third both makes and breaks two contacts. By means of a sliding adjustment and an extra long threaded shank, it may be mounted on a panel of any thickness. Many uses can be found for a switch of this type and it will be welcomed by enthusiasts who construct their own sets.

The Mar-co Company, of Providence, R. I., have produced a variable grid-leak, which they call the "Mar-co." It is a type easily adjusted, only one-half turn of the small knob being required to obtain a range of one-fifth to five megohms. The particular feature of this instrument is the means provided for varying the resistance, a spring being pressed against the resistance element increasing or decreasing the amount in the circuit.

The "Rico Tuned Loud Speaker Phone" is the latest creation of the Radio Industries Corporation. They have created what they believe to be a perfect phone for loud-speaker use. It is equipped with an adjustable diaphragm by means of which the latter can be moved to or from the pole pieces from .006 to .025 of an inch. The adjustment is made by simply screwing the receiver cap slightly backward or forward. Radio telephone receiver experts have realized for a long time that a loud-speaker receiver, if equipped with an adjustable diaphragm becomes almost a perfect acoustic instrument. Thus, by tightening or loosening the cap, the diaphragm approaches or recedes a desired distance toward or away from the pole pieces, enabling the operator to "tune" the loud speaker. This adjustment can be made instantaneously, for signals of either weak, moderate or loud volume.

A number of types of folding-loop antennae have been available for some time, but the most ingenius is the "Portena." It folds up and fits into a tube 16½ inches long and three inches in diameter, and weighs but a fraction more than three pounds. The wire is flexible, stranded, and insulated with a green covering. The loop contains approximately 80 feet of wire.

Another product of the Radio Industries Corporation is the double and single "Phonodapter," for making a loud speaker out of a talking machine. Molded rubber serves to hold the telephone receiver in place and prevent scratching of polished woodwork.

Two dry cell manufacturers have placed on the market new types of radio batteries. Their trade names are "Twin" and "Yale." The latter are made in units ranging from one to eight cells and have an initial voltage of 1½. They are put up in waterproof containers and equipped with "Yale" contact clips. The Twin Dry Cell Co. uses a separate, flexible, waterproof case as container and zinc in plate form is used entirely on the inside, where it is not only protected from moisture, but its entire amount and area is available for use, thus it may be entirely consumed before the battery becomes "dead."

The Columbia Radio Corporation has produced a mounting for honeycomb coils designed for use behind the panel of the set. With this mounting only a knob is visible from the front, adjustment of the inductive relation being obtained by friction beveled gears.

Fillman 400-ohm potentiometers and 30-ohm rheostats having red composition bases are now available at a local store.

A supply of "Mar-co" vernier rheostats has arrived. They are wound to a resistance of six ohms and have a capacity of two amperes. The resistance element of Calido Nickel Chronium is laid in the bottom of a molded spiral groove, connection with which is made by a traveling contact with the wire. Eight full revolutions are required to change from zero to six ohms, giving very fine adjustment throughout.

The "Gold Grain" crystal detector is a product of the Airphone Corporation of New York City. The rectifying element is contained in a cartridge wheel approximately an inch in diameter, having a knurled outer rim. The cartridge wheel is supported between two springs and varied adjustment is obtained by rotating the wheel, at the same time gently tapping it.

Vacuum Tubes.

The ordinary vacuum tube used for receiving is rated at a power of approximately one watt, or about one-fiftieth of the power that is used to light the ordinary electric light bulb.

When more than one stage of radio frequency is added to a receiver, it is always advisable to use a coupling device which will permit a wire separation between the coils, otherwise the tuning may be too broad.

STATIONS TO AID IN NAVY DAY PROGRAM

A dozen or more radio broadcasters in as many cities will spread tidings and entertainment pertaining to Navy day through the ether on the evening of October 27, according to officials of the U. S. Naval League.

The second celebration of Navy day will be aided throughout the country by the officials and officers of the navy and Navy League, assisted by the marine and ships bands in practically every port. Eighteen broadcasters have been invited to participate, and to date five have indicated their desire to co-operate by donating their stations for at least an hour on October 27, when speeches and entertainment will be furnished by naval personnel.

Stations KFJC, the Post-Intelligencer at Seattle, Wash.; WOAW, Woodmen of the World, at Omaha, Neb.; KFAF, Western Radio Corporation, at Denver, Colo.; WMC, Memphis Comercial Appeal; WRC, Radio Corporation at Washington, D. C., and KSD, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, have signified their willingness to co-operate. No special programs or details have yet been worked out, but the night promises plenty of naval entertainment and lore for all who listen in.

Among the other stations invited to participate are WBZ, Springfield; WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady; KDKA, Pittsburg; WSB, Atlanta; WMC, Memphis; WLAC, Raleigh; WFAA, Dallas; KDN, San Francisco; KFI, Los Angeles; KYW, Chicago; WFAW, Miami; and WAAC, New Orleans.

An Ounce of Precaution.

When connecting up the new set, always make it a point to first connect the A battery and test out the filaments to see if they light. If they do not, stop at once and go over everything. Remember that if the B battery voltage happens to get into this circuit it will burn out the tubes.

When Tubes Burn Out.

Very often there is a decided discoloration of the glass when the bulb burns out. There is often a darkening caused by a deposit from the filament on the glass, which is a natural process and harmless. Another color sometimes noticeable is a white or creamy deposit caused by a slow leakage of air into the tube.

New Swedish Broadcasting Company.

"Svenska Rundradioaktiebolaget" is the name of a new firm in Sweden for broadcasting. The organizers of the company are Elektriska Aktiebolaget A. E. G. Allmannna Telefonaktiebolaget, L. M. Ericsson and others. The minimum capital of the company has been fixed at 100,000 kroners and the maximum at 300,000 kroners. The company has applied to the Government for a concession to transmit information by radio.

KYW TO TRY NEW WAVE

Temporary Permit to Increase Frequency, Granted by Supervisor.

Station KYW will operate on a wave length of 535.4 meters for a 10-day period in a series of tests in an effort to improve the broadcasting. Authority to make the tests was granted by E. A. Beane, Supervisor of Radio in the Ninth District. Though Government regulation authorizes the use of only two waves, 440 and 345 meters, for Class "B" stations in this territory, Mr. Beane "borrowed" a California wave for the tests.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Writer.

Q. I have a 3000-meter receiving set with condenser and two-stage amplifier. Is my 200-foot aerial too long for the new wave lengths? It is is 35 feet high. M. A. J.

A. Yes. The over-all length of an aerial (measurement of which must include the lead-in) should not be more than 140 feet. In some cases (depending on the receiving set) stations using the highest wave lengths assigned to broadcasting stations have been heard with an antenna and lead-in only 100 feet in length.

Q. Is it necessary for me to have a license in order to sell my regenerative set? I want to build a larger set. F. D.

A. Under the patent law a license would be necessary to sell your regenerative set. However, it is unlikely that disposing of it in order that you might build one of a different type, would cause any trouble.

Q. Will UV-200 and UV-201 tubes work in a single-circuit regenerative set with one step of amplification? (2) What ratio of transformer would be best for the amplifier circuit? L. R.

A. (1) Yes. (2) 3-1.

Q. (1) Will a "B" battery that is low have any effect on a fresh unit connected in the circuit? (2) I have a three plate condenser and have never been able to get anything with it except code. Is its capacity too low, or is the instrument at fault? (3) How long will storage "B" batteries hold a charge? L. L

A. (1) Yes. It will reduce the voltage of the new one to that of the old one. (2) Your three-plate condenser is probably a vernier attachment intended to be used in parallel with a 23 or 43-plate variable condenser. Used alone, its capacity is too small for ordinary use. (3) This depends entirely upon their size and the amount of hours they are used.

Q. Where is station KDOW? M. P.

A. New York, N. Y., S. S. America. Home port is New York.

Q. Are there any late call books out, and where can they be obtained? F. C.

A. Government call books are scheduled to be ready for distribution Oct. 1. Write to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.

Q. (1) Is a 130-foot aerial 30 feet high too long to tune to 250 meters? (2) would a series antenna condenser reduce the wave length? (3) What station in Zion, Ill., broadcasts religious services? (4) Would using a WD-11 tube as detector give louder signals than when employed as a one-stage audio frequency amplifier? and a crystal detector? (5) I hear stations about as far using a crystal detector and one-stage of a. f. as most people do with a single tube. Would there be any advantage in changing? (6) Will a "T" aerial bring in more stations than a straight aerial? R. J.

A. (1) Yes, unless a very large capacity variable condenser be used in series with the aerial. (2) Yes. (3) Zion Industries Co. (4) No. (5) A vacuum tube detector should increase both the range and signal strength of your set. (6) No.

Q. (1) I had an aerial about 135 feet long but found it worked better when I cut it down to 100 feet. It is now only about 20 feet high. Would it work better if it were 40 feet high, or would increasing its height give the same results I had before decreasing its length? (2) Is there any danger of burning out a set using a light socket aerial plug? C. H. W.

A. (1) Increasing the height probably would give you better results, but it might also be necessary to use a antenna series variable condenser. (2) Very little, if it is one of a standard make.

Q. Please give information on how to construct a set having a 150—25,000 meter tuner. F. P. M.

A. Would suggest your using honey-comb coils. You can then plug in a set for any wave length desired.

RADIO MARKET IN THE NETHERLANDS

Main Activities Centered in the Sale of Parts and Accessories.

Radio telephony, particularly for amateurs, has enjoyed increasing popularity in the Netherlands during recent years. According to opinions in the trade, the next few years should see even greater development in amateur radio telephony in that country. The main activities in Holland are centered in the sale of parts and accessories, but the number of complete sets sold is relatively small, since most amateurs purchase the parts and erect their own stations.

According to best estimates there are at present no less than 4000 amateur receiving stations in Holland; following the war there were only a score or more receiving stations. The Management of Posts and Telegraphs advises that there are about 477 other receiving and transmitting wireless stations in the country.

Permits for receiving stations are readily granted in Holland. Dealers in radio materials are now negotiating with the Government for authority to erect a general broadcasting station. The plan is to broadcast concerts and news on a much larger and better scale than is done at present by any Netherlands broadcasting service to amateurs.

Germany has been getting the bulk of Holland's import business, but the greater portion of German goods coming into the country are old war stocks. These goods cost usually anywhere from 40 to 50 per cent below American and other competitors in price. Germany, of course, has advantages in the Netherlands on account of proximity of market.

The United States is gaining a better foothold in this market, however, and imports of radio material are increasing. Whereas in the full year 1919 the United States sent only $1600 worth of radio material to this market, during the first half of the year 1923 there were $12,800 (normal) worth entered.

American goods will probably continue to enter the Netherlands on an improved scale, and competent members of the business world express the opinion that if American parts and systems were made to conform more to local needs a much larger business would be done. American instruments in this market are, as a rule, designed for wave lengths averaging around 360 meters. In Holland most radio owners desire around 1050 meters average, and, in a good many cases, up to 2000 meters is required.

Ready entry of radio material is provided for in Holland, since there are no Government regulations or restrictions governing imports. The import duty on parts and whole sets is 5 per cent ad valorem.

Tube Elements.

There are three elements in modern vacuum tubes—gold, plate and filament. These are described as follows:

Grid: Takes the form of a course metal mesh or a spiral of fine wire. The grid is always placed between the filament and the plate.

Plate: Usually in the form of a cylinder of metal, or a flattened cylinder, or as flat sheets. Sometimes the plate is left in a single plane. Usually it is the area of the plate that determines the capacity of the tube.

Filament: u. c. fine tungsten wire inside the plate. Glows with a deep red in some tubes, but with a brilliant yellowish white in others. The filament when heated to the proper temperature forms a source for the tiny electric charges called electrons, those minute and mysterious particles on which the operation of tubes depends.

To Hear Faint Signals.

When trying to hear an almost inaudible call, if the operator holds his breath, the sensitiveness of his ear cases will sometimes be increased.

The energy of the wireless transmitting wave is about 18 times as great in the middle of the night as it is in the daytime.

Freak reception is sometimes accomplished with a small crystal set, as the result of reradiation from some nearby powerful receiving set.

In soldering wire to the lugs on telephone jacks, use only a speck of flux. If too much is applied it will run into the mica insulating strips and increase leakage losses.

OVERLAND CHAMPION — A VERSATILE CAR

New Closed Model Is All-Family Car With Wonderful Utility Qualifications.

Last week marked the advent of the new Overland closed car, named the Champion.

This new model, having as many personalities as a South American chameleon, claims the distinction of being called "America's most versatile car." In introducing the Champion, Willys-Overland has succeeded in bringing out something absolutely novel and unique. It is a most useful car for the farmer, salesman and others who need such a machine. It has an all-steel body built on a standard Overland chassis cradled on Triplex springs and powered with the larger Overland engine.

In the Champion, the rear seat and upholstery is entirely removable, providing 50 cubic feet of clear carrying space. Apart from this, both front and rear seats quickly adjust forward and backward. The front seat adjusts to three positions so that a tall driver can move it back to drive without leg cramp and a short driver can move it forward so as to reach the pedals without stretching. The rear seat can be adjusted backward so that rear-seat passengers will not be crowded when the front seat is moved back.

Another feature of this car and characteristic of the unusual foresight in design, is the arrangement of both front and rear seats, which, with the upholstery, can be entirely removed and made up into a luxurious bed in the car, occupying the whole length and width of the car.

But this does not end the advantages included in the Champion. For instance, there is the 50 cubic feet of space obtainable in the car by removing the rear seat with the upholstery. This arrangement leaves an absolutely clear carrying space capable of real service. The long grain Spanish upholstery is washable, wearable and comfortable.

On the back of the car is a commodious trunk of ample proportions with lock, in which there is plenty of room for personal effects when traveling or shopping in town. The Willys-Overland company especially recommends the Champion for farm use.

Willett De Luxe Wholesale Head.

George T. Willett, who has been for some time assistant to Col. P. H. Brockman, president of the De Luxe Automobile Co., is now manager of the wholesale department. Willett has been connected with this concern for many years. He will have charge of territorial distribution on the new Oldsmobile Light Six.

SPECIAL FEATURES AT "CHAMPION'S" DEBUT

Features to impress dealers and the public were staged by the Willys-Overland factory branch in ushering the new "Champion" into the St. Louis limelight. The Champion was shown to the public for the first time at 10 a. m. last Thursday, Oct. 4, in a prize fight ring on the Twenty-third and Locust streets corner of the Overland showroom. Previously nightly bouts between colored youngsters attracted attention to this ring as did a sign which was put up at the same time as the ring, 10 days ago, the sign reading: "The Champion will appear in this ring Oct. 4 at 10 a. m. In the ring Thursday, the Champion with bed made up was shown. Four other uses of this new car were exhibited on the Locust street side of the showroom. One car had the rear filled with packages, another filled with farm produce as if going to market, another with trunk and suitcases as used by a traveling salesman and the last with both seats in place as the car would ordinarily look.

These cars were shown at a dealers' meeting which took place all day Monday, Oct. 1, and which ended in a banquet that night at Hotel Jefferson. Over 200 dealers were present at this dinner. D. R. Yantis wholesale sales manager, made the arrangements under direction of W. H. Taylor, manager of the Willys-Overland branch. Speakers included Taylor, Yantis, John R. Ford of Cairo, Ill., A. C. Cutter of Oak Park, Ill., W. W. Evans of Belleville, Ill., James L. Elliott of Springfield, Ill., B. A. Estes of Lutesville, Mo., and E. R. Stewart of the local branch.

$6,399,414.05 NASH NINE MONTHS' EARNINGS

Net income of the Nash Motors Company for the third quarter, ending August 31, as reported by C. W. Nash at the directors' meeting was $2,257,766.70, after deducting expenses of manufacture, depreciation, selling and administrative expense and providing for Federal and local taxes. The report showed also that net income for the nine months period ending August 31 was $6,399,414.05.

Commenting on the condition of the business of Nash Motors and the outlook for the future, President Nash said: "We believe our business is in the strongest position it has ever been in, due in large measure to the high quality of our product which is being recognized by the buying public. The future for our busines looks very bright; we should not expect to run our factories to their fullest capacity during the fall months but we believe we will have a very satisfactory fall business and a splendid winter and spring business."

RIEFLING OPENS NEW HOME FOR LINCOLN

Announcements are being sent out to all South Side Lincoln owners and prospective purchasers of Lincoln cars advising them of the opening of the Riefling Auto Co.'s exclusive Lincoln service and salesroom, located at 2501 South Jefferson avenue.

The opening will be celebrated Oct. 8th to 13th, at which time the various models of the famous Lincoln car will be on display. A special representative from the factory will be present to explain the many features of the models.

The Riefling Auto Co. has arranged for equipment and facilities to give the very best service possible. They have erected an entire-ly new three-story building, apart from their Ford salesroom and service station, and employ specially trained mechanics to do only Lincoln work. The new building is of steel and concrete construction, cost $60,000 and covers 16,000 square feet.

MAXWELL SPORT MODEL ATTRACTS ATTENTION

Many unique methods were used to exhibit the latest automobile models by local dealers during the past week. Among these was the unusual manner in which the Ward Motor Car Co. displayed the green Maxwell sporting touring car, and coupled its display with that of the Maxwell truck.

The sport model was placed upon the truck and carried around the city, the double display attracting a great deal of attention. It was driven wherever crowds were thickest, of course.

ADVOCATES UNIFORM TRAFFIC REGULATIONS

Former Detroit Police Commissioner Deplores Public Attitude Toward Trafic Crimes.

A uniform code of traffic regulations, given a stricter enforcement generally and a closer co-operation between the traffic authorities, automobile clubs and civic bodies qualified to bring it about, is the remedy suggested by Dr. James W. Inches, former Police Commissioner of Detroit, in a general way for the traffic difficulties which the cities are now facing. Dr. Inches has prepared a detailed statement for the American Automobile Association giving his observations from actual experience in dealing with the problems of Detroit as Police Commissioner for five years.

Dr. Inches is a strong advocate of jail or prison sentences for those who flagrantly endanger the lives of citizens through recklessness or operating a car while under the influence of liquor. He deplores the apathy of the public toward what he terms "traffic crimes" as distinguished from minor offenses against traffic laws. In his statement Dr. Inches cited the fact that in 1000 deaths resulting from traffic accidents, only one violator had been given a penal sentence. Evidence was produced in some of the cases showing plainly the driver was under the influence of liquor. In the case of a child murdered, Dr. Inches stated, the utmost excitement prevailed and the murderer was promptly brought to trial and sentenced.

The proper public sentiment back of the courts in giving jail or prison sentences to proven reckless and drunken drivers, Dr. Inches stated, will do much to correct the traffic troubles and at the same time remove any feeling of resentment against the larger percentage of motorists who obey the laws.

PAIGE AND JEWETT WIN SPEED TRIALS

DETROIT, Oct. 6. — Competing with eight different makes of cars, all selling for more than a thousand dollars, the Paige 6-70 was first and the Jewett Six was second in speed trials held by the Lincoln Park, Detroit Police Department last week.

There were two trials for speed and acceleration. The races were against time from a standing start with the gear shift handle in neutral. Five persons were carried in each car.

In the first event, three-tenths mile, the Paige shot down the course in 25 seconds flat. The Jewett's time was 25.2 seconds.

In the second event, one-half mile, the Paige covered the distance in 37 seconds. The Jewett acquired one-tenth second more.

Nearly a quarter of the 100,000 motor vehicles in Japan are trucks.

It is estimated that at least 4,000,000 motor vehicles will be produced in 1923. Car sales this spring were far ahead of any known previous figure.

"Few accessories are used on cars in the Orient, but then the cars are, for the most part, not worth 'dolling up.' As long as they run on all four wheels, nothing is done to them. When repairing is imperative only that work is done which is absolutely necessary.

"The roads are narrow and constructed of cobblestones, except in a small downtown district. Cars and tires do not last very long.

"The traffic officers are Sikh policemen, who stand at the main corners in a sort of dejected manner and wave their hands spasmodically, first in one direction and then in the other. Rickshas, machines and street cars wait impatiently sometimes while the policeman settles a dispute among some coolies, then, with a start, wakes up and sends the held-up traffic on once again.

"Most machines don't seem capable of breaking any speed laws. However, there are some very honest-to-goodness machines on the streets, driven by chauffeurs and they for the most part are observant of the speed laws, or, at least, they watch the movements of other cars so as to avoid a collision.

BUICK FIRST CHOICE AT NEW YORK SHOW

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—IN JANUARY at the New York Automobile show two of the divisions of General Motors will have the leading places. Buick for the sixth consecutive year will have the first place. Chevrolet will have the second place.

TO THROW OFF HEAT IS TIRE PROBLEM

An ordinary piece of steel wire will become hot after being flexed a few times and in the course of a minute or two will break. The ordinary automobile casing is called upon to withstand the action of this heating and flexing into the millions of times.

A 33x5 cord casing, for example, will flex 358,800 times in a 100-mile drive. Each time that any given spot in the casing flexes when it strikes the ground a little bit of heat is generated inside the tire. The technical man who is charged with the responsibility of giving the car owner a maximum amount of mileage must devise a means of escape for this internal heat. It is destructive to the tire because it serves to separate the plies of fabric.

Therefore, the sidewall of any automobile tire is made very thin so as to afford a means of escape for the heat. Some of the heat generated inside of the casing is absorbed by the metal rim which is a good heat conductor.

This principle of heat generation can be easily found out by any motorist simply by feeling the tire after driving.

A 33x5 casing in the course of a normal season of driving will flex from 15,000,000 to 35,000,000 times, which means from five to 10 thousand miles, according to Miller tire men. In all of these millions of flexings the tire must be prepared to absorb and throw off the strain without breaking, as the piece of steel wire does after 20 or 30 flexings.

TO DRIVE OLDS ACROSS CONTINENT IN "HIGH"

An entirely new performance record for an automobile will be attempted when "Cannonball" Baker, noted race driver and the holder of several score of records, will leave New York tomorrow in a new Oldsmobile six to drive across the continent to Los Angeles in high gear. In fact, "high" will be the only gear in the car, low, second and reverse gears having been removed.

A score or more of automobile companies have made cross-country runs, either for speed, endurance or economy, but none have yet attempted the run in high gear. During the last year, however, the Oldsmobile four has broken many hill-climbing records, and the new six is designed to meet the same performance records, and Baker asserts that the car will climb all the mountains easily.

Prior to leaving, the car will be inspected by New York newspaper men, who will certify that the car carries nothing but high gear in the transmission and they will officially seal it to prevent tampering. A letter certifying this will be carried on the trip across country, and in San Francisco newspaper men will open the gear case to see that it has not been changed. A stock touring car will be used.

The route from New York will lead to Philadelphia, Cumberland, Md.; Uniontown, Pa.; Wheeling, W. Va., crossing the Cumberland Mountains. It will then be through Columbus, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Dodge City, Raton Pass, Santa Fe, Albuquerque, Flagstaff, Barstow, Cal., and Los Angeles.

Look ahead toward winter! Have good tires when you need them most. Kokomo Tires are made for all roads and all seasons. They are made to give service under hardest conditions.

It's in the tread!

15,000 to 25,000 miles on a set of tires.

18 to 23 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

Quiet, smooth, continuous duty and absolute reliability, day after day for years.

Few of the highest priced cars can show such records. Everyone knows how impossible to find like results among cars of the Essex price.

"The Greatest of its Size" Say European Experts

"Absolutely the brightest, liveliest, little engine I ever found in an American Car."
S. F. Edge in "The Autocar" of London, England

"A colossal revelation of the value Americans can offer at its price."

All Closed Car Comforts at Open Car Cost

At open car cost the Coach combines all closed car comforts with the long-lasting reliability and performance of the famous Essex chassis.

And except for the Coach, moderate-priced closed cars always mean low-priced chassis.

In no other type of closed car—the Coach is alone in that distinction—can you get so much in closed car comfort and assured mechanical satisfaction, within hundreds of dollars of its price.

"My Next Car Another Essex" Say Thousands of Owners

In an investigation conducted by a great national magazine, to determine what percentage of owners would get the same make of car, when they bought again, the Essex showed next to the highest percentage. Only one car, higher in price, and far longer on the market, excelled it in owner preference, by a margin so narrow as to be almost negligible.

"On four Essex cars I have owned my total repair bills have been less than $35."

"Over 17,000 miles in my Essex Coach. Never a spark plug out, nor any mechanical work done."

"The Essex handles easier and runs smoother than any of all the cars I have owned."

"Have driven my Essex 40,000 miles in four years without replacement of any kind."

"Still has all the famous Essex pep and economy after 34,000 miles.

"Gilt edge service from this Essex for 3 years and 50,000 miles at trifling expense."

"As a result of our wonderful experience with Essex cars many of our friends have bought them."

"After 34,000 miles use I consider Essex the best car made for continuous trouble-free, economical service."

"My Essex car is the most efficient, dependable, and economical of three cars I have owned."

"I consider my Essex Coach the best buy for the money on the market."

"After 2 years' running my Essex is still as good as new, mechanically, and satisfactory in every respect."

Why COLE ADOPTED BALLOON TIRES in preference to 4-WHEEL BRAKES

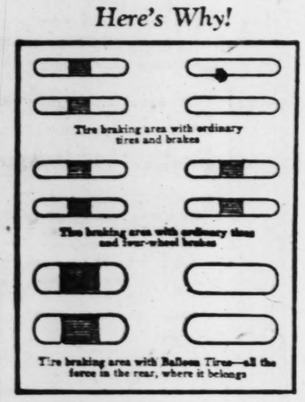
Here's Why!



Everybody wants the result that four-wheel brakes are supposed to give.

But not everybody is willing to accept four-wheel brakes in order to get that result.

Balloon Air-Cushion Tires do everything that four-wheel brakes are supposed to do. They do it better. And they do a great deal more.

All in all the Balloon Tires on Cole cars give you FOUR distinct advantages:

—Comfort
—Safety
—Economy
—and double braking capacity.

Balloon Tires are the final factor in making motoring safer and more luxuriously comfortable than it has ever been.

Firestone Balloon Air-Cushion Tires are Standard on Cole Aero-Volante and optional on all other Master Models

The widespread demand that met their introduction evidences how fully these models answer the need for a small car of proved dependability and performance.

All Buick 1924 six-cylinder cars likewise have four wheel brakes.

'DRIVING FAULTS CAUSE ACCIDENTS'

General Motors Official Calls Attention to Mistakes in Handling Cars.

"Three faults in driving," says C. S. Mott, vice president of General Motors, "are responsible for at least 50 per cent of automobile traffic accidents. They are: (1) Failure to indicate intention of turning or stopping; (2) Passing another vehicle to its right, and (3) Coming into the traffic stream without proper caution.

"The time to make a signal of intention is before you turn or stop, not while you are in the act. Except in emergency, it should always be possible for a driver to know what he is going to do; and when he does, he should always take 'the other fellow' into his confidence. Few things are more maddening, or more dangerous, than to have the man in front of your in the traffic stop suddenly without warning and then put his hand out. The sudden, unannounced turn is equally full of danger, not only to following traffic, but to the driver who is guilty of carelessness in making it.

"The man who passes the vehicle ahead of him, unless it be a street car, to the right, is flirting with death. To begin with, he cannot see any signal given by the driver seated on the left-hand side of the car ahead of him. The latter may have signaled that he is going to draw in to the curb at the right, but the man who is just beginning to pass him cannot see his signal. In most cities, the traffic ordinance forbids passing to the right, in overtaking, and common sense should prohibit it everywhere. No one but a reckless fool would attempt to pass a car to the right in the country, with the risk of being crowded into the ditch—and the danger is equally great in city driving.

"The man who enters a traffic stream—as distinguished from crossing it—owes it to himself and 'the other fellow' to proceed with caution. Where there is no traffic officer he should wait for a gap in the line before turning to follow it. If he does not, he is a menace to safety. The thoughtless driver who darts out of a side street and turns sharply to the right endangers the lives of literally huudreds of people, if there is congestion. The drivers immediately in front of him are likely to swerve suddenly to the left possibly far enough to engage with traffic moving in an opposite direction, and one driver who runs without heed may be responsible for more damage and injury than he could ever repair.

"Consideration for others, and a realization that no man drives a car except in its relation to the traffic, are absolute essentials for safety in city and country alike. When every driver realized that his every act has its effect on the direction and speed of every other driver in the same traffic, traffic laws will be universally accepted and obeyed and only the unavoidable accidents will happen.

"With so steady an increase in the number of drivers, many of them new and unskilled, a certain number of accidents is apparently inevitable. But the experienced driver can do more than a bit in keeping the number down as low as possible."

VISITING THRONGS SEE VICTOR DISPLAY

Special invitations sent to dealers throughout the country, public invitations through newspapers, and a challenge and invitation to visiting aeronautic motor experts and engineers by Victor Motors, Inc., resulted in hundreds of visitors daily visiting the Victor showrooms at Twenty-eighth and Locust boulevard.

In their public challenge and invitation, the Victor Co. challenged "anyone to declare that these trucks are not the most advanced in America."

The showrooms of the company were decorated with palms, ferns, flowers and flags, and three Victor models were on display and demonstration—"Lightnin'," a light delivery speed truck; model 50, a heavy-duty truck, and model 80, a double transmission truck of 12,000 pounds capacity.

Through correspondence and telegrams the Victor Co. arranged for many dealers to inspect their trucks while here to visit the air performances. According to Edgar A. Riedinger, in charge of Victor truck sales, the company is more than pleased with the results of their efforts and many dealers have made arrangements for their demands in 1924.

PIKE'S PEAK CLIMB WON BY STUDEBAKER

Charles H. Myers of Colorado Springs, Colo., driving a 1921 Studebaker Big-Six, won event No. 3 in the recent annual Pike's Peak national hill climb. The race was over a course of 12 miles with a climb of 2000 feet. Myers' time for the distance, 19 minutes 21 2-5 seconds, is the fastest time ever made over the route by cars with a minimum weight of 2000 pounds.

The competing cars were divided into three classes governed by weight and piston displacement. The Big-Six was entered in Class 3, which was open to cars with motors having a piston displacement of 200 cubic inches and over, and minimum weight of 2000 pounds.

Eight months ago this Big-Six was wrecked in Pueblo, Colo., and was so bodly damaged by fire that it was not considered worth repairing. Myers, however, rebuilt the stock motor, using light pistons and rings and a stock cam shaft. After making only six adjustments on the original design he was satisfied to enter it against factory entries and special cars.

Myers won a purse of $500 for the fastest time in his class; honors for the second fastest time regardless of class, and the fourth fastest time that has ever been made over the route. He also holds the record for cars of this weight, 2000 pounds.

OUTLOOK SATISFIES GENERAL MOTORS HEAD

Commenting upon the current situation in the motor car industries as reflected in the operation of General Motors, Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president, says:

"We scheduled for September 82,000 cars. This compares with 75,000 cars in May, 1923, the largest number that General Motors ever produced and sold in any one month. Due to the fact that September was a short month in working days, and on account of production difficulties in bringing through new models, we fell considerably short of this schedule, but we sold 69,400, which was every car we could make, and we closed the month with a substantial number of orders unfilled.

"We have scheduled for October 91,000 cars and shall make every effort to produce that number. We have no question of our ability to market them. On Oct. 1 General Motors had on hand the smallest number of cars in our possession in any month during the past year.

"It is always dangerous to forecast the future, but the way it looks now we fully expect to run through the fall and winter on a very good production basis. To sum up the situation, we are entirely satisfied with the present outlook."

The Finest Car of the Year For the Finest Time of the Year

Autumn is ideal weather.

Roads are just moist enough to lay the dust, air is bracing and scenery is wonderful.

For all kinds of weather and for the family there's no type of car that quite equals the sedan. Open for the warm days—closed in a jiffy when rain or cold comes on.

But—a sedan that "drums" from violent periods of vibration in the motor, lacks the last degree of luxury.

That's why a Rickenbacker Sedan is so superior.

Tandem Flywheels eliminate all Periods of Vibration from a Rickenbacker motor.

"4-Wheel Brakes," another feature in which Rickenbacker excels, adds the last degree of safety to a motor car.

So riding in this closed model is a delight such as you have never experienced before—unless in a Rickenbacker Six.

FUMES FROM EXHAUST ALWAYS DANGEROUS

Vice President of A. A. A. Warns Against Contact With Carbon Monoxide Fumes.

Serious illness and even death may result from allowing the automobile engine to run in a closed garage while the owner is making adjustments or driving closely behind a closed body truck, bus or car, is the warning given by Dr. L. S. Colter, vice president of the American Automobile Association. Dr. Colter cites the narrow escape from death resulting from carbon monoxide gas poisoning of two young men who were piloting an automobile float entered by the Cincinnati Auto Club in a recent civic parade in Cincinnati. The parade was moving slowly and in close formation, and the young men were inclosed in a specially-built cab. The carbon monoxide gas fumes from the exhausts of the cars and trucks ahead resulted in both young men being hurried to the hospital for emergency treatment. Young ladies on the float were affected by the gas to a milder degree.

"Poisoning from carbon monoxide gas from the exhaust of the automobile engine is more prevalent than the average automobile owner appreciates," said Dr. Colter, who, as a physician and an enthusiastic motorist, has made a special study of the subject. "Often motorists are affected and do not recognize that the symptoms of fatigue, headache, shortness of breath, dizziness and possible nausea result from carbon monoxide gas poisoning. The American Medical Journal in its August number quoted a report from the Ohio State Department of Health showing 81 cases of poisoning from the deadly gas from automobile exhausts, with 34 deaths during the first 10 weeks of last winter.

"Not only is it dangerous to run the engine in a closed garage, but considerable risk is incurred in trailing too closely a truck with a large body which prevents the gas thrown off from spreading out. The same is true of a large closed passenger car or bus.

"With cool days approaching, the motorist will do well to avoid getting in too close contact with the confined fumes from the exhaust of an automobile engine."

Try to Pass It On a Hill

Then You Will Know Jewett Six Has More Power

LOTS of "boulevard beauties" are "duds" when asked to climb! That's where real ability shows. And that's where the new Jewett Six is daily outshining "light" sixes—as well as cars costing far more than Jewett.

The new Jewett Six outclasses all cars its size. It has a full 50 h.p. six-cylinder motor—Paige-built. Cylinders are 3½x5 inches—which means 249 cubic inches of piston displacement. Check those figures against any "light" six. Form your own opinion of performance-possibilities of lesser-powered cars.

Having such power, Jewett Six need not be skimped in an effort to attain performance. Nor is it. 6-inch-deep frame; husky Paige-Timken axles, front and rear; all-steel universal joints; springs 80% of wheelbase. The new Jewett weighs 2805 pounds—from 200 to 400 pounds more than "light" six cars of the same size.

And with all this husky strength and weight—Jewett drives from 2 to 60 miles an hour in high; passes most any car on any hill; accelerates from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds in high. [Try that with any other car!]

Yet Jewett Six costs only $1065 [at Detroit]. Old-time motorists are amazed at its performance, stamina and astounding value. Drive it yourself. Call us up. Have a ride, any time. You'll agree that Jewett outperforms most any other car you've ever driven—particularly when compared with "light" sixes of less power, less weight, less strength and durability!

SATURATION POINT IS NOT IN SIGHT

Report of Auto Registrations for First Six Months Shows Big Increases.

There are no indications that the United States or any of the individual states are approaching the point of saturation in number of motor vehicles in use. Evidence of this was brought out in the preliminary study of the Good Roads Board of the American Automobile Association of the report of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads showing the number of motor vehicles licensed in the various states during the first six months of 1923 in comparison with the reports of previous years.

The increase in number of motor vehicles in the United States has continued at approximately the same rate of preceding years, states the Good Roads Board. An interesting delegation gathered from the report of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads is the marked increase in numbers of motor trucks for the six months' period as compared with the entire year of 1922, indicating the rapid growth of the use of the motor vehicle for commercial purposes.

In all but nine states material increases were shown in number of motor vehicles registered during the six months' period of 1923 over the entire year's registrations of 1922. With six months yet to go, the record of 1923 in all states will exceed that of 1922.

The State of Ohio climbed up to second place in total number of motor vehicles registered, changing places with California. New York again leads, with a total registration during the six months' period of 1,025,718 motor vehicles. Ohio is second, with 965,000, and California third with 933,808. The total number of motor vehicles registered in all of the states during the six months' period was 13,002,427, as against 12,238,375 for the entire year of 1922. The total revenue from registration was $167,240,937.76 for the first six months, as compared to $152,047,823.74. In addition to the revenue from registrations, the states collected from the motorists $8,669,174.03 in taxes on gasoline during the six months' period of this year, as compared to a total collection of $11,923,442.61 for 1922. As the gasoline tax is collected as the fuel is used, the record for the year 1923 may be expected to double that of 1922. The gasoline tax in some of the states did not go into effect until late in the year.

3 DOOR BROUGHAM NOW MOST POPULAR GARDNER

Thirty days ago less three-door broughams were being shipped by the factory than any other Gardner model—today, it is the most popular model Gardner builds. During September, this model represented a third of the total production, although shipments of other closed models were not affected.

"On first thought," states Joseph A. Schlecht, president of the Mound City Auto Company, Gardner distributors, "this sudden popularity may seem unusual, but it is not at all so when it is remembered that the Gardner three-door, five-passenger Brougham is an altogether new type of closed car which has thoroughly satisfied the need existing for a close-coupled closed car at a moderate price, providing a cosy, compact seating arrangement for five grown people.

"The Gardner body designers," continued Schlecht, "have dispensed entirely with the folding seat in the Gardner Brougham, by providing three wide doors, two on the right and one on the left front, which permit direct access to both front and rear seats.

"The front seat is solid and not divided, and provides ample room for the driver and extra passenger, while the rear seat, which is reached by a wide rear door, accommodates three passengers in comfort. The back of the front seat is cut out at the bottom which permits added leg room.

"The Brougham is mounted on the standard Gardner chassis, and powered with the 43 horsepower, 5-bearing crankshaft Gardner motor. There is abundant power to carry the added weight of the enclosed body."

TIREMEN WARN TO WATCH VALVE CORE

A very deciate piece of metal about one inch long, faced on one end with a slight piece of rubber and surrounded by a small spring of very delicate nature, plays an exceedingly important part in the life of every automobile tire. It is known as the valve core. It is the little metal strip which screws into the inside of the valve stem. In large pneumatic casings it is called upon to hold back a force of more than 100 pounds, which automatically increases with severe road bumps.

A valve core frequently lasts as long as the casing, but Miller tire experts recommend that this little piece of mechanism be watched carefully at all times so that it will be in good working condition and will not permit any of the air to escape from the tube. If the spring grows weak or the rubber becomes worn, a new core should be inserted.

A LESSON IN BUYING OIL FOR YOUR CAR

Securing Wrong Grade of Lubricant Means Trouble and Reduces Automobile's Life.

"Let's take a typical case of the pace that kills," says Erwin Greer, president, Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago, Ill. "Your Eighty-eight rolls out of the salesroom on it's first 2000 miles. Of course you drive pretty slowly on the first 500 or 1000 miles, so as not to burn her up. You watch the oil gage and when it slides down the scale you stop at an oil station. And here's where you get into trouble.

"Medium or light oil?" asks the oil man. "Medium," you say because "medium" sounds like a good average. And then whatever brand of oil that particular station has is poured into your crankcase.

"All right. Let's go! Soon "3000" clicks into place on the speedometer, so you let her out to discover what the car can really do. A rough overtone sounds over the sweet purr of the motor, but you're hitting 45 and are too busy to notice it. Then comes a hint of labor into the drone of the motor and then a musical tap-tap. And as you let the accelerator spring up from the floorboard the tap becomes a whack—and then—you have no one to blame but yourself. The $50 bill the garage man hands you is the cost of a lesson in "Don't Just Say Oil."

"Here is what happened to the inside of the motor. It was a beautiful job—joints cozy and bearing snug, to start with—but it was a new metal, and surface ground against surface. Tiny filings washed off into the oil and sank to the crankcase. Some of the "medium" oil you purchased was poor stuff that scorched under friction and permitted the bearing to go dry. Your car was designed with broad bearing surface of narrow clearance, calling for light oil. Medium oil was in the same as a fat man trying to squeeze through an elevated train—neither are built for the work. The bearings got hotter and hotter and wore away quickly, dropping still more filings down into the oil below.

"Dust came in through the breather tubes and the air intake, carbon began to accumulate, and as the motor was never again given a good cleaning out, there formed in the reservoir a sandlike mixture of oil, metal and various kinds of grit. And when you let her out the motor sent in an emergency call for more oil and the pump obeying flushed the friction surfaces with a sickly mush until finally a wrist-pin began to shriek and then blooey!

"If only every motorist would keep his car supplied with best oil and greases adapted to it, 90 per cent of motor troubles would disappear.

"Peculiar, too, isn't it, when you come to think about it? Here you go and put half a year's income into a car and then neglect to give it the proper lubrication. Gosh, it's the embodiment of every principle known to mechanics, from high tension to hydraulics; it's the peak of standard perfection. With real care the normal life of a motor car is from 50 to a 100,000 miles and it may be much longer than that. But at 10,000 miles it has reached the dangerous age and will begin to sow it's wild oats if it is not carefully watched. At 20,000 it is rapidly sinking into senile debility. Man, you can't break the commandments and stay young, not without a lot of expensive repairs, anyhow."

ORDERS MORE BALLOON TIRE-EQUIPPED COLES

Jerome J. Benjamin president of the Cole-Benjamin Motor Co., was at the factory during the past week and arranged for the immediate delivery of three additional balloon tire equipped Cole cars. Sales of the cars thus equipped have been very brisk according to Benjamin.

On his return the distributor found that thieves had opened his safe the previous (Wednesday) evening. Benjamin thinks they were after balloon tires and believes they were disappointed when none were found.

2,500 ST. LOUISANS AT OLDSMOBILE SHOWROOM

Over 2500 St. Louisans saw the new Oldsmobile Light Six at the De Luxe Automobile Co. showroom during the past week, according to Col. P. H. Brockman, president of the De Luxe Automobile Co., Oldsmobile distributors. Over 1500 saw the new car Sunday and Monday alone. Brockman says that he had to turn down over 100 orders during the week.

The salesroom was emptied and closed at 11 p. m. each night, though many still desired to look at the cars. "I have never seen another automobile create such a sensation," Brockman said Saturday. "I am sure we will never be able to fill the demand for this car."

Bathe Where Standish Marched.

Motorists along the Massachusetts coast have taken possession of the territory where Miles Standish once held sway. At Duxbury beach, a mile from the Standish home, hundreds of tents are erected by tourists every Saturday and Sunday. These shelters serve as bath houses for those who wish to swim in the surf.

AUTOMOBILE TIRE FLAP PLAYS IMPORTANT ROLE

Acts as Protector Between Rim and Tube—Vital to Long Life.

Did you ever stop to consider how important is the role played by the automobile tire flap? As a protector between the rim and the tube, it is very vital to the long life of the tube. It prevents deterioration from the rust that invariably gathers on the rim. It also prevents the tube from pinching between the edges of the tire on the rim.

Three or four plies of fabric ordinarily compose the flap. It is constructed to conform to the shape of the tire and should lay perfectly straight between the tube and rim without buckling.

The long notch at the end of the flap should lay on top or next to the rim, in order to prevent the tube creeping up and being pinched in the long groove. The end with the round hole should lie next to the tube. If the tube is a trifle too short, it is economy to purchase a new flap rather than to risk slitting the holes to lengthen it, according to Miller tire men. The cut, however, must never be so long that the edges of the flap do not come together.

If the flap is too short, it oftentimes works down to the side wall of the casing. Here it cuts the fabric like a knife. When it is corroded from rim rust and the edge gets ragged from wear, there is danger of pinching the tube and thus ruining it.

The motorist should examine the condition of the flap at each tire change. If he fails to take care of this necessary accessory, he has only himself to blame when he has tube trouble as a result. The price of a new flap often will save several tubes. A poor flap is not only a source of constant annoyance, but also a source of considerable needless expense.

EASY TO DIM LIGHTS ON THE NEW OAKLAND

Why do so many motorists fail to dim their lights when meeting other cars coming in the opposite direction?

It really is not so much discourtesy as an inherent human laziness to reach down to the dash to do so. Frequently it is due to the fact that the driver feels he does not have the car fully under control while so doing.

In the new 1924 Oakland True Blue models the centralized arrangement of all the operating controls on the steering wheel instead of the dash does not require a motorist to take his hands off the wheel to switch the headlights from bright to dim and back again. A twist of the thumb only is necessary to operate the headlights. In fact, the only time it is necessary for the driver to remove his hand from the steering wheel is in shifting gears.

This unique feature was commended as a great safety feature, particularly in night driving, by police and traffic officials who have been given demonstrations in the hundreds of cities and towns through which the Oakland True Blue travelers are being sent to every section of the country. Recently one of these travelers visited the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., Oakland distributers here.

"TRUCK MASTER" WINS G. M. C. NAME PRIZE

L. R. Fisher of Rochester, N. Y., is the winner of the national contest of the General Motors Truck Co. of Pontiac, Mich., for the best suggestion for a new name for a motor driver.

This contest was started several months ago with the idea of finding a name which would improve the morale and fit the man who has charge of a motor truck. The contest was started as the result of a suggestion by a national magazine which asserted that the drivers of a locomotive, a street car or an automobile all had a separate classification and that the motor truck driver should have some designation.

The name suggested by Fisher and picked as the best of all the suggestions received, was "Truck Master."

GREAT RECEPTION FOR NEW OLDSMOBILE

The reception given the 1924 series of six-cylinder Oldsmobiles is such that the Olds Motor Works of Lansing, Mich., will build better than 100,000 of these cars during the next 12 months, according to G. H. Peasley, general sales manager. Telegrams received from distributers and dealers show that more than 150,000 persons saw the new cars on the first two days of their announcement, and a totally unexpected flood of orders resulted. This is the information just received by Col. P. H. Brockman, president of the De Luxe Automobile Co., Oldsmobile distributers.

The entire Olds factory has now been rearranged, according to Peasley, and millions of dollars have been spent for new equipment and plans have been made to produce a record number of cars during the year.

Orders wired the factory during the first few days of the showing of the 1924 line indicate that capacity production of 600 cars per day will be required within a short time. Indications are, Peasley says, that the year's entire production will be oversold.

TO BUILD COLUMBIA IN LIBERTY PLANT

Detailed information regarding the plant formerly occupied by the Liberty Motor Car Co., and purchased by the Columbia Motors Co. early in September has just reached Luke Hart of the Advance Motor Car Co., which distributes the Columbia six in this territory.

The new plant, according to Hart, means much in adding to the facilities for manufacturing Columbia sixes in greater numbers, with increased efficiency.

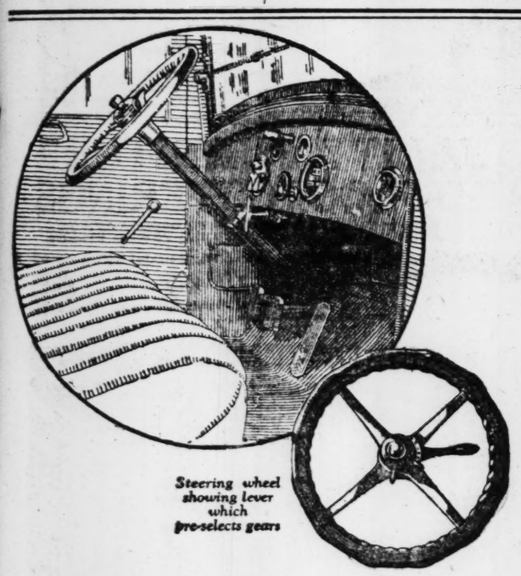
The plant is one of the very best in the country in point of manufacturing facilities and up-to-the-minute equipment. It occupies a site covering 24 acres, with railroad switch lines on both sides. Besides the widely known administration building, which is a replica of Independent Hall in Philadelphia, there are three main structures now devoted to Columbia factory processes.

The main assembly building is 120 feet wide by 600 feet in length. Heating, lighting and plumbing fixtures are installed overhead leaving the entire floor space free for manufacturing. Another very large building is devoted to painting, trimming and body finishing. In addition, a completely equipped power plant is on the property, where power for all needs can be provided economically.

The assembly line, along which the car travels from the point where the bare frame is lowered into position until the finished automobile rolls off at the other end, is equipped at every point with ingenious devices for saving labor and increasing the quality of work done. Space is provided for exacting motor tests and for checking up the quality of every part of the car before it passes to the assembly line.

Buick Breaks Denver Record.

Beating the best railroad time by 15 minutes, John W. Hazelbaker of Kansas City drove his Buick Six over the new Midland Trail to Denver, Colo., in 19 hours and 10 minutes. The distance covered was 597 miles. The trip was undertaken under the sponsorship of the automobile club of Kansas City.



Steering wheel showing lever which pre-selects gears

No Levers, Plenty of Leg Room

ON the APPERSON Six and Eight there are no levers cluttering up the front compartment. You can get in or out on the curb side. There is plenty of leg-room to permit comfortable driving. APPERSON Engineering has removed the strain, the tenseness and discomfort of driving and made it a real pleasure to sit behind the wheel.

A mechanical gear-shift shifts the gears easily, quickly, and surely with possibility of "clashing" gears and blocking traffic eliminated. It operates by merely moving selector on steering wheel post to gear desired and throwing out the clutch in usual manner. It is simple in construction with nothing to get out of order.

Emergency brake operated by pull-handle on instrument board.

Thirty years of engineering has produced this APPERSON—a smaller car with a performance and comfort that will amaze you. See this APPERSON—five minutes behind the wheel will prove to you the truth of the statement that it is years ahead of any car on the market to-day.

Matters of Current Interest to St. Louis Lovers of Art

Two problems confront the aspiring young American sculptor; first, the meager public and private use of sculpture, and second, the scarcity of public understanding and appreciation of the art. With disadvantages as colossal as these at the very outset, the young sculptor who surmounts them and succeeds in spite of them has an ability and courage which will carry him far. Perhaps he is buoyed up by the hope and knowledge that eventually the two problems can and will be overcome, at which time the world will be a pleasanter place in which to live. A strong heart, boundless confidence in self and the courage of youth are the necessary equipment which keeps the young sculptor so wholly sincere, so undaunted in the pursuit of his art.

With a great deal of talent and a plenty of the equipment just mentioned, Erhardt Siebert has come back to St. Louis from New York and Germany where he has been studying, and intends working here a while. That St. Louis will give him her encouragement and support goes without question.

At the present time, Siebert is working on his bust of Major Kiel which will be exhibited publicly when it is completed. Also, he is doing several other portraits, all of which definitely show the trend of the young sculptor's art. In the first place he insists that sculpture is suited to things majestic, not dainty. How far he is right remains to be seen. At any rate the work he is doing is consistent with his ideas. No delicate dancing figures, no garlanded nymphs find form in his clay. The strength, the power of American manhood, the clean-cut, clear-eyed fearlessness of American youth are his subjects.

Siebert points out that there are two distinct methods of sculpture; one, portraitive, the other interpretative. The first is directly imitative while the second is introspective. Needless to say, his own art belongs to the latter classification.

Installation more effective than that of the Persian and Chinese exhibits now at the City Art Museum would be extremely difficult to achieve. Although the objects are to remain here only until October 15, Gallery 32 has been completely devoted to their display, and no effort has been spared in making the arrangement the most advantageous possible. Upon entering the gallery from the sculpture court, one's gaze is met directly by the two magnificent rugs. On the floor, stretching the length of the gallery, is laid in Sixteenth Century Persian wool rug, its soft, mellow colors enrichening the very atmosphere, while in the rear doorway of the gallery is hung the rare and gorgeous East Indian rug of the late Sixteenth Century. To both right and left of the aisle thus formed by the rugs, stand cases containing the Chinese and Persian pottery, porcelains and bronzes. The majority of collections of similar objects contain several exceptionally fine examples of the rarer treasures, but few collections or even museums can boast such a number of consistently splendid and important pieces.

One of the most beautiful, rarest and most valuable objects in the collection is a Rhages ewer of the XII Century, and is considered the finest, most perfect and most representative piece of Persian pottery available today. It stands about 10 or 12 inches in height and is as alluringly graceful in slender, langorous contour as its delicate azure and turquoise colorings are fascinating. It is like the twilight flecked with little stars. It is like some Persian poet's fancy.

To the K'ang Hsi Dynasty (1662-1722) belong perhaps the rarest and most perfect samples of Chinese pottery. Glazes during this time achieved their pinnacle and the extreme perfection of the art manifested itself in objects classified as Peachbloom, Sang de Boeuf, Clair de Luna, etc. Examples of these famous wares are as rare as they are remarkable. The fact that the collection now being exhibited at the museum contains five Peachbloom objects, two Sang de Boeuf vases and one example of Clair de Luna gives some idea of the extent of this display. The design of the articles of this period is no less pleasing than the splendid workmanship and magnificent colourings, as is shown in the small, round rouge box, the graceful little amphora, a water dish, a small, semi-spherical vessel and a chrysanthemum vase all of Peachbloom. A beautiful, glowing red mandarin form vase and point bottle of Sang de Boeuf, or Blood of the Ox, are of wonderful size and importance.

This example of Clair de Luna is a small water vessel shaped like a little bowl mounted on low, slender legs. The lid is of carved ivory now darkened with age which in no way detracts from the lustrous beauty of the pottery which has a charm to be compared with nothing else. Aside from the sentimentality lent from the fact that Clair de Luna ware was used in worship in the Temples of the Moon, its attraction is romanceful from its very colorings and quality of being clearly opaque yet not transparent, and having a mystic blue sheen like the light of the moon.

The history of jade is one of the most fascinating stories to be found. From the origin of the stone to its carving and usage it is one of the most picturesque tales imaginable.

MATTERS OF INTEREST IN STUDIO AND GALLERY

That the Chinese always have been the greatest workers in this material has been attributed to several reasons. The Chinese were the first to recognize the beauty and possibilities of the stone, and to adopt it to their religious usage through which it became a sacred emblem. This accounts for its greater use in that country than elsewhere, although the mineral is to be found elsewhere in the world as well. Patience, skill and finesse required in the working with jade were easily supplied by the Chinese, who are dexterous and clever. Different periods in the evolution of their religious activities are now signified in some cases by the articles which were made during those times of jade and jadeite.

A magnificent example of intricate work in green jade is a koro exhibited in this collection. It is in three sections and belongs to the Ch'ien Lung period (1736-1795). The object itself resembles a lamp, although it was probably not used as such. It consists of a base beautifully carved on the outside, a cylindrical middle part, and a sloping lid with elaborately carved handle. Carving of the sort employed in the middle section of this koro and the lid handle, was accomplished with diamond drills and emery. Varying qualities of the stone make such work extremely hazardous, since parts of the same piece of material may be unusually soft or exceptionally brittle, endangering complete ruination of the object should some part snap. A yellow jade vase is also shown in this collection. It is smaller, and belongs also to the Ch'ien Lung period. It is similar in quality, size and design to that in our museum.

MISSOURI PRESS ASSOCIATION TO MEET HERE THIS WEEK

Sessions Will Be at Hotel Jefferson On Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The annual meeting of the Missouri Press Association will be held at the Hotel Jefferson Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The opening day's addresses will be on the relation of the newspaper to industry and to public utilities. Among the talks will be "The Newspapers and Inland Waterways," by James E. Smith, president of the Mississippi Valley Association, and "Missouri as a Coming Steel Center," by Edward F. Goltra.

Friday will be devoted to the country newspaper field. S. P. Preston, former president of the Southern Illinois Editorial Association, will speak on organization work, and there will be several speakers on various phases of advertising, circulation and commercial printing.. A discussion on the co-operative buying of newsprint, led by Miss Anna E. Nolen of the Monroe City News, and the election of officers will be held Saturday. Luncheons will be given for the editors by the Associated Industries and by the Chamber of Commerce. The alumni of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri will hold a dinner in connection with the convention on Friday.

4000 WORKERS NEEDED TO SOLICIT COMMUNITY FUND

Campaign to Be Conducted From Nov. 30 to Dec. 10—Hearings on Budget to Begin Oct. 15.

The services of almost 4000 volunteer workers will be required to raise the money necessary for the charities and philanthropies in the Community Fund for 1924, W. Frank Carter, general chairman of the fund, said yesterday. The campaign to raise this money will be held from Nov. 30 to Dec. 10.

People of St. Louis and St. Louis County last year pledged $1,116,407 to the support of the 40 charities and philanthropies which federated their appeals in the Community Fund's first annual campaign. The Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association, the St. Louis chapter of the American Red Cross and St. Luke's Hospital since have been admitted to membership in the fund.

The determining of the amount to be asked for in the second campaign rests with the Budget Committee, which, beginning Oct. 15, will hold hearings daily with representatives of member organizations to determine their needs.

SAYS SOUTH ILLINOIS WILL BE DRY AS LAW CAN MAKE IT

U. S. Prosecutor Declares That Moonshine Traffic Has Been "Squelched."

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 6.—It is only a question of time before the Southern Federal Court district of Illinois will be as dry as law ordinarily can make it, United States District Attorney Thomas Williamson declared at his office here.

"We have squelched the traffic in moonshine in Southern Illinois by injunctions and vigorous prosecutions," Attorney Williamson said. "Counties in that section of the State are co-operating with us, and violations are decreasing daily.

The majority of our prosecutions have been successful and with this record we hope to accomplish our goal—a practically dry state. In the Peoria division of this district, 300 cases will have been disposed of by the last of November. During the last year over 600 charges of liquor violations have been prosecuted and convictions or pleas of guilty obtained in the majority of them."

INTEGRITY Studebaker SERVICE

STUDEBAKER COMMENTS
On Four-Wheel Brakes

There is little difference mechanically between two-wheel brake and four-wheel brake mechanisms.

Front-wheel brakes are merely added capacity, of conventional design. All four brakes are operated by the foot pedal.

The emergency brakes on rear wheels or transmission, operated by the hand lever, are retained in all four-wheel brake systems.

Controversy already exists between four-wheel brake advocates as to the relative merit of external or internal types of brake pressure on front wheels.

The duplication of parts, added weight, and increased friction of four-wheel brakes are common knowledge.

If four-wheel brakes were necessary, safe, and simple in operation, their existence would be justified, even with these impediments.

The factory makes proper adjustment of clearances between brake linings and drums.

After the factory ships the car, its responsibility ceases for brake adjustments, and the responsibility is shifted to the owner.

Electric starters, battery ignition, and vacuum tanks are acknowledged developments in the evolution of the automobile. They are built complete, encased in housings by the factory, are practically automatic and require few adjustments. Four-wheel brakes are in an entirely different category.

Numerous dealers and factory branch salesmen selling four-wheel brake cars, are already advising buyers that the front brakes may be disconnected, if they are not wanted. This would mean, of course, that the extra weight and impediments would be carried around uselessly.

Other front-wheel brakes are adjusted for such weak pressure that they cannot lock the front wheels, and the brakes are thus merely camouflage.

Four-wheel brakes will cause more trouble and accidents in a month than they will prevent in a year.

In fact, the Rolls-Royce Company states that "they show such decidedly dangerous disadvantages that they are considered unsafe to put in the hands of the general public, and are not nearly the equal of the powerful, efficient, lasting, and easily equalized brake design now employed in our design."

Four-wheel brakes have been a bone of contention in England since 1910, and yet today only 5 or 6 of the 150 odd English makes of cars use them at all. Several manufacturers use them as optional equipment, or furnish them on one of their models only.

Adherents of four-wheel brakes claim that they (1) permit quicker stopping and (2) prevent skidding. These are the only claims made for four-wheel brakes. With front-wheel brakes fully applied, quicker stopping is possible. This is not denied.

That quick stopping which locks the front wheels is an advantage, is vigorously denied. Such stopping is positively dangerous, because steering control is immediately lost.

The claim that four-wheel brakes prevent skidding and sliding is denied. No matter what kind of brakes are used, skidding will occur if wheels are locked before the momentum of the car is offset by the resistance of the road or pavement, whether dry or wet.

Skidding on wet pavements can be reduced to the minimum, with either two- or four-wheel brakes, only by slowing down speed and gentle brake pressure with clutch engaged.

Disadvantages of Four-Wheel Brakes

Against the only advantage (?) of four-wheel brakes, namely, quicker stopping, there are six serious disadvantages which make them mechanically impracticable, dangerous, uncomfortable, and expensive to owners, as follows:

1. Danger of Accidents. With permission, we quote from a recent circular of the Rolls-Royce Company to their dealers, upon which we cannot improve:

> "Basically, the fault with front-wheel brakes lies in the danger of front-wheel skids, which are uncontrollable and consequently vastly more dangerous than a rear-wheel skid.
> "It must be appreciated, first of all, that for their ability to steer the car the front wheels depend on their rolling motion. When front wheels cease to roll they lose all power to steer the car, which slides straight ahead on a flat road, or into the ditch if on a crowned or cambered road.
> "When the brakes are used in an emergency it is of primary importance that the direction of the car should be under control; that is, that the car can be steered from the time that the brakes are applied until it is brought to a complete stop.
> "When an obstacle suddenly presents itself (as in night driving) the driver's instinct is to immediately apply the brakes as hard as possible.
> "If, under these conditions, the front wheels are suddenly locked, disaster may overtake the driver, through inability to control the car's direction, even though it may stop before meeting the obstacle.
> "In traffic driving the ability to dodge—to control the direction of the car—is of almost equal importance with the ability to stop.
> "On a wet or sprinkled city street, granting that the front-wheel brakes were perfectly equalized, the car would slide straight ahead unable to take advantage of traffic conditions, either right or left.
> "If the brakes were not perfectly equalized, immediately the pressure was applied, the front wheels would take on a skid, which would be uncontrollable, in whichever direction the equalization of the brakes was faulty.
> "In traffic driving, under most favorable conditions (perfectly equalized brakes and dry pavement) a sudden application of the brakes checks the car so precipitately that cars following have been known to crash into the car ahead, causing a rear end wreck through not having stopping room and time.
> "It is, of course, obvious that front-wheel brakes present double the difficulty of keeping the brakes properly equalized.
> "Aside from the above apparent defects in front or four-wheel braking, there is the stiffening effect on the steering to take into consideration when the brakes are applied, and the drag on the steering unless the braking effects on both wheels is absolutely equalized. This, of itself, constitutes a serious disadvantage reflected in the handling of the car."

2. Adjustments by Owner. Brakes must be properly adjusted, lubricated, and kept free from dirt, gravel, and foreign substances, to prevent unequal pressure of brakes and possible locking of front wheels. The burden of this responsibility rests on the owner, not on the factory.

3. Added Impediments and Lubrication. Four-wheel brakes double the number of parts in the braking mechanism, add about one hundred pounds of unsprung weight to the front end of the car, and create from twenty to thirty additional places (mostly inaccessible) requiring lubrication which must be applied by hand.

4. Decreased Car Efficiency. The added weight, extra parts, and increased friction resulting from four-wheel brakes decrease to some degree the efficiency of the car. Poorer acceleration, reduced hill-climbing ability, and increased gasoline consumption result.

5. Harder Steering and Control. The increase in unsprung weight, added parts, and friction necessarily increase the strength required to steer the car and to operate the brakes.

6. Expense of Maintenance. Extra service work in repairing, adjusting, and relining brakes puts the car in the shop oftener and increases the expense of maintenance.

Patent Situation

Four-wheel brakes have been in existence for about twenty years, during which time thousands of patents have been taken out in Europe and the United States, many of which have expired, and it is very doubtful if there are any basic patents preventing the use of four-wheel brakes.

European Experience

European manufacturers have experimented with four-wheel brakes for two decades. English manufacturers generally refuse to use them, although there are a few exceptions.

French manufacturers use them more generally, but many cars are equipped with "servo mechanisms," which are an added attachment intended to prevent locking of front wheels, insure equalization, ease the pedal pressure, etc., but this device introduces further complications of weight, lubrication and expense.

Trade Authorities

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRIES—July 12, 1923

> "In some cases the layout is such that the act of steering tends to release the front-wheel brake, rendering it less effective when the wheels are cramped. If, with this arrangement, steering is made harder, or the brakes less effective on a curve, or when the vehicle must make a sudden turn—as it must often do in an emergency—there is grave reason to doubt whether the braking is any safer with four- than with two-wheel brakes."

MOTOR WORLD—June 6, 1923

Studebaker's Position

Studebaker research and engineering departments have been studying, experimenting with, and testing four-wheel brake mechanisms for two years.

These tests merely convince us that four-wheel brakes are unnecessary, mechanically impracticable, and dangerous in the hands of unskilled drivers.

The 1924 model Studebaker cars are equipped with brakes on the rear wheels only. The foot pedal operates the external contracting brakes and easily locks both wheels.

The hand lever operates the internal expanding brakes, and likewise locks the wheels easily.

The foot brakes are used in driving, and the hand brakes to hold the car still when parked on grades, also in emergencies, if necessary.

Studebaker brakes are safe, simple, and practicable. There are no more reliable brakes in use on any automobiles.

The 1924 model Studebaker cars are not, and will not be, equipped with four-wheel brakes

Y. M. C. A. LEASES GRAND AV. SITE AT BIG PROFIT

Property Bought in 1893 for $51,250 Valued in Transaction at Approximately $1500 a Foot.

LESSEES TO BUILD OFFICE STRUCTURE

10-Story Building at Intersection of Franklin to Cost $1,500,000 — Other Big Deals.

By Berry Moore.

The upward swing of prices of land on Grand boulevard was exemplified yesterday in the northeast corner of Grand and Franklin, which was acquired under a 99-year lease by a syndicate headed by J. A. Truit from the Central Y. M. C. A. as site for a large office structure.

The transaction was handled by the Mercantile Trust Co., with which the corner only recently had been listed, and which has a notable record of transactions of this character.

The site, having a frontage on Grand of 103 feet and a depth on Franklin avenue of 169 feet, was formerly occupied by the Central Y. M. C. A. Building, which was destroyed by fire.

The lease was made on a basis of 4 per cent on a valuation of $150,000, a trifle less than $1500 a foot for the Grand boulevard frontage whereas the Y. M. C. A. purchased the site in 1893 for $51,250. The valuation given the site by virtue of this lease is nearly three times the price paid for it by the association 30 years ago.

Negotiations for Sale.

According to Byron W. Moser, president of the Metropolitan Board of the Y. M. C. A., and of the Security National Bank Savings and Trust Co., negotiations are pending involving the sale of the site at an even higher valuation than that established by the lease, which will be secured by the proposed building. With the lease made on a 6 per cent basis, providing for an annual net rental of $9000, exclusive of taxes, etc., the fee to the property will be attractive as both an investment and a speculation, since holdings of this character ordinarily are disposed of on a 4 per cent basis.

The building will be 10 stories in height and will cost $1,500,000 for construction alone. The upper floors will be arranged for offices, while the first floor will be divided for stores. It will be known as the Grand Franklin Bank.

The names of the other members of the building syndicate were not disclosed. The Albert G. Blanke Realty Co. represented Truit in the transaction.

The proceeds of the sale of the site will be applied toward the erection of a Y. M. C. A. building in the central business district, for which $500,000 was bequeathed by the late George Warren Brown. This has been supplemented by subscriptions aggregating $100,000 from other interested persons. Mr. Brown's bequest specified that the building should be erected in this part of the city.

Several sites are being discussed for this project, which will be on a much larger and more elaborate scale than the Association's former building at Grand and Franklin.

A campaign will shortly be launched for additional subscriptions to the building fund of which the present is only a nucleus of that which will be required for the proposed structure, according to Moser.

Three years ago the Y. M. C. A. disposed of the northwest corner of Eleventh and Locust street, which it purchased in 1892. A large profit also was realized in this instance, it was stated, but the exact figures were not available yesterday. The association recently sold through the Hemmelman-Spackler Real Estate Company the northwest corner of Ninth and Carr streets for $40,000.

Other Sales.

The Cornet & Zeibig Trust announces the sale to Harold H. Horwitz of the northeast corner of Franklin avenue and Twentieth street of a three-story building of four stores and eight flats. The lot is 46x150 feet. The grantor was Clara I. Gerhart.

Another sale through the Cornet & Zeibig Trust was that by which Kalman Starr acquired the northwest corner of 20th and Biddle streets, improved with five stores and five flats and having a frontage of 75 feet on Biddle street. The seller was Dr. A. Simon, who purchased the property seven months ago through this agency and who has realized a substantial profit through the resale.

Traffic conditions in St. Louis in the office building district are such that the management of the Boatmen's Bank Building finds it necessary to have "no parking" signs installed so that people coming to the building can reach the sidewalk from automobiles, in safety. In this connection a doorman in uniform is in charge at the entrance to the building, charged with keeping the space open, assisting persons out of their cars and in the evening telephoning to the offices of tenants as automobiles arrive to take them home.

The evening service relieves the double parking of cars on Broadway at the building entrance, the outer tier usually unoccupied while chauffeurs or members of families go to the offices of the tenants to advise them of their arrival.

SINCE 1885 WENZLICK REALTORS

OWN YOUR OWN APARTMENT OR FLAT

Buy an apartment and the landlord's profit can be yours, for he has to use your rent money to pay off mortgages and up-keep. $5000 down means an equity in a good three or six-family apartment build-ing; live in one apartment yourself at less rent than you are now paying, plus living in your own home. The following example shows the folly of rent receipts: Pay rent $600 per month for five years and you will have paid out $3500 with nothing to show for it. Pay it to yourself and own your own apartment. Let your rent pay it out after your first payment. Be independent. It is the first step to your own success. We will find you just what you want, bunga-low, flat or apartment at the right price. We respectfully ask you to call on us and we will talk over your wants. Oklahoma

The sale of equities in approximately 10,000 acres of Oklahoma Indian lands offers an exceptional opportunity to you. These lands are classified as grazing, timber and agricultural, located in six different counties in Southeastern Oklahoma, near market towns, railroads, schools, churches and oil pipe lines, and are available in 10, 20, 40 and 80 acre tracts at low prices, and on easy terms. The most of these tracts contain sufficient timber to pay the larger portion of the purchase price and, in addition, are valuable for the raising of livestock, fruits, poultry and dairying, as well as being located in America's greatest oil, timber, fruit and livestock belt. Oil, gas, timber and mineral rights go with the land. STRESEMAN REPLIES TO CRITICS OF NEW GERMAN CABINET

Tells Reichstag That Stinnes Had No Part in Formation of Ministry — Answers Communists.

Nationalist Coup Narrowly Averted When Conservatives Get Word of Plot to Win Over Garrisons.

By ARNO DOSCH FLEUROT,
Berlin Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
(Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Publishing Co., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, Oct. 6. — Chancellor Stresemann has thrown his great bulk in the way of violent nationalist Government which could easily overthrow the republic and make Germany a monarchy.

Worn out by his day-and-night struggle to get another coalition Government, Stresemann pulled himself together this afternoon and told the Reichstag he had a Cabinet. He made a splendid address, cutting the cat-calls of the communists short with short retorts, ignoring the sarcastic chuckles of industrialists in his own party and storming the Reichstag into silent wonder.

Strained and worn ne looked, but there was thunder in his voice, and the brilliant turns of his speech won for him the momentary safety which always surrounds successful orators. By Monday, when the opposition will have its chance to tear him to pieces, he will have had time to consolidate his power, however fleeting.

When Stresemann first appeared in the Reichstag today Defense Minister Gessler was the only member of the Cabinet present. While the curious delegates watched the seats of the Cabinet members one by one were filled Stresemann looked around as the last man, Luther, took the Finance Minister's chair. Then he arose. A shout burst from the communists, "Stinnes' dummy," "Stinnes representtaive!"

"For the information of those who are interrupting me," Stresemann replied, "Stinnes had nothing to do with forming the Cabinet."

The new Cabinet is practically the old coalition revived, excenting that Luther, Essen's courageou Mayor, has taken Hilferding's place as Finance Minister, and Koeth, Centralist, has superseded Von Raumer as Minister of Economy. Luther alone manifests such strength of personality as Stresemann sought, but the Chancellor defended his selections before the Reichstag.

Stresemann's address showed a willingness to compromise with the Nationalists and make short work of the communists.

The Industrialists are divided over Stresemann. The heavy industry wing under Stinnes' leadership has become sharply reactionary and allied with the monarchists, will plot to take over the Government when the new Cabinet falls.

The change won't come immediately but it must come soon, or the Nationalist bands—Black Reichswehr—won't keep quiet. The correspondent learns on excellent authority that a "putsch" was narrowly averted by the hope of establishing a non-Socialist nationalist directorate.

Plans for a "putsch" are all laid One hundred and twenty-five thousand armed men are trying to win over the Reichswehr, in garrisons about Berlin. A "putsch" was planned for last Sunday night. Conservative Nationalists got word of the plot, however. They convinced the leaders they could oust the Socialists and get power legally. The leaders agreed to call off their move.

France Unwilling to Suggest New Reparations Proposal.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—The reaction of the Poincare Government to Lord Curzon's speech before the British empire conference, when he recapitulated his well known indictment of the French policy, is precise and final. Under no circumstances will the French Government accept Curzon's invitation to suggest a new reparations proposal.

Negotiations between England and France can be resumed only when Berlin comes forward with proposals of such a nature that France is willing to discuss them with England.

Louis Dubois, who was chairman of the Reparations Commission when the famous agreement of May, 1921, was signed, says Curzon is guilty of a gross travesty on the truth when he asserts that no sertous-minded man took the sum then fixed as anything but theoretical. The commission spent not less than 80 hours, at 23 sittings, to determine the final figure.

Stresemann Said to Forecast Request for Sweeping Cabinet Powers.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Chancellor Stresemann in his speech before the German Reichstag today said, according to the Berlin correspondent of the Central News, that the Reichstag would be asked to renounce its rights for a long time and grant powers to the Cabinet much greater than had ever before been given to a Cabinet anywhere.

Bavarian Dictator Denies That He Wants Monarchy Restored.

By the Associated Press.

MUNICH, Oct. 6.—Dr. von Kahr, the Bavarian military dictator, today said that the reports that he favored restoration of the monarchy were without foundation. He was not a separatist, he said, but stood for the preservation of a strong state authority in the interests of the entire republic.

Negotiations With Railway Workers in Ruhr Resumed.

DUESSELDORF, Oct. 6.—Negotiations have been resumed between representatives of the German railway workers and the Franco-Belgian occupation regime for the return of the Germans to work. There is hope in French circles that something definite will result from the talks now in progress. The German workers have been given to understand that the oath which has been administered to those already at work has no political significance.

BISHOP SAYS METHODISM HAS OPPORTUNITY TO SAVE RUSSIA

Would Have It Co-operate With Russian Church in Educational Work.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Bishop Edgar Blake of the Paris area of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in an address today condemned the methods of the Russian soviet government, but declared that Methodism had a great opportunity to save Russia.

"The Bishop made it clear that he never had indorsed the soviets, and said that his attitude after attending the all-Russian church conference at Moscow had been misinterpreted. Instead of having indorsed the bolsheviks, he said, he condemned their methods which he believed doomed te soviet to failure.

The great opportunity to save Russia for Methodism, he said, lies in co-operation with the Russian Church in its educational work, primarily to help it maintain its schools for training priests.

PIONEER PEACE OFFICER DIES

Col. Charles L. Stowe Did Many Brave Deeds, Unarmed.

By the Associated Press.

SHERMAN, Tex., Oct. 6.—The sudden death of Col. Charles L. Stowe has ended the career of a pioneer Oklahoma and Texas peace officer and town builder. As United States Marshal in the Indian Territory he gained fame as a fearless officer, much of his work being lone when he was unarmed.

Friends recalled how he talked prisoners in the jail at Muskogee out of their intention to escape after they had shot one officer. He went into them without weapons and talked them into changing their plans. At another time, unarmed, he took a negro who had stabbed an officer, through a threatening mob, conversing with the mob members as he walked among them with his prisoner.

OBJECTS TO POLITICAL QUARRELS IN UNIONS

Speaker at Labor Convention Says Dissension Has Cost Million Members.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 6.—Protest against playing factions of the labor movement against each other was made in an address at the convention of the American Federation of Labor today by Max S. Hays of Cleveland. When he declared that 1,000,000 had withdrawn from organized labor on account of dissensions, he was called to order by President Gompers, who asked whether he was still discussing the matter on which he had risen to talk—"The Union Label."

"I believe that anything that contributes to unity in the labor movement is conducive to our purpose," said Hays.

When Hays digressed from his remarks on the union label, he declared he had something to say which might offend the "ultra conservatives" here.

"In Cleveland," he said, "we do not draw the line between the radicals, the conservatives and all the intermediate degrees and distinction of belief that are encouraged by those who would split the labor movement.

"We refuse to engage in controversy over political and social views. We do not stigmatize anyone who has the courage to advocate an original thought as a radical or a bolshevist.

"We do not even inquire whether a member belongs to the Ku Klux Klan, though I doubt that any are members of that organization.

"Unless the soft pedal is put on some of the things that are going some of the rounds of the press it is not going to help the union movement."

Hays' address followed a report by John H. Manning, chairman of the Labels Committee, who recommended that greater attention be paid to the union label in the fight against the open shop.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, denounced those elements in union labor which attempt to set aside union rules and traditions.

"Our union has long stood for the validity of contracts and has insisted upon its members carrying out its obligations, yet from time to time teachers of false philosophies have succeeded in inducing many of our people to desert these principles and follow false gods," he said.

Since the adoption by the convention of a resolution favoring organization of the workers in textile mills of the South, delegates of the United Textile Workers of America have been in conference with national and international officers of the federation and have been assured moral and financial support in the work, according to T. F. McMahon of Providence, R. I.

"There are 400,000 workers in Southern textile mills, in the States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee and Alabama, centering principally in the Carolinas," said McMahon. "We propose at once to send men and women workers into the Southern States in this campaign for organization."

GIRL EXPLAINS HER ARREST

Ouida Hill Says She Wanted Jail Experience for Movie Role.

Miss Ouida Hill, 16 years old, who recently spent three days in charge of the matron of the Los Angeles jail, after presenting a non-negotiable check at a department store, because, Los Angeles reports said, she had been reduced to want when her dreams of a motion picture career failed, is in St. Louis visiting her mother and explaining to friends her arrest.

Miss Hill says that, instead of finding a cold reception in the motion picture world, she has been playing steadily for more than a year. She gave the check with the intention of being thrown in jail because she wanted that experience, she explains, as she hopes to obtain a part in a forthcoming picture which is centered around such action. She was released when the articles purchased with the check were returned. Her mother, Mrs. R. B. Laughlin, 4432 Washington boulevard, said Miss Hill would likely resume her residence with relatives in Los Angeles as soon as work was started on the picture.

It is stated that if the demonstration is successful, other classes will be organized, in this way reaching ten or twelve schools during the year.

TELLS OF GLYNN'S AID IN IRISH SETTLEMENT

Lloyd George Says Former New York Governor Played Leading Part.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 6.—The part which Martin H. Glynn, former Governor of New York, played in the settlement of the feud between England and Ireland, was told by David Lloyd George in addressing a crowd from the railroad station balcony upon his reception here today. Glynn introduced Lloyd George when the visitor's train made a brief stop in this city, Glynn's home. Lloyd George was on his way to Montreal.

"I have always fought the cause of the people from whom I sprang," said Lloyd George. "Gov. Glynn and I, in a dingy room in London, the office of the Prime Minister, had most unusual conferences. He told me very frankly how the Irish people viewed the feud of centuries and what they desired in the way of liberty; how the American people felt on the subject; and I told him, equally frankly, what I believed to be the purpose of Great Britain.

"At the end of those interviews he took my views to the Irish leaders and he brought their hopes and aspirations, clarified, to me. Out of this exchange sprung the new Ireland, the Irish Free State.

"The people of Albany should feel highly honored because no man did more to bring about a settlement of the Irish question; no man did more to end the feud which had existed for 700 years, than your distinguished fellow citizen."

Before leaving New York today Lloyd George made the following statement:

"The stupendous welcome I received assures me that you are satisfied to have me come back, and I in turn am satisfied that I will have a good time. The occasion will stand out as one of the most enjoyable and one of the most touching of my life."

Tumultuous Reception for Lloyd George at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Oct. 6. — Lloyd George, war-time Prime Minister of Great Britain, received a tumultuous reception on his arrival here tonight.

NEGRO ARRESTED HOLDING UP MAN ON SARAH STREET

Two Robbers Get $308, Manager of Piggly Wiggly Store Reports.

Leonard Baker, 20 years old, a negro, was arrested when holding up Gus Fick of 1303 South Compton avenue, on Sarah street between Papin street and Chouteau avenue, last night. Fick lost a check for $20.80 and $11 in cash. The check and a dollar bill were found on Baker. A second negro escaped.

Walter S. Jones, manager of a Piggly Wiggly store at 5200 Page avenue, reported that about 7 p. m., as he was closing the store, two young men entered and, at the point of revolvers, forced him to open the safe and give them $308.34, the day's receipts. They then ran from the store.

Robert Schwidde, 22, of 3203 Montgomery street, and a young woman were held up by three armed men and robbed of $5 and a watch when sitting in his automobile, parked on Government drive, near Art Hill in Forest Park.

Silas Bentrup of 3727 North Eleventh street reported that as he was passing Broadway and Branch street three men grappled him, taking $39. None of the men was armed.

MRS. WEBB'S PHYSICIAN ATTACKS AUTHORITIES

Dr. W. J. Meyer Declares "Truth Will Be Brought Out in Spite of Efforts to Conceal It."

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Despite the fact that the chemical analysis of the organs of Mrs. Charles Webb did not reveal enough poison to have caused her death, Dr. William J. Meyer, her attending physician, today reiterated his suspicions and made another attack on the Westchester County authorities.

He said he expected the case would be whitewashed by the officials, but declared it would be fought "elsewhere" than in White Plains and, he said, the truth would be brought out in spite of efforts to conceal it. He gave the impression that he referred to the Surrogate's court here, where the battle over Mrs. Webb's estate will be waged.

Former Judge Robert S. Johnstone, whose wife was with Dr. Meyer at Mrs. Webb's deathbed in the Westchester Biltmore Country Club in Rye, said:

"We are perfectly convinced the grand jury proceedings will not result in any indictment. In fact, we are already making plans that contemplate such a result. The proceedings in Westchester are merely the slight splutterings that precede the big fireworks. This case will be settled in New York County."

A comprehensive account of the Webb case is printed in the True Life Story section of today's Post-Dispatch.

The contents of the cars weighed 5546 tons, which, with a tare of 2330 tons, made a total weight haul by a single engine of 7946 tons. The great string of cars contained 185,000 bushels of wheat.

Some HELPFUL ideas on BEAUTIFYING your PROPERTY are presented in the SEEDS, PLANTS and TREES for sale offers in the POST-DISPATCH WANT PAGES

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

FLOWERS.—Write to your Congressman, concerning information as to where seeds may be obtained from the Government.

I. C. C.—You no doubt refer to luminous paint, which is prepared in the following manner: 100 parts, by weight, of strontium carbonate; 100 parts, by weight, of sulphur; 0.5 parts, by weight, of potassium chloride; 0.5 parts, by weight, of sodium chloride; 0.4 parts, by weight, of manganese chloride. The materials are heated for three-quarters of an hour to one hour, to about 2372 degrees F. The product gives a violet light.

M. H.—The treatment for tape worm in dogs is as follows: Deprive the dog of food for 24 hours. At night give him a dose of tape worm medicine for dogs, which can be purchased in drug stores, the amount of the dose depending on the size of the dog. It can be mixed with some milk in a small quantity in a saucer. Smear what the dog does not eat on his nose, and he will lick it off; or put the dose in capsules and give in his way. Give a second dose next morning, and three hours after that dose, give the dog castor oil, two to four teaspoonfuls, according to the size of the dog. Repeat the dose. In ten days if the worm has not appeared.

M. W.—For the preservation of milk, shortly after the milk is strained, add to it from 1 per cent to 2 per cent 12-volume solution of hydrogen peroxide, and set it aside for 10 to 12 hours. It thus acquires the property of keeping perfectly sweet and fresh for four or four days, and is far preferable to milk sterilized by heat. Two points are worthy of notice, in the process. The addition of oxygenated water should be made as soon after it is taken from the cow, strained, etc., as possible; the peroxide appears to destroy instantly all anaerobic microbes, but has no effect on the bacillus of tuberculosis. This process is to be especially recommended in the heat of summer, and at all times in the milk of cattle known to be free of tuberculosis.

FAITHFUL READER OF P.-D.—(1) At a formal wedding, the bride's wedding dress may be of any white material, satin, brocade, silk, chiffon or lace. It may be embroidered in pearls, crystals, etc., or it may be as plain as desired, anything in fact that the bride chooses, and made in whatever fashion she fancies. (2) Some brides prefer to remove their left glove by merely pulling it inside out, at the altar. Usually the underseam of the wedding finger of her glove is ripped for about two inches, and she need only pull the tip off to have the ring put on. Or, if the wedding is a small one, she wears no gloves at all.

R. W.—Lace leather is made as follows: Take cow hides averaging from 25 to 30 pounds each; 35 hides will make a carload; soak in wet vat containing 1000 gallons of water, or 25 hides to a soak of 700 gallons. Soak 2 days or more, as required. Change the water every 24 hours. Split and shave flesh; resoak if it is necessary. When thoroughly soft put in limes. Handle and strengthen once a day, for 5 or 6 days. Unhair and wash. Bate in hen manure 90 degrees F. Then work out of drench, wash well and drain 4 or 5 hours. Then process for heat, using 45 pounds vitriol and 600 pounds of salt to 700 gallons of water. In renewing process for second or consecutive packs use 15 pounds vitriol and 200 pounds of salt, always keeping pack constantly in motion during the whole time of tanning. Pack down over night. Use 200 pounds dry leather to each mill in stuffing. For stuffing, use 3 gallons currier's hard grease and 3 gallons American cod oil. Strike out from mill on flesh. Dry slowly. Trim, and board, bright and flesh side together. Stack then ready to crate. The time for soaking the hides may be reduced, by putting the stock into a rapidly revolving reel set in a good flow of water, so that the dirty water washes over and runs off. After 10 hours in the soak, put the stock into a drum, and keep it tumbling 2 hours before the limes. Liming of the hair is no object, softer leather is obtainable by using 35 pounds sulphide of sodium with 80 pounds of lime. Then, when the stock comes from the limes, the hair is dissolved and immediately washes off, and saves the labor of unhairing and caring for the hair, which in some cases does not pay.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

L. S.—Please write again, stating all the facts of the matter about which you desire advice.

ANXIOUS.—If the husband refuses to support his wife, he cannot prevent her from working, and cannot take the child away from her, on that account.

J. W. R. K.—If you paid the premiums on your insurance policy, you can get it back from your wife, on your stating a divorce from her, and you can then change the beneficiary.

SPARK PLUG.—As you are a minor, the company cannot make you pay the bill you owe. If the bill was for necessaries, your bond can be sued for it, but not otherwise.

A. B. F.—If the woman has not been divorced, your associating with her might make trouble for you. You might be prosecuted, or the husband might sue you for damages.

CLARA.—If a woman who obtained a divorce, and did not have her maiden name restored, should again under her maiden name, her second marriage would be legal, and the former husband could not cause any trouble on this account.

E. N. G.—You can change your name by simply adopting a new one, if you wish to do so. If you wish to have it changed by the Circuit Court, so that the change will be a matter of record, consult a lawyer, who will prepare and file your petition for you.

CHARLIE. — In the absence of any agreement to the contrary, you can remove the grape vines, blackberry plants, etc., which you planted at your expense at any time before the expiration of the lease, provided that you leave the premises in as good condition as when you received them.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

J. J. L.—You can hardly expect to treat sciatica with any success. This condition is too commonly due to self treatment, and needs the care of a physician.

VICTIM.—If 5 examinations over a period of a year and a half show negative we think you can safely conclude that the disease has been eradicated, and we would think that marriage could be safely contemplated.

X. Y. Z.—The following mixture should benefit you: Tincture of nux vomica, ½ ounce; tincture of gentian, 2 ounces; elixir lactopeptine, 3 ounces; mix, and shake. Dose, 1 ounce; mix, and shake. Dose, 1 or 2 teaspoonfuls in water 3 times daily, between meals.

IGNORANCE.—Successful treatment of pin worms requires perseverance and internal and external remedies. We advise taking a powder or capsule at night and morning, each containing 1 grain of santonin and 1 grain of calomel until the bowels are freely moved. The santonin may cause the vision and the urine to be yellow, which is without significance. At night, elevate the hips on a pillow and with a small syringe, inject 4 ounces of lime water or salt water, the injection to be retained. Scrupulous cleanliness of the hands and the region of the rectum must be maintained, using a germicidal soap in such washings.

USED CARS BARGAINS

We say bargains, because we are almost giving these cars away. This week we must sell at least 50 cars. The demand for closed new Studebaker cars is so heavy that we are forced to do a lot of trading. We can give better bargains now in Used Cars when we are trading on closed cars than we can give in the Spring of the year when we are trading on open cars for reasons better known to ourselves. Don't ask why? Just come and get a bargain now. We have all popular makes to select from, as follows:

1922 Hudson Coupe.
1922 Buick Sedan.
1921 Stearns-Knight Coupe.
1923 Hupp Coupe.
1922 Studebaker Special.
1922 Studebaker Big Six.
1921 Studebaker Big 6.
1921 Studebaker Special Touring.
1920 Reo Roadster.

1922 Studebaker Special Coupe.
1920 Dodge Sedan. 4 new tires.
1921 Cleveland Touring.
1919 Buick Roadster.
1921 Studebaker Coupe.

And many others. All cars are put in the best of condition and paint. The assortment is good. We should be able to please you. No charge if we don't. Perhaps you would like to trade your open car for one of these closed cars. That's all right—Come and see the line this week. Terms that you can meet.

Cadillac

There is no risk in purchasing an exchange car from us. It is our policy and practice to be fair and aboveboard. The value of the car is impartially fixed by appraisal—the sale price based on actual worth. IMPORTANT TO USED CAR PURCHASERS.

Used Cars at Cost—Short Talk No. 2.

The only used cars we have to sell are ones we trade in on new Nash cars, consequently we do not look for a profit on used cars, having already made our profit on the new car sale. We go carefully over all the used cars we take in, very often overhauling and repainting these cars and every used car we have is a wonderful value and a bargain. You will find that we are always $25 to $100 cheaper than the house that is forced to make their profits from the sale of used cars. Be wise and when in the market for a good used Ford car, go to an authorized Ford dealer. Here are a few examples of what we have to offer you:
1922 sedan, overhauled, new tires.....$315
1921 sedan, very fine condition.....205
1919 sedan, wonderful value.....175
1921 coupe, good as new.....375
1921 coupe; overhauled, repainted.....315
1919 coupe, very fine value.....200
1922 touring, one-man top.....250
1921 touring, overhauled.....295
1921 runabout, starter and dem.....180

RUSSIAN DANCER—From a Sketch by Bakst

Weird Tales This Fine Old Violin Might Tell

Albert Spalding paid $22,000 for his Guarnerius, made in a dungeon in 1735 and played by the great Paganini after it had been owned by the sanguinary family di Medici and the profligate Louis XV—La Pompadour and du Barry heard its melodies, and it soothed the souls of aristocrats headed for the guillotine :: :: :: ::

Albert Spalding with his Guarnerius violin.

By PROSPER BURANELLI.

THERE is a red, dusky violin which thousands of people across the country see and hear each year. It is an instrument to gladden the eyes, slender, compact and carved with a singular boldness and grace. It has a tone of sweetness and strength, and when it sings there seems to rise in mellow, lingering sound the haunting strangeness of its own history, as if the carven, tuneful box were crying out in memory of the mad, fantastic things it had witnessed.

This fiddle could tell you a story, could recount tragic, fearful hands that have played on it, could talk of immeasurable crimes, romances, follies and disasters of the owners to whom it has passed in gaudy succession. It is the celebrated "Joseph Guarnerius," built in 1735, and now the property of Albert Spalding, who plays upon it at his recitals.

A famous violin is likely to have bizarre episodes lying around it. Connoisseurs of the odd will rate the Spalding Guarnerius the most fascinating in moody associations.

Joseph Guarnerius, surnamed "del Gesu," stands haloed with legend. Nephew of the Guarnerius who, together with Stradivarius, studied violin making under Nicolo Amati, he ranks as one of the most august masters of the Cremona school. Melodramatic tales have come down through the years about him. It is told that he was a wild, riotous fellow, given to drink and violence, whose escapades got him into a dungeon. There in years of darkness and solitude his spirit had turned with longing to the art of violin making that he had learned from his father and uncle. His jailer had a beautiful daughter, who saw the melancholy young prisoner and was caught with a flame. He told her of the beautiful violins he could make and she smuggled into his cell tools and wood and glue from the workshop of his family. Thus angeled, he built violin upon violin during the long, sad time.

Critical historians are very skeptical of these romances, but people who love to dream of fine tales may hear, when Albert Spalding plays upon his Guarnerius, a visionary strain as of far-off memory, and may say to themselves that the ancient fiddle is telling how it was built in a dungeon and how its prisoner master took it under his chin and serenaded the sweet daughter of his jailer.

The violin passed into the possession of the di Medicis. That family, renowned during centuries for its greatness, splendor and evil, now was in the ultimate depth of decay. From one generation to another it had reigned magnificent in genius and crimes, but the last of the Medici was enthroned at Florence, the Duke Gian Gastone. He had succeeded his father, a sanguinary tyrant, and was himself enfeebled by mad and long-continued debaucheries. He had not enough will or wit to rule, and passed his days in abandoned sloth, lying in bed while harlequin players and musicians performed before him.

Did the Spalding Guarnerius have its part at these grotesque ceremonies, a troupe of painted buffoons frolicking in the great ducal bedroom while aside a pale musician raised the elegiac sound of violin music?, What perfidies and conspiracies did it witness, what deeds of blood and poison, what fantastic amours?

A French violin collector of the day bought the Guarnerius and sold it to King Louis XV of France, that monarch abandoned to pleasure, whose loves were the scandal of the world. The Marchioness La Pompadour flung Europe into a war at her whim, while the violin sounded in the palace. Du Barry harkened to its melodies as she wove the spells of her beauty to smart the sense of the sated King. Elegant, wanton, heedless, Versailles hurried toward catastrophe. The violin reposed in its case or trembled with honeyed notes at the fetes of the palace.

It was next owned by the family of the Marechal de Saxe, victor of Fontenoy and illegitimate son of Augustus II of Saxony, the family from which later came George Sand, the beloved of Lisst, Chopin and Alfred de Musset, a lady famous in the making of books and of love. Col. Lemaitre bought it and sold it to the Vicomte d'Armaille. The Vicomte held it until the French Revolution. Death and turmoil were loose now. Heads fell into the basket in ghastly succession and the best blood of France drained off in a ditch from the guillotine. The great-voiced Guarnerius was in the possession of proscribed aristocrats.

Chevaliers and their high ladies gathered in the salon of a chateau, pale, proud, whispering. When would the foul mob come storming to cart them away to death? What chance had this one or that to escape to the frontier? A musician brought forth the Guarnerius and sang its elegies to people haunted with death—beautiful heads insecure upon beautiful shoulders. Did its fragile boards, fashioned by the old Italian, shudder and mourn when these fair listeners went to the doom of the down-flashing knife?

Harassed, fleeing, the Vicomte d'Armaille sold the violin to a wealthy Englishman. After the Revolution the descendants of the former owner bought it back, and once more it sounded in the salons of the Parisian elite, trilling and serenading during the elegant nights of the Restoration.

Paganini was storming the artistic heights. All over Europe this strange, inspired figure was arousing tumults with his prodigies of violin playing. No man had ever evoked such raptures of sound from bowed strings. In Paris Paganini played on the Guarnerius and was so moved with its broad, dulcet tone that he gave a succession of remarkable public performances on it. It was this divinity of violin playing who set a new fashion in violins. Before him all favor had been given to the instruments of Amati and Stradivarius, with their small, extremely sweet voices. Paganini arose as a protagonist for the great majestic note of the Joseph Guarnerius type, and with the magic of his instrumentalism the name of Guarnerius arose to a place beside that of Stradivarius. The value of the Guarnerius that had come down from the di Medici was trebled.

What might not this ancient fiddle be able to tell of the legendary maestro who brought it to its full glory? Paganini is a figure shrouded with clouds. He was so prodigious in his day that insane accounts of him have come down to us. What especial devices had his weird, long-fingered hand, which was described as a great spider scampering over the finger board? Had he tricks of fiddling that he taught to no one and took to the grave with him?

Veteran traveler declares that French capital is the most overrated city in the world, from pleasure seeker's standpoint—The most popular dancers and jazz bands at expensive resorts are from New York's east side—As for the wicked night life, he says a candy pull in Kansas City is much naughtier than anything which Montmartre has to offer :: :: :: ::

"The 'bunk' about artists' balls in Paris is the same as about similar functions in Greenwich Village. The first American I saw at the Quatre Arts ball was a man who used to print most of the programs in New York. He was only one of the hundred or more 'American art artists' who were in evidence. . . . I recognized dozens of New York music publishers, cloak and suit buyers, bootleggers and movie magnates in the throng."

(Mr. Kitchen has just returned from a European trip and as usual he has brought back a highly interesting series of articles dealing with unfamiliar phases of foreign life. This keen observer and writer does not profess to be able to settle the economic or social troubles of Europe, but he has the faculty of digging up human interest stories of the people and their doings across the sea. The following article exposes the humbuggery of most of the so-called gayety of "gay Paris.")

By KARL K. KITCHEN.

THE most distinguished historian in Europe, Guglielmo Ferrero, told me the dance craze on the Continent was the inevitable relaxation after a period of nervous strain and tension. He said dancing was just as popular in Paris at the time of the Directoire as a relaxation after the horrors of the guillotine as it is today. And he cited the revived interest in terpsichore after the Napoleonic wars and after the Franco-Prussian conflict.

But after paying the checks at the leading dancing establishments in Paris this summer—including the Quatre Arts ball—I feel justified in remarking that the after-effects of wars are more terrible than the wars themselves.

This is not a slander on Paris or the Parisians. It is merely the truth about the parasites who infest the so-called City of Pleasure.

For the naughty, wicked night life of the French capital has more in common with the east side of New York than it has with the French people who live along the Seine.

The most popular dancers at the most exclusive places—exclusive only in the sense of being expensive—are boys and girls from New York's Ghetto. And the most popular bands are jazz organizations of east side youths.

In short, the "gay life" of Paris is the "bunk," as I will show you.

Of course, if you enjoy paying fictitious prices to see such eminent Anglo-Saxons as the Dolly Sisters—who hail from Hungary—perform their old dances to the tunes of a Grand street band, it is all right with me. And if you are willing to part with a wad of francs to watch Harry Pilcer—another so-called "American favorite"—go through his contortions, well and good. It is too much for me—but perhaps my stomach is not strong enough for such "entertainments." Besides, I can see the same thing right here in New York without being short-changed by French menials and jostled by semi-intoxicated, semi-annual buyers for dress establishments.

There is no occasion to list the names of the so-called "American entertainers" who have been appearing this summer. Suffice it to answer the question, "Were they entertaining this summer?" in two words: "Not very."

No, the more I see of Paris—and I have visited it nearly every summer for the last 12 years—the more I am convinced that it is the most overrated city in the world, from the pleasure seeker's standpoint. Of course, if you like a city where there is one price for natives and another for Americans, where practically everything is closed for two hours in the middle of the day when you want to do business, where the taxicab drivers will take you only if they happen to be going the same way, where you are short-changed and cheated by shopkeepers and restaurateurs, and where you, as an American, are openly despised and laughed at, I'll give you Paris. You can take it and like it.

But I'll stick to provincial France, where the natives do not take so much pleasure in their land that there is little or no pleasure left for anyone else.

This doesn't mean that I do not have a good time in Paris. I do, in spite of the fact that I do not like the Parisians. I happen to like some of the things they like—their beautiful parks and buildings, for instance—their art, their cuisine and—ahem—their wines.

But far more objectionable to me than the Parisians, with their absurd belief that their capital is the center of this earth planet, are the so-called artists from the east side and Eastern Europe, who take it upon themselves to represent America over there.

Take an evening at the Quatre Arts ball, for instance, for it is true the real Parisians rarely think of visiting the dance places where "American entertainers" hold forth.

The Quatre Arts ball is considered quite an event in so-called bohemian circles in Paris. It is held but once a year—in June—and only art students, their models and distinguished guests are supposed to be able to attend. I paid 500 francs for a ticket—about 30 berries in real money—and I was assured that it would be a most exclusive affair of its kind.

"A fete at Pompeii" was the idea behind the ball, and I was told to get a Roman costume and to say that I was an art student at somebody's atelier—otherwise I would be refused admittance.

Of course, I should have known better. The "bunk" about artists' balls in Paris is the same as about similar functions at Webster Hall in Greenwich Village. The first American I saw at the affair—which was out of the ordinary only in the costumes, or rather, lack of costumes, of some of the models—was a man who used to print most of the programs in New York. He was only one of the hundreds or more "American art artists" who were in evidence, and the two belles of the ball were the Dolly Sisters, Yancsi, and Rosizka, from New York via Budapest. In fact, they attracted more attention than Cecile Sorel, the foremost actress on the French stage. I recognized dozens of New York music publishers, cloak and suit buyers, bootleggers and movie magnates in the throng. And I said to myself, "So, if this is Paris, give me almost any place else." For when you are 3000 miles away from home you don't care about having a Broadway cabaret gathering dumped

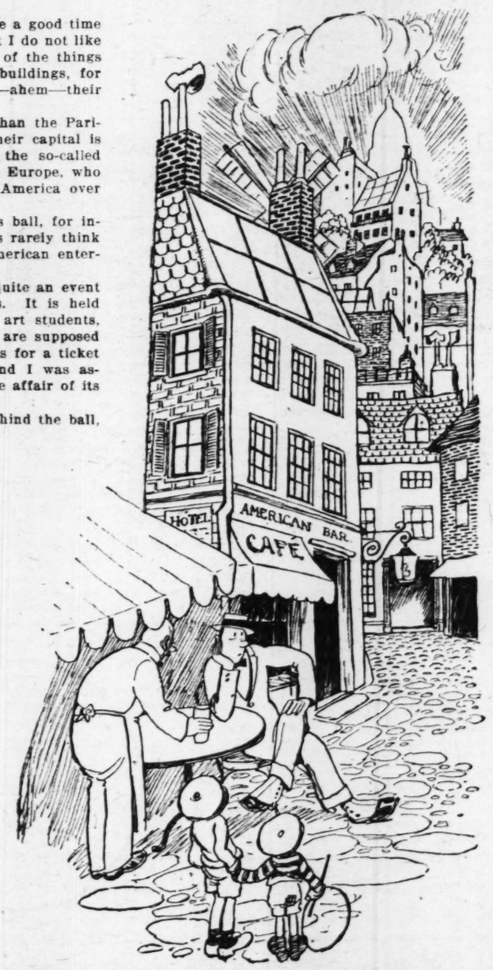
"The taxicab drivers will take you only if they happen to be going the same way."



"With a more or less intimate acquaintance with the other world capitals, I still refuse to be impressed by what Paris has to offer in the way of entertainment."

With a "Scientific" Detective at Work

How delicate instruments and chemical processes were used in determining guilt or innocence of suspects—The young man who was shown to be guiltless of having shot his uncle—Corroboration of a confession in the killing of two police officers—The investigation of a murder in Arizona which resulted in life sentence for a crafty Mexican :: :: ::

(This interesting article by Norman G. Meade explains how the resources of the laboratory, including microscope, measuring devices and chemicals, are used in solving murder mysteries. Most people know, in a vague way, that there are "scientific" detectives. Here the actual work and methods of such investigators are described. The article appears in the October issue of The Scientific American.)

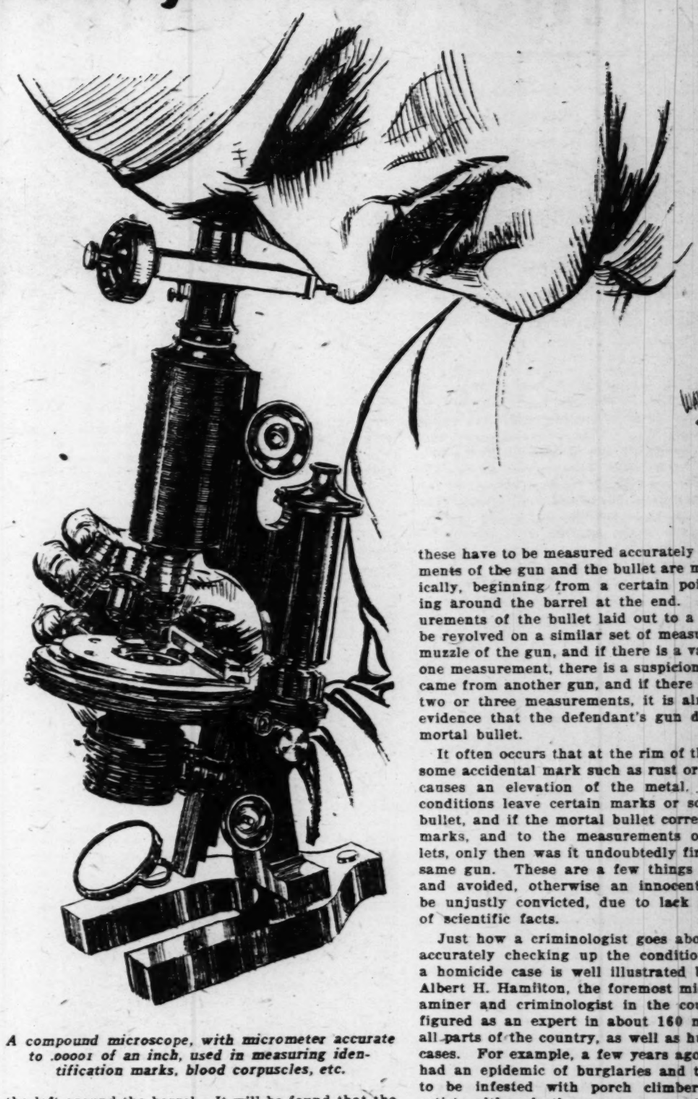
By NORMAN G. MEADE.

FREQUENTLY a homicide case rests primarily upon the question: "Was the mortal bullet fired from the defendant's gun?" For many years, in a large number of cases, conviction after conviction has occurred because the methods used to answer this question, accepted by prosecuting attorneys, the court and the jury as sufficient and convincing, have been faulty. The defendant's attorney has been prevented by lack of funds or lack of knowledge from adequately examining the possibility of error.

There is a certain rigid scientific procedure which should be applied in all cases involving the question whether the mortal bullet passed through the defendant's gun. All identifying marks must be observed and accurate measurements made that show the caliber of the gun and the bullet, the manufacture and the style of weapon through which the bullet was fired, bearing constantly in mind that these identifying marks cannot identify individual guns that fired fatal bullets. Serious errors have been made in years gone by, through belief that identification marks that simply indicate the caliber and the manufacture point actually to the particular gun of the defendant.

One of the greatest mistakes in the past has been the assumption that a rust spot or corrosion, either in a groove or on a land, in the barrel and remote from the muzzle, would mark a bullet so that it would be recognized as a mark of identification on this particular weapon. The marking of the bullet by pitting or corrosion within the barrel is of practically no value in determining the gun that fired it. Hundreds of experiments have been made by firing bullets through new guns from the factory and the bullets have been found to be scored as much as in the case of guns with rusty or pitted barrels. When five guns are selected, four of which are new and one old and rusted, and the firing test is made, it is impossible to distinguish between bullets.

Properly, the first question is whether the bullet is used in revolvers, pistols or rifles. It is then possible to determine the make of the gun, pistol or revolver as the case may be. The first marks of identification are useful simply as a preliminary to the next problem. The exact width of a land and a groove has been determined by proper and exact methods, but the next step is to measure all of them consecutively at the muzzle end from the right to the left around the barrel. It will be found that the grooves and the lands vary measurably in width, due to unavoidable inaccuracies in the manufacturing process.



A compound microscope, with micrometer accurate to .00001 of an inch, used in measuring identification marks, blood corpuscles, etc.

The first thing, therefore, is to determine whether the mortal bullet was fired from the defendant's gun and if the marks were made by the rifling at the muzzle of his gun. The measurements around the muzzle of the gun showing the width of the lands and the grooves will correspond to the marks on the bullet if it was fired from that gun. The final marking of the bullet comes from the muzzle of the gun and any marks or measurements in the center of the barrel or at the breech are of no consequence in the test. Near the base of the bullet, which is last to leave the muzzle, will be found the markings corresponding to the gun from which it was fired, and these have to be measured accurately also. Measurements of the gun and the bullet are made microscopically, beginning from a certain point and following around the barrel at the end. A set of measurements of the bullet laid out to a large scale can be revolved on a similar set of measurements of the muzzle of the gun, and if there is a variation of even one measurement, there is a suspicion that the bullet came from another gun, and if there is a varation of two or three measurements, it is almost conclusive evidence that the defendant's gun did not fire the mortal bullet.

It often occurs that at the rim of the bore there is some accidental mark such as rust or a bruise which causes an elevation of the metal. These muzzle conditions leave certain marks or scratches on the bullet, and if the mortal bullet corresponds to these marks, and to the measurements of the test bullets, only then was it undoubtedly fired through the same gun. These are a few things to be observed and avoided, otherwise an innocent person might be unjustly convicted, due to lack of appreciation of scientific facts.

Just how a criminologist goes about his work of accurately checking up the conditions surrounding a homicide case is well illustrated by the work of Albert H. Hamilton, the foremost microchemical examiner and criminologist in the country, who has figured as an expert in about 160 murder cases in all parts of the country, as well as hundreds of civil cases. For example, a few years ago Elmira, N. Y., had an epidemic of burglaries and the city seemed to be infested with porch climbers and keyhole artists although there was an excellent police department. The Chief of Police and the Chief of Detectives broke in upon two suspects in the room of the latter and were killed in the resulting gun fight. One officer had been shot once and the other twice. A search of the neighborhood was made and a man found hiding in a cellar stairway. His leg was fractured, and his .38-caliber revolver contained two unexploded and three exploded shells. Identified as one of the occupants of the murder room, he was subjected by the detective bureau to the third degree, which resulted in his giving his version of what transpired from the time the officers entered until his capture. The prisoner told who carried the gun and did the shooting, which officer was shot first, the order of the shots and why the officers were unable to draw their own guns. This confession was of no value without corroboration, and the detectives waited for Hamilton's report of his findings.

In preparation for a microscopic deductive examination of the room, Hamilton supplied himself with a special microscope, measuring devices, chemicals, drafting instruments, chemical blood reagents and rubber gloves. From immediately inside of the door, he made his first general survey of every blood spot wherever located upon the floor, walls or furnishings, and carefully calculated where each wound in the human body must be located to spatter the blood where found. He then reversed this preliminary process and traced the steps from where the bodies were first wounded to where the large spots showed that they finally rested.

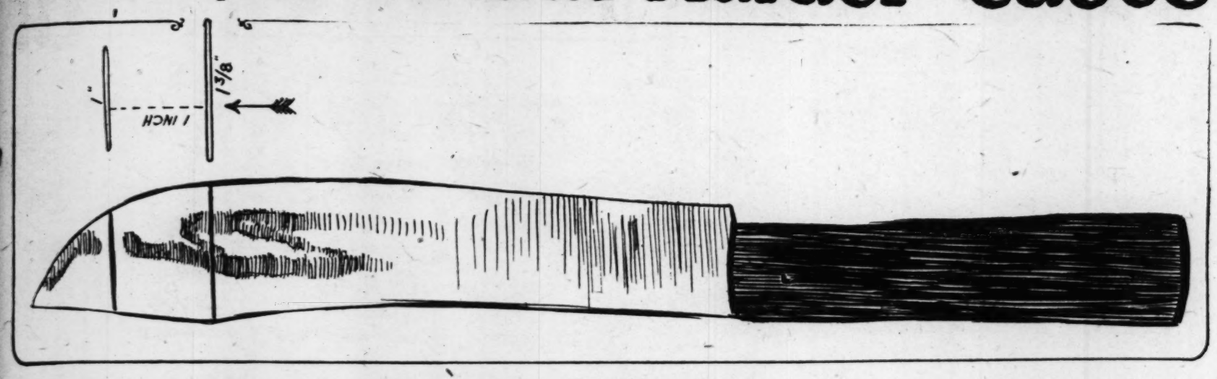
Work on Actual Murder Cases



With this knife a man had stabbed his slayer. The Mexican suspected of the murder bore parallel scars in his thigh indicating that a knife entered his flesh at one place, and that the point came out at another place. The size of the scars, and their distance apart, corresponded exactly with the dimensions of blood-stained knife found in murdered man's hut. The suspect was tried, and given a life sentence.

It was determined that the first shot was fired when the officers were just inside of the door, but so far there was nothing to show the order in which the shots had been fired, or which had been fired first. The three bullets removed from the bodies of the slain officers at the autopsy were examined by Hamilton and found to be of three different makes. Examination of the rear of the cylinder of the mortal gun showed that the first and second cartridges exploded had contained the bullets found in the Chief of Detectives, and the third and last bullet had entered the body of the Chief of Police. The first bullet wounded but did not kill the Chief of Detectives. The Chief of Police had on a derby hat, and his head was held down, either by himself or the burglar who was not shooting. The fatal shot went through the top of his head into the brain and the officer fell, as shown by the large blood hemorrhage. In the pocket of the captured burglar there were a number of .38-caliber cartridges of two different makes which corresponded in age and appearance to those found in the revolver. When Hamilton's work was completed, his report was submitted to the detective department and showed a startling corroboration of the story of the prisoner, of which he had remained in ignorance. It had checked up events in the room so accurately that the prisoner was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Cases frequently occur where suspicion points to a person as guilty of murder where, in reality, the slain person was killed by a self-inflicted wound. Certain definite steps are taken to prove such conditions, and may be well illustrated by a suicide case a short time ago.

In a small village in Eastern New York, where the principal industry is the manufacture of cotton and woolen goods, there lived a young man and his wife, to whom we will give the name of Brown. Living with the young couple was an aged uncle of Mrs. Brown, feeble and in poor health. He had no occupation, but through thrift in his earlier days had accumulated some money, which was deposited in a local bank. Mr. and Mrs. Brown were employed in the mills. The uncle contributed a small sum at stated intervals toward his support and was cared for tenderly by the young people.

One morning the uncle was reported as having been found shot, by Brown; and Brown was reported by the neighbors as having acted suspiciously immediately before the discovery. The bullet had entered the head, leaving a black mark; the revolver was found several feet from the victim's right hand. Brown explained his "suspicious actions" by stating that when in the hall he heard a shot within the house which frightened him and he came out, but thought of the uncle and returned to find him dead. The body was turned over to an undertaker by the Coroner, with instructions that it should be carefully preserved without washing or an application to any part of the body. Investigation of the financial condition of the young couple and the old man showed a plausible motive for murder.

The Coroner, the District Attorney and the County Detective had been long in the service and all were experienced in the handling of suicide and homicide cases. To them the defendant's alleged "consciousness of guilt" meant danger and possible miscarriage of justice; for innocent people often behave in the same manner as guilty ones. They knew that it was possible for a person trained and skilled in the analysis of gunshot wounds and weapons to examine the body, the weapon, the bullet and the conditions surrounding the death of the victim and determine whether murder had been done or death was caused by the victim's own hand.

Therefore, the body was subjected to a critical examination by Hamilton, which was short, for he knew at once where to look and what to expect, no matter whether the victim committed suicide or was murdered. He first examined the wound at the entrance and discovered small grains of black gunpowder in the edge of the hole in the skin. The surface showing the powder smoke deposit was less than one inch in diameter? It is known that in a case of suicide it is possible for a weapon to be found several feet from the hand of a victim who has fallen on the floor. The forefinger, or trigger finger, of the right hand was examined with the microscope and the naked eye, and the mystery was solved.

There was a deposit upon the right side of the forefinger extending about three-fourths of an inch backward and forward from the middle knuckle, made there at the instant the trigger was pulled. The thin opening between the rear of the revolver cylinder permitted the smoke from the discharged cartridge to escape and deposit on the finger. A section of skin was removed from the finger and filed with the Coroner, and as this was certain evidence of suicide, it outweighed all statements of the neighbors as to the so-called consciousness of guilt which to their minds were suspicious actions.

From these cases we turn to the Far West to make a comparison between primitive methods which were employed in a man hunt and the scientific methods introduced to establish the guilt of the hunted man. Our attention is directed to the sun-baked elevated plains of Arizona, near the Mexican border, where there dwelt, in an adobe hut, an old man of considerable wealth, who had the very bad habit of keeping his money in tin cans about the premises. Ultimately he was found robbed and murdered, his head crushed in by a blow, and in the bargain his throat cut with his own knife.

An Indian was enlisted to trail the murderer, and followed him for many miles over a complicated course. The first point of interest on the pursuit was a hut before which a fire had been built, as marked by smoldering ashes. Inside a piece of a man's undershirt was found buried, with two blood spots on it, at opposite sides, apparently over the wearer's hips. Raking over the ash pile disclosed a few pants buttons, shirt buttons and even fragments of a shirt. The trail then led past a blood-marked boulder, and finally into a half-breed village and to the hut of a Mexican of good repute. Here there was found a stranger, whom the woman of the house had taken in that morning and given food. She declared in her broken English that she did not know the man, nor did she have any idea where he came from. He was arrested as the murderer suspect and the Sheriff walked him about for a short time to enable Eagle Eye to study the footprints. The tracks made by the man were declared to be identical with those that had been followed for so many miles.

A casual inspection disclosed no injuries on the man's body, and his clothing was clean and without evidence of bloodstains except on the thick edge of the sole of the right shoe, where there was a dark red deposit about a quarter of an inch in diameter. It appeared to the Sheriff to be a bloodstain, and when the Mexican was asked to explain its presence he replied that he had been riding a burro and he must have pricked the animal with the stirrups, accounting for the blood on the inside of the shoe which would have been next to the animal. There was some plausibility to the story, but it was now possible to abandon the crude methods of the Indian scout, and bring modern science to bear upon the problem. A small portion of leather containing the bloodstain was cut carefully from the shoe and was taken from Arizona to Auburn, N. Y., where it was submitted to an examination by Hamilton, who made a chemical and microscopical analysis and reported that the stain on the shoe had been made by human blood.

At this point it will be necessary to digress from the thread of the story long enough to say that there is a simple chemical test for determining if a stain upon any object is blood, but to determine whether or not the blood is from a human being or from an animal is a more difficult problem. Blood is composed of thin colorless liquid plasma, filled with red disks or cells, with one white globular cell to every three or four hundred red ones. The blood is no more red than the water of a stream would be if it were filled with little red fishes. Suppose the fishes to be very small, as small as a grain of sand, and crowded close together through the whole depth of the stream. Under such circumstances the water would look quite red, and this is the way in which blood looks red.

The red disks or cells are so small that 3500, placed side by side, would measure only an inch, and it would take 16,000, laid flatwise upon one another, to make a column of that height. Under the microscope the cells or corpuscles are found to be rounded at the edge and concave on both sides, and have a tendency to collect in piles like rolls of coin. They are continually forming in the blood and as constantly dying. The size and shape vary in different animals, and those of animals vary from cells of human beings, and by means of a microscopical examination it is possible to distinguish human blood from that of animals.

After the blood examination, Hamilton said that if he could go to Arizona, where all of the exhibits were kept, he could, by means of his methods of examination, determine if the accused man were guilty. In the meantime, the Mexican had been indicted for murder and was awaiting trial, and Hamilton went to Arizona, as he desired to do, and made some important discoveries. The shoe from which the bloodstain had been removed was examined with a high-power microscope, when it was found that a small row of holes on the shoe cap was nearly filled with fine ashes and it had undoubtedly been used to stir the fire where the bloody clothing had been burned by the hut, discovered in the earlier part of the man hunt.

The portion of the undershirt which was buried was next examined, and it was found that the blood had coagulated on the inner surface, showing that it had not come from the outside and soaked through. It was therefore evident that the blood came from the person who wore the shirt. It was also evident from the location of the stains that the blood had either come from the thighs or from the crotch, where it might have stained the back and the front of the shirt.

The Rich Miser of Art Who Starved Himself

"His old ramshackle house was a precious storehouse. That at times he starved amid his artistic wealth was certain."

When Walter Pater's "model" for "Marius the Epicurean" died the other day he left five shillings and a few coppers, and for years he had lived on dry biscuits and water—But in his lonely home they found magnificent works of art, including paintings, bronzes and illuminated books, which the old man had bought because he had an overwhelming passion for beauty—He has been termed "the strangest man that ever lived"

MEN of all sorts and conditions live and die. Most of them are classifiable. They are of a certain sort or a certain condition. In England the other day died a man who had lived for 70 years. He defies classification. In the vast catalogue of humanity he must be given a page to himself. His name, Richard Charles Jackson, is commonplace enough. But Jackson was not of the Tom, Dick and Harry class of ordinary men. Nor was he akin to any outstanding example of extraordinary man known to life or to history. Extraordinary he was, beyond question, quite startlingly so. Yet his life, taken as a whole, resembles the life of no other man on record. Parts of it bear resemblance to certain heroic characters of fact and fiction. Yet in the main his was a life, a character, a culture, without recorded precedent. Those who knew most about him declare that Richard Charles Jackson was the strangest man that ever lived.

That, of course, is but an opinion, an estimate based upon knowledge subject to general human limitations. Nevertheless, being of a superlative kind, it is highly interesting, and the man thus characterized becomes therefore an engaging subject for postmortem dissection, with a view to discovering why he was as he was; and in the hope, admittedly slim, of answering the question, "How did he get that way?" So strange a creature defies analysis, and consequently the best plan is to present some of the lights of his life, high and low, and leave the reader to reach his own conclusions. The suggestion may be offered that the average person, instead of arriving at conclusions, will be left suspended midway between comprehension and wonderment.

Those whose cultural urge has been strong enough to carry them through the four parts of "Marius the Epicurean: His Sensations and Ideas," will be interested in learning that Jackson is held to have been the "model" of that famous book. Forty years ago, when Walter Pater was writing his masterpiece, Jackson was a young man in London, rich, handsome, affable. He had friends in many circles. The poor knew him, loved him for his kindly deeds. Proud British families respected him because he was a man of gentle birth, what the English of those days called simply a gentleman, which term still means in England something other than what it means in America. In aristocratic circles abroad, a gentleman is not necessarily gentlemanly.

But Richard Charles Jackson, as a young man, was gentle and gentlemanly. He was the sort of man who in America would be termed a gentleman because he acted that way as we conceive it, because he was courteous, considerate, kind. To Walter Pater, who had known him from early youth, and to other writers and to the artist clan generally, Jackson was pre-eminently a gentleman. He was educated highly, speaking collegiately; beyond that he had cultivated his mental and spiritual areas to a high degree, being familiar with the best in learning and in all the fine arts and having acquired the attitude of one who has the liberal scholar's appreciation of the humanities. In brief, Jackson was a young man of such superior culture that he appealed irresistibly to Pater, himself a thorough esthete, whose intimate acquaintance with literature and the other high arts was and remains a fact of common acceptance.

Jackson had written books appealing to the cultivated tastes of Pater and the rest of his early contemporaries. He had shown indisputable evidence that he possessed artistic tastes of the most highly cultivated kind. But beyond and above all that, the young man had given proof, in his actual deeds of benevolence, that his culture was a real culture—that it had developed in him a spirit of compassion for the unfortunate. He spent his money generously to provide homes for the homeless, food for the hungry, comfort for the afflicted. So profoundly was Pater impressed with the splendid humanistic qualities of the young man that when he sat down to write "Marius the Epicurean" he is said to have had intimately in mind the living presence and the noble character of his young friend, Richard Charles Jackson of Camberwell, one of the parliamentary boroughs of London, where the model of Marius lived in a fine old house within two miles of St. Paul's Cathedral.

As readers of the book know, the Pater masterpiece is a somewhat bewildering blend of Pagan and Christian philosophies. Somebody has remarked that nobody can understand "Marius the Epicurean" without reading it at least four times—which, if true, is proof enough that but few persons understand the work. It is perhaps as much a mystery to many who have tried to grasp it as the life of Richard Charles Jackson is to those who have tried to classify this man who died the other day.

The Marius of the book was a young Roman who lived in the time of that stoic Emperor, Marcus Aurelius, whose "Meditations" make a book that has come down to this day as a compendium of human thought full of inspiration for millions of people. Marius was a youthful friend and a disciple of the Emperor. He was called an Epicurean, though not in the sense that Epicureanism means surrender to the appetites for feasting and drinking. He was one who delighted in all noble and beautiful things. So also was young Jackson when Walter Pater knew and admired him.

But the peculiar Epicureanism of Jackson developed, in the end, a human character very far different from that which Pater had in mind. Jackson became a miser! Jump not at your conclusion, however. He was no money miser. Jackson was an art miser. He was a miser of the beautiful. His passion for the beautiful took sole possession of the man. Such was the slavery of Jackson to this passion that, quite literally, he would rather possess a beautiful work of art any day than to eat a square meal. So he went hungry, virtually starved himself to death, in order to gratify his passion for pictures, for sculptures, for fine old tomes of poesy and prose. Thus it came about that Walter Pater's triumphant model for the beauty lover's ideal youth descended, in his later years, into a shabby, emaciated, undernourished miser of beauty.

It is said that for many years Jackson, living alone in his Camberwell residence, in the midst of a glorious array of art works, ate no meat at all and hardly anything else. Plain bread was, indeed, his staff of life, and heavily did he lean upon it. Nearly was a baker's shop. The aging æsthete was wont to walk to the shop once a day, to buy his daily loaf. He hated to spend the necessary pennies. Kept and accumulated, they would buy, in time, a beautiful picture for him to gaze upon in his hermit home in the midst of the roaring city.

"Sometimes," runs the report, "Jackson would haggle for 20 minutes with the baker over the price of the loaf, trying to save half a penny. He always complained of the price, never was satisfied with what he had to pay and, so far as others knew, he lived on bread alone, save when friends of other days took pity on him and sent in food supplies."

Jackson had no vices in the ordinary sense. He used no tobacco. He drank no alcoholic beverages, nothing, in fact, but water. He did not speculate in the market. His life was without scandal, save the scandal of his miserliness for art.

From year to year, day by day, the old man went about the streets of London in his strange quest of the beautiful. He who had been measured for his clothes in earlier years by a fashionable tailor had come to wear only the shabbiest of garments. He was out at heel. His cracked shoes revealed bare toes. He walked shamblingly. Street urchins jeered at him. Marius the Epicurean had become an object of ribald jest even for the bums of the alleys. The highbrow that had been was the butt of jests for the lowbrows of the day. It was an astounding descent, calculated, no doubt, to cause Walter Pater's bones to rattle in the grave.

As Jackson gradually changed from his former estate, his cultivated friends dropped away. Some of them held on for a time. They were shocked, but they hoped he might return to his old-time gentility—might be once more a gentleman in all that the term implies. Their hope was vain. Jackson continued to descend into the Avernus of his overwhelming passion for beauty. His stomach might be empty and gnawing, his shrinking shanks but half protected from the chill of the damp London climate, and yet Jackson was happy. So, at any rate, he appeared. He was following the gleam as he conceived it. He was starving the body to feed the mind, or the soul, as he had come to appraise values. His soul demanded the possession of paintings by the old masters, of marbles and bronzes by the hands of illustrious artists of the past, of glorious books, the golden volumes of classic works embellished by the hands of illuminators who were adept in that art. Jackson was a rich man, starving in a very splendor of riches.

And more than that, worse than that, Jackson had lost his regard for personal cleanliness. At times he appeared on the streets without a shirt on his back, and with visible evidence that he had neglected that amenity of civilization so dear to the upper-class Englishman, the bath. He wore a seedy old "topper" that had seen many years of service. The cheapest shoes, made of canvas, had supplanted the polished boots of his other and better days.

In his last years, we are told, he lived on nothing but dry bread and biscuits, but he ate them in a service of Sevres china. His beverage of cold water he drank from a Jacobean carved cup of silver gilt. The spirit must have beautiful vessels from which the despised body might partake of its pitiful food and drink.

At last, in the midst of his amazing collections of the masterpieces of art and literature, Jackson died. In his pockets were found a few coppers, his bank-book showed 5 shillings on deposit—less than a dollar. But Jackson left a will, and one of the bequests comprised two superb canvases by Rubens. These went to the British National Gallery, greatly to the delight and pride of the directors.

The miser of art left kinfolk who had become estranged because of his incomprehensible eccentricities. There was an auction sale at the lonely old house. Treasures of all kinds were sold. Articles in old silver, early editions of famous books, illuminated manuscripts, canvases by old masters—they brought more than $40,000 for the heirs of the miser who had starved himself to death for beauty!

Marius the Epicurean, the Marius of the book, died a prisoner, but not a prisoner to the passion for beautiful things. To the end of his life he was gentle, genteel, he was an ideal gentleman. His modern English model was—well, here you have had his story.

In the second part of "Marius the Epicurean" it is written of the hero: "The veil that was to be lifted for him lay over the works of the old masters of art." * * * In the fourth part, near the end of the book and of Marius, Pater has written: "From time to time they stopped to roast portions of the meat they carried with them, making their captives sit around the fire, and pressing it upon them. But weariness and depression of spirits had deprived Marius of appetite, even if the food had been more attractive, and for some days he partook of nothing but bad bread and water."

The Marius of modern London partook of "nothing but bad bread and water," but in an environment quite other than that of the Roman captive. The mystery is left to the reader, though these few paragraphs, written by a London correspondent, may serve to satisfy further curiosity to at least a limited extent:

"The Archduke Albert," a Rubens portrait bequeathed to the British National Gallery by Richard Charles Jackson.

"He had hundreds of books, every one of them a prize. He was the possessor of what is perhaps the most beautiful printed book in the world, an Aldine edition of Homer, 1535, with 100 wonderful woodcuts.

"One of his bookcases was by Sheraton; the connoisseurs almost fought for it at the sale. He had many marvelous soft, red and blue Persian carpets; his pantry shelves were ranged with old English cut glass, his chair was Chippendale and his bed, where he lay in winter without blankets, was old walnut. Nothing mean, nothing ugly, was tolerated in his view; his old ramshackle house, in the shabby genteel district of Camberwell, London, where he lived untended, servantless and lonely, was a precious storehouse.

"As he grew older the supreme beauty of ceremony and church music attracted him more and more. He haunted the symbolic, chanted services of the Greek Orthodox Cathedral in Moscow road, London, and drank in their harmonies of color and lights and singing. Afterward he bought a medieval altar and fitted it up in his largest room.

"Little by little, at first simply for the pleasure of handling beautiful things, he bought ancient embroidered copes and mitres, installed a magnificent organ, brought home illuminated liturgies and altar cloths. Finally, in his loneliness, he acted over parts of the liturgy to himself for sheer pleasure in the words and music; then slipped into a crazy fancy that he was a Bishop and celebrated, himself, the Eucharist according to the rites he had so often seen.

"So he lived, having passed quite across the boundary where real and dream are divided. Long days depriving his hunger and natural desires for the things men need with the shadow of selfish beauty and art.

"One visitor, William Shepperly of Clapham Common, London, who knew him in earlier days, says: 'When I called to see him he opened the door in gorgeous sacerdotal robes. I had interrupted a solemn high mass, celebrated and served by himself alone on a beautiful medieval altar. His service ended, he led me to luncheon, on biscuits served on exquisite Sevres china. That at times he starved amid his artistic wealth was certain. Every pound he received he would spend in bric-a-brac or a rare edition. He had no servant, no companion, in the loneliness of his house. A few friends sent him dainties, but otherwise his life was cheerless.'

"Huysmans, the Belgin novelist of Las Bas, in his 'Des Esseintes,' the decadent art maniac, who spent whole hours alone watching the slow movements of a bejeweled living tortoise on a rich Eastern carpet, came, after all, nearest to understanding the old age of Jackson, as Pater had delighted in him in his youth."

When Jackson died and his strange story became current in the London press, elderly and aged persons who had known him in his brilliant youth were startled. Most of them had lost track of him, assuming that he was dead long ago or had disappeared from England. The few who knew in a vague way that Jackson had survived his young manhood were startled, though they knew that he had become "odd."

The Color of the East

V.V.V.V

How on earth was a man to remember anything, any one aspect, when another was always shifting in—equally surprising and equally true?

IN AN upper apartment of a certain house already astir with the evening's regular business—in a very private apartment, just above the rear entrance—the gentleman from Macao arrived quite noiselessly, popping between the curtains and starting a wordless cry from the woman who sat waiting for him there, alone.

"A mackerel!" was his announcement, given in the Portuguese-Chinese dialect. "Sweet poppy of mine, I have caught one big mackerel at last! Fat as butter. He will be here tonight, and tomorrow—we eat!" he said, with a click of teeth.

The woman quailed before the almost insane flicker in his gaze, the tiger look of that polite, catlike, brilliantly smiling little individual.

She was young enough to have been a girl not so long ago, was still girlish and lovely under the lamplight—slight and dark, with hair and lashes that would have made her envied anywhere, with the rich warmth of skin that shames mere white.

"Somebody for me?" she faltered.

"Somebody for you!" he mimicked, with contained savagery. "No—nobody for you, little flowerlet. Rest easy. This time it is another kind of fool. But you will snare him for me."

"How, then?"

He caught her wrist in his small, steely grip.

"Listen! In a little while comes this idiot to play at Li Chwan's tables, inside. You will get the seat next to him, and before he loses all his stake, see to it that you coax him in here for a moment. Save your tears for that. Somehow, somehow, you bring him to this room."

"Li Chwan will beat me."

"Li Chwan! Lock that door between if he follows; I need but the tenth part of an instant. Tonight is our great good fortune—comprehend that. This stranger has money, much, much money—to be so easily come by. I saw it. In a fat purse. Therefore attend me well.

"You bring him here. You cajole him with what tale you like. You lead him over by this window." He swept aside the curtain that covered an exit upon the balcony. "You push him against the hangings, if you can, to make them bulge a little—thus. Ah, ah! I will be ready—fear not—in hiding just behind. Then you hold him only long enough to give me true aim. . . . Understand?"

She was staring dully past him through the broken bars, down, down, down, at the water below, where its tide lipped the pilings and a fragrant ray of light shone zigzag.

"And you?" she asked, mechanically.

But when she lifted her weary glance she found him already fingering a 10-inch Japanese knife—testing the beautifully polished blade.

"Meu Deus!" she screamed. "Not that."

He struck her across the mouth as she fell to her knees. "Be silent, thou! There shall be no evidence at all. No one saw me with him. None shall see me. He, a stranger—a chance tourist, without friends—he comes to Li Chwan's to gamble. Next morning the police find him in the bay. Who is he? Who knows? Who cares?"

"I will know!" she gasped. "If you drag me into this last infamy"——

"Well?" The gentleman from Macao took hold of her and began interrogatively to probe the soft hollows of her neck—the spot where a dirk goes safe home. "Ah-ha? Wouldst betray me—thinkest thou? Couldst keep such treachery in thy heart—thinkest thou?" Pressing with his finger tips smoothly and deftly by some infernal skill, of a sudden he brought her groveling.

As she writhed at his feet in agony, swiftly she made a snatch at his armed fist—drew it to her in despairing effort to bury the blade in her bosom.

Quite expertly and playfully he hit her between the eyes.

"Sweet honey flower! Little marigold blossom! I think not, I think not!" he purred—and smiled more brilliantly than ever.

* * * * * * * *

So, altogether, it might truly be said that attractions and amusements were thoroughly well provided against the visit of Camberwell, that eager young explorer, when he came to the fan-tan den of Li Chwan to continue his inquiry for local color.

Purple and saffron had been Camberwell's first notion of it. He saw it so the day he crossed the equator, that line which always seems, somehow, as if it ought to run the other way—much less of a boundary between the north and south than it is between the west and east. They cried the news in the smoking room, and he ran out on deck under a stormy sky, more than half expecting to find an actual mark ruled straight over sea, as it had been in his school geography. And, sure enough, under a stormy sky, the sun showed for a moment through the clouds and paved a glorious threshold.

After that he could hardly curb his impatience while the steamer wandered among antipodean ports—transplanted bits of white man's country where people talked in his own tongue and almost with his own twang. But presently they headed back on a long westerly slant, and one morning at dawn they made their landfall. Camberwell stood forward in the bows, and as the mists parted before him he seemed to be flying in through successive opening gates, each more wonderful—the first, "jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald—and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass." Those flaming old words came to wind—from Revelations, weren't they? It was all one revelation to him, the goal for which he had yearned, a fairy tale come true—the dazzling, the gorgeous, the veritable East.

Since the earliest time he could remember, Camberwell had been looking to this moment. He was of the type of chap that dreams and lives in dreams of those strange foreign parts, while destiny holds the balance true with a trip between home and business twice a day. By ordinary dispensation, he should have gone on dreaming a little more dimly and dingily until the bulge of a bank account or the horsepower of an automobile became the only potent figures in illusion.

But Camberwell had the luck.

Before he was too old to care for dreams, a certain forgotten aunt left him a very compact little sum in tangible cash.

A month later he had taken the first vessel he could catch for realms of polychrome romance.

She was a cramped and insectivorous craft, but she meant the Argo and the royal yacht and all the caravels of Columbus to Camberwell. She was going to swing the lesser circle of the Pacific, with a few brief stops at obvious ports. But Camberwell asked nothing better; he was on the rainbow route at last. The morning of his arrival he adorned himself in his new silk suit and his new sun hat and his buckskin shoes and washabie tie, and the cummerbund he had bought from the barber and the pugree the steward had sold him, and with his cane in one hand and his little guidebook in the other, he stood armed to sally forth like a modern conquistador the moment the gangway should be lowered.

"Mister, I'm going to do this town, and I'm going to do it good!" Thus he, exulting, informed the second officer as the vessel nosed a way toward her anchorage.

Mr. Davison turned a wooden, bluntly moustached visage, and began to inspect the phenomenon slowly and casually, beginning at his feet. He had a crisp retort ready when his glance came as high as Camberwell's own.

Now Camberwell was just a well-made youngster of his sort, fresh and jimp, with some of his boyishness laundered into shining assurance by premature business training. But he did have rather remarkable eyes. Perhaps his dreams had something to do with them. They were easily his best feature—wide and "seeing" eyes, unwavering, clear and clean—the kind of eyes that older folk linger on to retrieve some glint of their own youth. They surprised Davison. When he met them full he forgot what he had meant to say and changed involuntarily to an answering grin.

"How much of it are you going to do?"

"All of it," asserted Camberwell.

"You've got only until tomorrow morning."

"I know. But a fellow who's been waiting for a thing 24 years can sample a whole lot in 24 hours. That's me!"

Davison considered him.

"And what do you think you're after, sir?"

"Truth," said Camberwell, promptly, as if nothing could be simpler. "I want the essence of this strange place and these strange people. I want to understand it. I want to grab it for myself. I want—— By gum!"

They were fairly in the roadstead now, where the city lay left and right. With its jumble of minarets and pagodas, of spires and domes as various as its faiths, it swam over its own reflection in the flood of the morning, detached, suspended like a mirage—a vision of incredible enchantment that burst upon Camberwell all at once.

"Look!" he cried. "That's it—that's what I came for! I want to get that."

"Yes?" said Davison, encouraging.

"By George! I knew it was bound to be splendid. But this—just look at the color, Mister Mate!"

"Yes," agreed Davison, not unappreciative himself. "Yes. When that chap upstairs begins splashing his lights all over the shop He does get some queer effects—no mistake. Though you'd have to keep looking a goodish while to learn the half of His combination."

"Maybe," said Camberwell. "But, d'you know," he breathed in hushed enthusiasm, "I believe it's got some one combination. What? If a man were only keen enough to catch it—and wouldn't it be great if he could! Something vital and vivid to knock you on the spot, so you'd say right off: 'There, that means the East!' And I'm going to try, I'm sure going to try. I'll pass up no chance trying to get at it. Look now! How it seems. . . . You never saw a combination to beat that in your born days!"

He elbowed through as choice a gang of cut-throats and half-caste outcasts as ever gathered between Hakodate and Sun

Davison was doing some thinking.

"It'll seem something else in five minutes," he observed. "See here, sir, I couldn't go about to warn you at all—you being a passenger. I wouldn't presume." Then spoke the professional, stiffly. "And, of course, you're keyed up for your first Oriental port—natural, too. But after all, y'know, it's not a Thousand and Second Arabian Night. After all, it's only a huge, great city, and not over sanitary, neither"—— He hesitated, until Camberwell drew him with an amiable nod.

"A city like any other city, really," he went on. "Colors? My word, yes—every blooming color. Twenty different races in a heap. But as for the truth of 'em"—— He shook his head—a wise head, tinged with grey. "You couldn't ever dig it up. And if you did, you wouldn't much care for it; and likely it'd turn out to be a lie, anyhow.

"You see, sir, the nearest you or me can come to these people is—they're people. The good ones good enough, and most of 'em very well in their way—and a few of 'em rotten bad, I mean. The same as London, or Frisco, or Naples, or anywhere on earth. But these are rather worse—they've had more practice. And for a stranger in a strange place, as you put it yourself, what he's got to remember: there's some regions and some kinds of truth he wants to leave strictly on one side. They may be pretty, but they ain't healthy."

Thus spoke the cynic when once well warmed out of his cynicism, all for the sake of the wide, unwary eyes of youth. And he had the usual reward. Youth jovially slapped him on the back.

"Fine stuff, ol' man! Now do me a last favor before I start, and I'll forgive you the rest. Those regions—that address you've got in mind—whereabouts, hey? Just point 'em out as they lay, will you?"

So, in the end, Camberwell went on toward his vision with a laugh and jest, undeterred, as it was inevitable he should have done. He went ashore by the first sampan to leave the ship's side, waving an airy hand toward a wooden-jawed second officer who gazed after him from the rail. He went along like the babes in the song, to see what he could see. And he saw—truly—several things.

Through the early steps of that pilgrimage he proceeded in a state of emotion for which he was hardly to be blamed. All explorers have shared it in some degree, and certainly the East is still the East, with a few features of its own never wholly appropriated to the comic opera stage.

The colors were there—they were there beyond all whooping! Brown, of course, faces and bodies lemon brown, coffee brown, apple brown, chocolate brown. Each separate figure leaped to the eye with some radiant spurt—kerchiefs of vermilion, of ochre, of aquamarine; assorted head-dresses in raw magenta, slate, salmon, robin's egg and grass-green; skirts and sashes in the oddest rich tints, old rose and olive, apricot and cinnamon; the silver-embroidered cap of a babe, the yoke-yellow robe of pongee, the vehement scarlet belt and badge of muslin-clad chuprassy—bands and whorls, dots and patches of color, as if the whole palette had been wasted abroad with one gigantic spatter brush. Camberwell went blinking and hurrying through it.

"I must remember this!" gloated Camberwell, and tried to make sure of it, clicking the mental camera furiously. But the folk swept him on and the vista blotted out the one that went before and made it seem poor and meager and altogether inadequate.

How on earth was a man to remember anything in any one aspect, when another was always following—equally surprising and equally true? The only thing he could do was to clutch his guidebook the tighter and blink the faster, and mop his bewildered, beaming face in a heat that waxed about him like a steam bath and go tearing on—seeing, still seeing.

A mad sort of pilgrimage, and before evening had led him the extended round. To the docks and the forts and the race course. To the Chinese millionaire's—an immense carven glove box in ebonabar, lampblack and chrome. To the Mohammedan mosque—a wedding cake of frosty white. To the Hindu temple—a birthday cake of pink and blue. Finally, to the municipal gardens, where the vegetation from the most expensive hot house in the world had been recklessly heaped right outside to display every tinge, wash, stain, tincture, or complexion that man ever named, and many more he never would—every blooming color, as Davison had said.

"This is it!" decided Camberwell, again and again. But how was a fellow to choose?

And when at last the seeker after truth found refuge in a big, open-faced hotel by the Bund, hot, tired, dry and dusty—happy, but somehow horrified, satiated but yet unsatisfied—when he settled for refreshment in a broad, dim bar of tables and pillars and swaying punkahs where "Manhattans" and "Thos. Collins; I Dol." lent an erratic familiarity to the decorations—by one of those coincidences or errors that triumph over any studied irony—the stupid Goaboy waiter set out before him the wrong glass—a thin finger-depth of variegated sparkling liquor.

"Pousse-cafe!" exploded Camberwell then. "All the way round the world to find this! Pousse-cafe!"

He turned with a human impulse to divide the large the inestimable humor of it; with the same gesture he flung open his well-crammed wallet to make payment. And that was the precise moment at which he met the inquiring, brilliant eyes of the little gentleman from Macao.

The little gentleman from Macao occupied the adjoining table. It was wholly natural for him to open with winning and easy politeness. "Pardon," he said. "Is your order wrong by the steward? Then I can do a service. If you allow me"——

He appeared to be only some casual merchant clerk or agent of the port. With his suit of colorless drill and low-brimmed Panama, with his distinguid glance and pruned moustache, there was nothing to set him apart in the class of residential whites and superior Eurasians. Camberwell been vaguely aware of such a class. He now thought for an instant he must have seen this gentleman before, somewhere. But that was hardly possible. The gentleman from Macao had been trailing him half the day, and it would have been very poor business indeed if he had intruded himself so clumsily. A certain experience in these affairs had taught the gentleman from Macao to be neat as a pin, inconspicuous as a cat, smooth and deft always. Which he was glad, except for his smile, completely colorless.

"You don't like?" he queried.

"Why, no, I don't," said Camberwell, readily, if somewhat ruefully. "The way it comes they certainly put one over on me. I leave it to you. Here I've been running in circles since early morn to discover the special domestic attraction of your burg—and here's the answer I get slipped to me, after all. A common, everyday mixed drink!"

"Ah-ha! Too common? Not amusing enough."

"Oh, it's amusing. But exasperating." Camberwell held up the glass. "I didn't come for this!"

"No," agreed the other. "No, of course you didn't. The same 'sing you get at 'ome—eh? And 'ere you expect something new—somesing different."

"Mister, you've said it!" returned Camberwell.

A most intelligent little person—this gentleman from Macao. He nodded. "I onerstan'. If you please, wait one second"——

To the stolid Goaboy, still hovering near, he passed a few swift, purring phrases. It was a curious detail that he used a Portuguese dialect which is almost as safe as a secret code, even in the babel of a Far-Eastern town. But nobody could have noticed the order he gave, nor how he gave it; nobody could have suspected him of taking an interest in the visitor. Only, after the fresh drink had been brought——

"'Ow you like that?"

"Great!" The stuff looked exactly like liquid topaz, tasted exactly as topaz ought to taste—delicate, keen and pungent. "It's great!" admitted Camberwell, sipping.

Only then, the gentleman from Macao leaned a trifle closer. "And about these amusement. These att-raction you speak of. Maybe I could 'elp you also. Suppose, now," he went on, in a voice of infinite suggestion, "suppose you go see a lid'l dance—eh? Mu-sic—dancers. Very special—very different, indeed! . . . A lid'l sing-song"—— He stopped, for the visitor had drawn back.

"Thanks," said Camberwell, without offense. "That's not quite what I'm after."

"No?" exclaimed the gentleman from Macao, and it was his turn to ask, as Davison had asked before him: "No! But what is it you are after?"

So again, for the second time since dawn, Camberwell had to give account of himself in the East.

"The dope," he said, simply. "Just the true dope. I want what this place can show—the inwardness, the meaning, the color. I want the color of it, right!" he cried, with a sort of passion, and shook his head. "I've been looking and looking all day," he added, whimsically. "But I haven't found it yet—not to be sure."

And again, in his turn, the gentleman from Macao searched Camberwell's face—just as Davison had done—met Camberwell's eyes, those rather remarkable eyes. Whatever he saw there, he made no sign to declare; perhaps could not have told any better than the second officer. The fact remains he adjusted to it with even greater celerity.

"Ah-ha! Yes"—he nodded—"I onderstan'. But 'ave you ever reflect to yourself," he offered, leaning still closer until his teeth glistened, "'ave you reflect 'ow these dope of yours change? If you so want the color, the true color—eh, what?—why not go at nighttime?"

Camberwell sat up. There was a pleasant tingling in his veins; his fatigue and disappointment had lifted like fog from a channel. All the eagerness and the brightness of his dreams came back with a rush. As a pilgrim reinspired he turned to the quest once more.

"By George! It's a fact. I still have the night, haven't I? Mister, you're a wiz! If you happen to keep that address on you—the region, the whereabouts"——

A minute later, the gentleman from Macao had taken himself and his unfailing smile elsewhere, leaving a card behind him on the table with the polite, murmured direction:

"Tell any 'rickshaw man."

And while Camberwell read the jotted number, he chuckled aloud:

"Too bad about the one the mate wouldn't give me! . . . Wonder if this is the same!"

As a matter of fact, it was the same—geographically a district, a section, a public place. A famous place, in its way. Moreover, it was that identical place elsewhere toward which that obliging informant of his was even then gliding away through the clogged purlieus of the city and the sticky tropic night—keeping to the shadow and the unfrequented path, moving like a sleek thing of prey which runs before to prepare its ambush.

Camberwell came in condition to enjoy it, to enjoy almost anything, thanks to the topaz drink and the mummy-faced Goaboy, who must have had some talent, too, for Camberwell was accurately and sufficiently within the penultimate limit. How he reached the main entrance, how he braved the portals of that famous place where angels certainly fear to tread, he could never have told; but in good time he tipped the grinning doorkeeper a gold piece and bashed his sun helmet over the celestial head, hung his cane on a joss, shook hands with a Cantonese hatchet man—the Oriental equivalent of a bouncer—elbowed through as choice a gang of cut-throats and half-caste outcasts as ever gathered between Hakodate and Suez, yanked a chair from under the worst of them, offered it to the nearest scarred nina de salon and stood in to play. Easily. With complete enjoyment.

For the colors were there. It was just as his casual little friend had said—the colors were there—mellowed and deepened in the night time: hot and bright and swinging around him now with the most entrancing gyrations. Seagreen in the table top—tiny twinkles of brass cash under the banker's pale, yellow fingers. The bronze of intent faces, the gamboge and citrine of downward-flaring lamps, the amethyst drift of smoke. Puce and mauve and maroon among the clustered players. Turquoise and violet and crimson among the dresses of the women. He liked them all. He liked them better as he won and won.

And that was easy, too. You shoved your bet on one of the four numbers, and then they counted your number from the bowl and gave you white bank-notes to match your greenish bills. At least they did at first. Easy. With that little nina to help you pick up the profits, whispering and nudging at you in the most kindly fashion, waiting upon you with her great, soft, tender glance. Really, an awfully pretty girl—young, too. Though he could not understand why there should be tear-drops caught in her lashes like a dew on a flower. Unless, perhaps, she was crying for him because he had begun to lose.

He plunged the heavier, to reassure her. He lost. . . . Crying for the luck, was she? Charming girl, always plucking at his sleeve for some reason! But he would show her how well he could do this town in the nighttime. He plunged—and he lost. Plunged again, until, in an unmeasured interval and from an unmeasured distance, her sharp, urgent message filtered through his dazed senses.

"Come a-way; come a-way—quick. There is danger—danger—danger!"

He rallied to that call and tried to follow her through the crowd as she edged out. But it was not so easy this way—not nearly so easy to leave Li Chwan's as to enter it. Arms were put out to impede them. A muttering rose here and there. But they had reached the edge of the throng, the threshold of another apartment, before a moonfaced Chinaman came bustling up, chattered angrily at the girl and snatched her back toward him.

Camberwell drove a fist to the jaw with a gesture so natural as to be almost unconscious—abolished that Chinaman, sent him tumbling and clawing while the girl slammed a door and leaned there a-tremble.

"You said—some danger?" queried Camberwell, gravely, surprised to find how slowly the words and thoughts came.

"Foah you—foah you!" she cried, prettier than ever in her distress. "I did try to make you go a-way. I tried! Now you are caught!"

He got the idea dimly. He looked round him. They were alone in a sort of closed alcove with heavy hangings all about the walls, and at the far side the curtains of two windows. The girl seemed to be looking toward the windows with a strained face. She led him a step or two, and stopped, and wrung her hands. A smart blow fell upon the door. Voices were babbling inside there. The house was up against them. A perception common to all trapped creatures reached Camberwell.

"There must be a way out of this."

"Yes—but you can never get to it!"

"Show me, please. Which side?"

Again she led him a few steps toward the far corner of the room, and again she stopped and held him back. They had to pass the second window if they were going to move any further. The girl held to him with stiffened fingers while a tattoo struck on the door. She could not turn either way.

"Why?" she cried, despairing. "Oah, why did you ever come 'ere? You 'ave lost your money; you got no money for it!" In fact, the wallet he still kept in his hand was sadly shrunken. "Diden' know on-lee bad an' wicked come to such a place? What you come after, you?"

He regarded her, and, by the solemn logic of drink, it seemed to him that she meant a legitimate question. She was so very pretty—so troubled and fearful for him, but brave and true, too. So like any right kind of girl to whom a man can and should tell these matters.

For the third time within his 24 hours, the explorer through strange foreign ports explained himself in all good faith.

"Well, I tell you," he said, swaying; "y'know—I wanted to buy some little things to take home with me. I wanted some little presents for my—my mother and sisters, y'know. Kimonos or shawls or things. And I thought—I thought, wouldn't it be great if I could only get the right colors? . . . Colors, good colors—I love 'em, and I wanted—the true color of the East to bring back. That's all. But, of course," he added, mournfully, showing the wallet, "I can't do it now."

Then it was the turn of the half-caste

So This Is Paris, After All!

upon you. At least, I don't. Everywhere you turn in Paris you encounter the same "bunk." Like most Americans, I went to the Folies Bergere to see "En Pleine Folie," as its current revue is called. I ought to have known better, for I have been to the Folies Bergere a dozen times. What did I find? A revue that would not pass muster at any American burlesque house. The only good thing I can say about it is that its former leading lady, Mlle. Agnes Souret, who is advertised as the most beautiful woman in France, is now in its chorus—where she belongs. Like many another winner of a newspaper beauty contest, Mlle. Souret soon discovered that there is nothing more transient than fake publicity.

Another night I went to the Paris Opera, in spite of the fact that I should have known better. I witnessed a performance of "Rigoletto" that would have made the Aborns blush. And at the Opera Comique I heard "Manon" massacred—or would have if I had remained.

I saw half a dozen different plays, none of them good except "Tabouche," a holdover from last year. I danced at the Jardin de Ma Soeur at Les Acacies, and I ended more than one night with a bowl of onion soup after a session at Zellis, the most popular place in Montmartre at the moment. But with my more or less intimate acquaintance with the other world capitals, I still refuse to be impressed by what Paris has to offer in the way of entertainment. A candy pull in Kansas City is much naughtier than anything Montmartre has to offer.

Paris does not boast of a single place comparable to the Grafton Galleries in London; it is years behind Berlin, and for real night life it is so hopelessly outclassed by Madrid that it is laughable. The only advantage it has over New York is its wine. Not that wine isn't obtainable in New York, but in Paris it neither eats holes in the facade of your coat, should you happen to spill a few drops, nor bankrupts you to keep on ordering until you are too drowsy to buy.

I don't share the Parisians' enthusiasm for dancing with coal-black cabaret ladies—despite my admiration for the black race. I don't like the way French women have of staring at your wife—or sweetheart—if she happens to be anything but French. I don't like people who use toothpicks in public. I don't like to have my favorite dish garnished with a roach or a fly. I don't like to have a sommelier or wine steward tell me what vintage I ought to drink. I don't like to have the date or the number of the establishment added on my check. And I don't like to be gypped by taxicab drivers after the theater or when it rains, when I am at their mercy.

In addition, I don't like to have a Parisian try to explain why France can't pay her debt to America when statistics show that there are several hundred men in France with incomes of over 1,000,000 francs a year, and also that its per capita wealth is the greatest in Europe.

From which you will gather that I am not particularly enthusiastic about Paris and the Parisians, despite the fact that the franc is nearly 18 for a dollar and going lower.

I must say that I found Paris cheaper this summer than last—when the franc was worth 9 cents instead of 6, but the Parisians are pretty adept in advancing their prices to keep them level with New York and London. For which they can't be blamed. However, when the franc is 25 for $1 it will be nearer its real value—even the present low exchange is "pegged."

When one dines under the trees at the Chateau de Madrid, which is about the last word in dining places, or when one views the brilliantly illuminated Place de la Concorde, one is impressed by the sheer beauty of Paris. But if a caterpillar falls on your plate, or a taxi driver becomes insulting, you are soon brought face to face with realities.

I am not the type of American who wants to start a new war to find out what the last one was about. Nor when I am short-changed by a Parisian shopkeeper do I feel that we Americans pick out funny people to go to war about—as I sometimes do in Cuba.

I know the virtues and the shortcomings of Paris—and I sympathize with both.

Of course, Paris will survive my disapproval—as will Harry Pilcer and the other so-called American artists, who are "naughts" in its "naughty night life."

But what's the use? Paris is a wonderful city for anyone who likes it. The miracle, to my mind, is how the Parisians have been able to get away with it with Americans all these years.

However, there's nothing like a month in Paris to make one a better American. And, in my opinion—which is neither humbled nor prejudiced—the best thing about Paris is the Gare St. Lazare, where I took the boat train for home.

But, like many other Americans, I will return to Paris next summer to be short-changed, cheated and annoyed.

The hardest thing in the world to cure is a bad habit.

Next day the body of the defendant was stripped to the knees and examined thoroughly. Upon the upper and inner surface of the thigh near the body, Hamilton discovered two fresh-appearing, pink-colored scars about an eighth of an inch wide, and parallel to each other. The upper scar was one inch in length and the lower one, one and three-eighths inches long, both being nearly parallel with the ground as the man stood erect. They had the appearance of completely healed knife wounds caused by a knife thrust, where the knife had entered the lower wound and come out of the upper wound. It was evident that the two wounds had been made by a single knife thrust. The large bread knife found near the murdered man was examined next, and it was found that the entire blade had been more or less smeared with blood from a human being.

It was found that the taper of the knife blade was such that points on it could be found, at one of which the blade was an inch and at the other an inch and three-eighths wide, and the distance between which was the same as that between the scars. That settled it. In all probability the bread knife had been held in the right hand of the murdered man as he lay back on the bed and he had struck upward at the body of the murderer and the blade had entered the left leg. In such a position the knife thrust would have passed through the overalls and under the shirt of the murderer, and the effect upon his clothes and his skin would have been exactly that observed.

At the murderer's trial the findings of Hamilton were given to the jury. The defendant on the stand claimed that the scars were made by being gored by a vicious goat when he was a boy, but every juror, all ranchmen, knew that the narrow scars were made by some instrument similar to a bread knife. The conviction was secured on the showing of the bread knife and the scars. It was never known how much gold the Mexican secured, as several thousand dollars in gold coins were found buried in cans beneath an arbor adjoining the victim's hut. The murderer was sentenced to life imprisonment.

KILL EVERY RAT $1.00 CAN FREE!

Easy, Now, to Get Rid of Farm Pests in Less Than One Week.

"The rat is the greatest rodent pest known. He is more destructive than any wild beast or venomous serpent. He attacks infants in the cradle, the sick in bed. He is the forerunner of disease, famine and pestilence. He destroys the Bubonic Plague; he consumes millions of dollars' worth of food, he destroys property, he sets fire to buildings."

"The rat breeds 10 times a year with an average litter of ten; thus one pair in three years can produce 300 million rats."

Farmers' Bulletin 369, written by Fred Lantz of the Dept. of Agriculture, recommends the formula used in Rid-O-Rat as the cheapest and most effective means of exterminating rats. He says: "It is without taste or smell. In the small doses fed to rats it is harmless to larger animals. Its action is slow, about 36 hours, and rats leave the premises in search of water."

NOT A POISON

I absolutely guarantee extermination of all rodents without danger to other animals or human beings or without smells, as rats die in open or quickly leave locality forever by using Rid-O-Rat in combination with Alexander's Rat Virus, the remarkable discovery of American chemists.

Alexander Rat-Killer Virus is not a poison—it can be eaten by human beings or any animal on the farm as safely as their regular feed, but it is quick, sure death to rats, mice and gophers. Chickens, hogs, cattle or other farm animals are not affected in the least.

Alexander Rat-Killer Virus is merely mixed with bread or meat scraps and placed where rats, mice or gophers can get to it. Within a few hours after a rat has eaten this virus he gets a high fever and suffers a terrible inflammation and thirst. He leaves the barns and nesting holes and goes to the open fields to die. In Less Than One Week's Time not a single one of these pests is left alive on your place.

SEND NO MONEY

To introduce Alexander Rat-Killer Virus to one million new users and to rid American farms as soon as possible, I will send a regular $2.00 tube of virus for only $1.00, together with a free $1.00 can of Rid-O-Rat. Try it according to the simple directions, and if at the end of a week's time you are able to discover any rats, mice or gophers on your farm your money will be refunded. A big Kansas City Bank says that I am reliable and will do as I agree.

Just write me—a postcard will do—and the regular $3.00 combination Virus and Rid-O-Rat, guaranteed sure doom to rats will be sent immediately. When it arrives pay postman only $1.00 and a few cents postage on my absolute guarantee that if not absolutely satisfactory your money will be refunded without question. Dropping 13 Whole Days From the Calendar of 100,000,000 People

Eastern Orthodox Christians will go to bed on the night of Sept. 30, by their old Julian Calendar, and arise next morning on Oct. 14 —Adoption of the Gregorian Calendar was agreed upon at a meeting in Constantinople last May — Practically the whole Christian world is thus brought into step chronologically, but 8,000,000, including 500,000 in the United States, will stick to the calendar established by Julius Caesar in 45 B. C. :: ::

TO MOST Americans it will mean very little when 13 good days of 24 hours each die a-bornin' at midnight of Oct. 13. But to the many thousands of Eastern Orthodox Christians in the United States, and to more than 100,000,000 of them in the world at large, it will be a momentous event, for on that occasion, the calendar established by Julius Caesar in 45 B. C. will yield in official surrender to the Gregorian calendar, to which all Western peoples are accustomed.

According to the Julian calendar, the hour mentioned will not be midnight of Oct. 13. It will be midnight of Sept. 30. In May last, however, it was decreed by a "Pan-Orthodox Congress" held in Constantinople by all the Eastern National Churches that the faithful who rise from their beds on the morning after shall say: "This is Oct. 14." That episode will not only make October the shortest month in history for the millions of men and women who participate —it will put virtually the entire Christian world into chronological step for the first time since the Gregorian calendar was created in 1582.

When Imperial Caesar found time to observe, 1968 years ago, that the calendar was 90 days ahead of the sun, he had no trouble setting things right again. The planets might not obey him, but mankind was better disciplined. So he ordered the people to use the same date for 90 consecutive days, and in that simple manner got rid of three superfluous months. And to care for all future slack between the sun and the calendar devised by his mathematicians, Caesar invented leap year, with its Feb. 29, and gave orders that his own future generations make use of it every four years.

That reform was entirely practical and fairly scientific. But the unlistening earth continued to make its round trip about the sun in a little less time than Caesar's estimate. So by the year 1582 another disparity of several days had accumulated between real time and official time, and Pope Gregory XIII took steps to correct it by reducing slightly the number of leap years. This was accomplished by ordaining that every hundredth year should not be a leap year unless it were exactly divisible by 400. That is why the year 1900, although evenly divisible by 4, was not a leap year.

For all of Western Europe and America, that Gregorian calendar has been the standard for a long time. But the Eastern Orthodox Church, not responsive to papal decrees, remained loyal to the Julian computation, so that when the World War came in 1914, all of its myriad members and some half dozen Governments were 13 days behind the rest of us. Turkey made the first break when, in 1917, it adopted the Gregorian count. That same year Czarism was destroyed in Russia and the soviet government soon after abandoned the Julian chronology. Serbia, now a part of Jugoslavia, and Rumania made the change in 1919.

These desertions left the capitals of Greece and Bulgaria the only places where the Julian calendar retained official government standing. But, since the orthodox churches of Russia, Rumania, Greece, Bulgaria, Serbia, Syria and Albania remained firm in their allegiance to the old calendar, their teeming membership in all parts of the world still count the days as their ancestors have done since the time of Caesar, and they will tolerate no change until the church order becomes effective in October.

Here in the United States it has been an entertaining novelty for Americans to attend Christmas or Easter services in one or another of the orthodox churches almost two weeks after those holidays were observed by the great majority. The directors of many American industries which employ big numbers of Eastern Europeans have found it much less entertaining, however, to have their pious orthodox workmen insist upon observing holidays for a second time, when the belated Julian calendar caught up with our own.

In some Eastern countries where Governments made the change ahead of the church this confusion has reached special heights of exasperation, for feast days are more numerous and more widely observed there, and holidays have been overlapping so badly that they threaten to exceed work days in number.

When the orthodox churchmen gathered in Constantinople in May to end this scramble of days they were not content to adopt the Gregorian calendar without reservation. The Serbian astronomer, Prof. Trpkovic, had ascertained that the earth revolves about the sun in 26 seconds less time than is measured by the Gregorian year, with the result that our modern calendar threatens to put us out of tune with the sun one day in every 3000 years. To thwart such an error, the pan-orthodox followers say there must be no Feb. 29 when the year 2000 comes around. Most Gregorians will regard the dispute as academic for at least 7 years to come.

Meanwhile, there are some 8,000,000 Christians in the world (half a million of them in the United States) who will not recognize the big reform of Oct. 13. These worshipers are known in America as Ruthenian Catholics, and in Europe as Greek Catholics or Uniates. They are the descendants of Greek orthodox groups who in times past transferred their allegiance to the Church of Rome, but retained the ritual of the orthodox church as well as the Julian calendar and the right of their priests to marry.

In the Russian Ukraine, and the neighboring region known as Ruthenia, the people at large entertained a violent prejudice against adjoining peoples of Roman Catholic faith, so that they clung to the Julian calendar mainly because they would not consent to celebrate feast days simultaneously with neighbors whom they disliked, nor observe any of the religious practices of the latter, beyond acknowledging Rome as their spiritual capital. Because of this feeling and its evolution during the past three centuries, these Ruthenian Greek Catholics, scattered through many countries of Europe and North America, are the only group who, after Oct. 13, will continue faithful to the Julian calendar.

girl to look into his face and his eyes—the rather remarkable eyes of Camberwell—and she looked, long and deep, from her agony of despair and life-weariness.

"'Mother?' she breathed. "'Sisters'—you 'ave? An' you can speak of them 'ere?" He nodded, unvexed. "Boy!" she said, with something like a sob. "You—you boy from far a-way! You have the clean heart—the sweet heart!" She caught him closer. "Do not remember me—never, never think of me a'gain. But now—will you onlee kiss me once bifor' you go?"

Well, she looked the sort of girl one kisses. And, besides, having asked——

He drew the back of his hand across his mouth. Her own was quite close, quite tempting. They were standing by the window. But in the long moment while she clung to him and their lips met, she swung him round, so that she leaned among the curtains herself.

A thundering assault fell upon the door, and at the same time she thrust him away from her so violently that he staggered toward the far corner and almost fell, literally, down the well of the rear staircase that guided him to the streets.

There the second officer met him, wandering in the unprofitable dawn, and picked him with a great roar of relief.

"Thank God, Mr. Camberwell, sir! I've been looking all about for you. You gave me a fright, I can tell you. I was feared you might be over in here in this here gambling hole on the next block. A tough place! The police raided it last night, and it seems they caught a little murdering yellow rat of a Macao Portugee"——

Camberwell stopped him.

"Never mind any of that. I don't care. The only thing I want to know is when the ship sails."

"On the tide, sir—half an hour."

"Come along, then, won't you?"

As they started along the waterfront he rubbed his lips surreptitiously, as a man will do, on the back of his hand. And when he looked there was a red smear. Red! That was the final discovery of Camberwell in the Far East. Red. The color of life, everywhere the same. Just common red. In a sudden brusque gesture of distaste and disillusion, he scrubbed it off with his handkerchief. . . . For he thought, and he went on thinking, and he always would think, that the stuff was nothing but rouge. (Copyright.)

Tales Violin Might Tell

His incredible flourishes on the strings and the miraculous tone that he produced seemed to his contemporaries unearthly.

A prominent amateur musician of Vienna stated with positive assertion that he had seen the devil at Paganini's side, coaching him as he played. There were wild tales which related that the violinist had signed his soul to Satan in return for diabolic secrets of bow and strings. One story had it that Paganini had a false sweetheart in his youth. He had stabbed her to death and then had bargained with the Father of Evil, who, in return for his slave's damnation, had imprisoned the dead girl's soul in the violin upon which the musician played.

The violin passed into the vaults of a French firm of musical instrument dealers, Carressa & Francaise. In 1913 Albert Spalding bought it from them for $22,000.

Albert Spalding is a nephew of the famous old Albert Spalding, in youth a star baseball player, a hero of the Chicago White Sox in the misty days of Buck Ewing and Pop Anson.

And now his nephew and namesake has made the heights in a world very different from baseball, the world of music. The ancient fiddle maker of Cremona, the last of the Medicis lying ever abed with harlequin players dancing before him, Louis XV with La Pompadour and Du Barry, the victor of Fontenoy, aristocrats doomed to the guillotine, fabulous Paganini, and hitting them out when hits meant runs—certainly these are associations sufficiently fantastic for any fancier of variety and its spice.

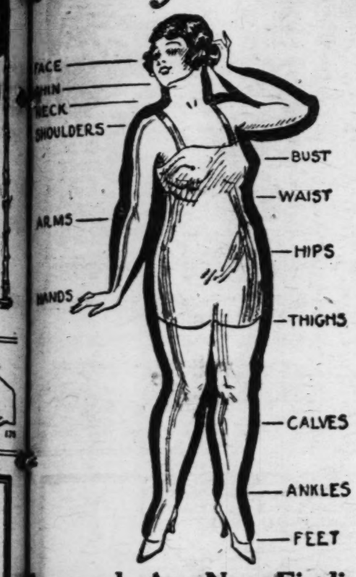
Would You Like To Lose a Pound a Day? Then TRY This Delightfully SIMPLE Way - - -

Science Discloses Method of Quickly Reducing Excess Weight—Many Losing a Pound a Day Without Starvation, Dieting or Exercise—Greatly Improves Appearance. Generous Sample Sent Free.



Quick Results— No Exercise— No Dieting.

Rid-O-Fat, the scientific compound, comes in convenient tablet form and is practically tasteless. You simply take one at each meal and bedtime. The results are often surprising in their rapidity.

Within a few days you should be conscious of a new feeling of energy and lightness, taking the place of that tired, worn-out feeling.

Quickly as the fat gland resumes normal functioning you should lose weight in a healthy, normal manner. Many fat, ungainly figures are in this scientific manner helped to regain their normal and idealistic proportions, giving that fashionable slenderness and athletic poise.

And all this time you live as you please.

Nature is doing the work. No more irksome exercise—no more denying yourself of all the things you like. Take just one small, pleasant Rid-O-Fat tablet after each meal. Could anything be more simple?

Fashion Decrees Slim Figures

Several centuries ago the fat figure was fashionable, but today it is decidedly passe—so much so in fact that it is almost impossible for a fat man or woman to find any style or fabric that is at all becoming—everything is being designed for the gracefully slim and athletic figure. Notice the vast difference in appearance and attractiveness between the fat and gracefully slender figures shown in the picture.

Thousands Are Now Finding It Easy to Have the Trim, Slim Figure Dictated By Fashion and Admired By All.

ARE you too fat? You shouldn't be. Without rigorous dieting or exercise—by a simple natural process—you should quickly and easily be able to have the slender fashionable figure that is so attractive. Scientists have discovered that excess fat is often caused by the subnormal action of a small gland. Once the gland is healthy and functioning properly, your fat should reduce naturally, and without effort on your part, to the normal amount for your height. And science has discovered a simple extract which acts to regulate the gland that controls fat. Without using a hand in unnecessary and violent exercise, you should find it a delightfully simple matter to have the trim, slender figure admired by everyone.

The wonderful thing about the scientific formula known as Rid-O-Fat is that in losing your superfluous fat you should gain added strength, health and energy in mind and body.

Be Young—Feel Young Look Young

There is nothing which adds to a person's age so much as fat. A few extra pounds makes any man or woman look from five to ten years older. Not only does the excess weight and increased heart action rob you of vitality and energy.

Since the gland which controls your fat is functioning properly your food should be turned into firm, solid flesh and muscle. As your weight comes down to normal you should experience a delightful and amazing improvement in your appearance. You should not only feel and look younger—you should actually be younger. You should also be in better health—a real health of energy, while the fictitious and deceiving health of fat that insurance companies say shortens the life 10 years.

Your complexion, health and figure are improved at the same time. The result is a new vitality, magnetism and personal charm that makes for success. Tasks once hard become easy and life worth while.

A Fat Neck is a Social Handicap

Modern fashions prevent a woman from covering up her neck, and thus it becomes the focal point of attention. If the neck be fat, with unsightly rolls and wrinkles—if there be a double chin—then there is small hope of being fully attractive.

Notice the vast difference in the two pictures above. What can be more attractive than a slender, oval face, glowing with the color of firm, solid flesh and graceful, properly proportioned neck and shoulders?

Rid-O-Fat Used By 100,000 People

Since the announcement of the wonderful Rid-O-Fat formula, it has been used by more than 100,000 people. Twenty to thirty thousand more people are writing for it every month. The following letters show what users think of the scientific Rid-O-Fat system of fat reduction.

Lost Forty-One Pounds In Thirty Days

"When I wrote for your Rid-O-Fat sample I weighed 245 pounds. Today, which is 30 days later, I weigh only 204 pounds. A reduction of forty-one pounds in a month. I am delighted. Please send me another 30-day treatment, as I want to reduce to 145 pounds, which is the correct weight for my height. I am sure that I will realize my ambition with Rid-O-Fat and I feel better than I have in years."

Lost 12 Pounds In Six Days

"I lost 12 pounds the first six days I took Rid-O-Fat and feel and look 100 per cent better. Will tell my friends about it. I am happier than I have been in years."

Lost 20 Pounds In Three Weeks

"According to weight tables I weighed exactly 20 pounds too much. Rid-O-Fat reduced me to normal in just a little more than three weeks. I feel better, don't get tired, and my friends say I look like a new person."

Why should you suffer the handicaps and embarrassments of excess weight — why should you suffer in appearance and actually shorten your life when the Rid-O-Fat treatment is so simple and easy?

Why not declare your independence today — right now—by writing for a free sample of Rid-O-Fat and prove to yourself that you can be as attractive and gracefully slender as you wish?

Notice How Much More Attractive the Slender, Graceful Figure Is

Generous Sample Free

I want every fat person to have a chance to try Rid-O-Fat in their own homes at no expense. I don't want them to take my word or that of the thousands who have used it. I want them to see for themselves that the results are more pleasing than anything I can say.

To introduce Rid-O-Fat in a million more homes I will send a free sample to any one who will write for it. In fact it is really more than a sample, as it is often sufficient to reduce the average person several pounds.

I will also send with the sample an interesting booklet that explains the scientific reason for fat, and why Rid-O-Fat is so valuable.

Send No Money

Don't send a penny — I will send the sample and the booklet under plain wrapper and fully postpaid. This does not obligate you in any way and is never to cost you a cent. It is simply a limited offer I am making to more generally introduce Rid-O-Fat.

This free offer is good for only a short time, so send me your name and address on the coupon below or a post card, and I will see that the generous sample and booklet are mailed immediately under plain wrapper postpaid. Do not try to get Rid-O-Fat at drug stores as it is distributed only direct from my laboratory to you—remember this is a short time offer and send your name at once. H. C. The Great Quality Finish

"Perhaps your skin is especially susceptible to blackheads"

Blackheads indicate your cleansing method is wrong

PERHAPS you have the type of skin that is particularly susceptible to blackheads.

If so, you will need to use a special method of cleansing in order to overcome this trouble.

Blackheads are caused by excessive oil collecting dirt in the pores of your skin. To do away with the cause of blackheads follow this special treatment:

EVERY night before retiring, apply hot cloths to your face until the skin is reddened.

Then with a rough washcloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly, with an upward and outward motion.

Rinse with clear hot water, then with cold. If possible rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a flesh brush for the washcloth in this treatment. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

Use this treatment persistently and within a week or ten days you will be surprised to see how wonderfully your skin has improved in clearness.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks. Woodbury's also comes in convenient 3-cake boxes.

Wise Little Builders of Beauty

By Mme. Jeannette

So adorable are the little conceits of the dressing-table that it were a pity to miss any of the essential ones. Yet with all their beauty-wisdom there are still too many women who neglect to lay a foundation for their powder.

Pompeian Day Cream does for your powder these most essential things—it makes your powder "go on smoothly," and makes it "stay on" for hours.

Pompeian Day Cream is a disappearing (vanishing) cream and is specially made to prepare the skin for powdering. Spread it carefully over face and neck; it will apparently disappear under your moving finger-tips, yet it leaves a delicate little film to which the powder adheres, and which is protective as well. There is no special skill in using it—the cleverness comes in making its use a habit.

Over Pompeian Day Cream apply Pompeian Beauty Powder and you will find that the powder goes on with velvety smoothness. This powder comes in the following shades: Rachel, Naturelle, Flesh, and White.

Next, an artistic touch of Pompeian Bloom, the rouge compact that is made in Light, Medium and Dark rose shades, as well as the new Orange tint.

And as the last note of beauty-building comes the application of Pompeian Lip Stick. This chisel-pointed stick is easily applied and leaves a fresh, natural-looking color to the mouth. It has a softness, too, that keeps the lips sweet and pliable.

Your Mirror Must Show You New Hair — or Money Back

Amazing new way to revive hair roots! Already tested by more than 200,000 women. Stops falling hair, grows new hair in 90 days. Guaranteed in writing—by your own druggist!

Pretty Hair Everywhere Today as a Result of This New Method

Note the gorgeous heads you see today. Beautiful hair—live and lustrous hair—on all sides of you. A new method of scalp treatment is performing wonders. And you too can know its magic.

We offer it to you under written guarantee. Money back if it fails. New hair grown, falling hair stopped in 90 days.

Why Your Hair Lacks Life

There is an oil called Sebum that forms at the follicles of the hair. Its natural function is to supply the hair with oil to make it soft and wavy. But science now proves that it is the cause of 91% of all hair troubles.

Frequently it becomes infected. It cakes on the scalp; clogs the follicles and plugs them. You can see it in your hair, either in the form of dandruff or an oily excretion at the hair roots.

Bacteria by the millions breed in it and often inflame the scalp. Then they begin to feed upon the hair. Soon falling hair starts. In a short time all the natural lustre and beauty of your hair are gone.

Remove the infected Sebum and there is a wonderful change. The hair takes on new life, new growth and new lustre.

The Van Ess treatment accomplishes that result. We know you will doubt it. So we guarantee each 90-day treatment.

New hair grown (in 90 days) and falling hair stopped. Your druggist gives you our guarantee to do these things. He signs it. If we fail, your money will be refunded by us without argument. Go to any druggist or department store today. Ask for Van Ess Liquid Scalp Massage. Written guarantee accompanies each 3-bottle treatment.

Costs Nothing

Unless we grow hair. The Van Ess 3-bottle treatment is absolutely guaranteed. You are the sole judge. The warrant, signed by your own druggist. All we require is the signature showing you have purchased a ninety-day treatment. If it fails, we refund your money. Hence you assume no risk making the test.

Liquid Scalp Massage

Note This New Way

Van Ess is not just a "tonic," as you can see. It combines massage and medicament in one treatment. You rub it in with the rubber massage cap. The nipples in the cap automatically feed medicament down to the follicles of the hair—the vital spots—at the same time massaging the scalp.

Learn from the women who tax their skin the most . . .

and keep their faces loveliest

Two essentials they never forget

THE actress, the society woman, the business woman, the modern young girl are the ones who have learned first the right way to care for their skin. Because in no other way could they go on subjecting their skin to the same conditions and keep it beautiful.

The whole secret of their loveliness today lies in giving their skin regularly the two things they have found are indispensable in keeping a woman's skin young and supple.

First—the kind of cleansing that frees their skin nightly from the tenseness of the day's strain and clears it of the collected dust and oil and cosmetics—restores its transparency and natural pliancy. This toning up at the end of every day is absolutely essential.

Second—they know it is imperative to render their skin immune at all times to strain, dirt, changes in temperature—to all the kinds of exposure that tend to coarsen it. . . . Two distinctly different needs—for years the effort of an esteemed maker of toilet preparations was centered on the two creams that were to answer these two vital needs of women's skin.

The actress gives her complexion harder wear and demands more of it in return than almost any other woman. She must keep her skin fine and clear though she covers it with make-up. It must be fresh in spite of late weary hours. Her very success depends on her finding the right way to care for her skin.

The society woman knows how to be a zealous sportswoman by day and appear in the evening with delicate skin unmarred. She cannot allow exposure to roughen or redden her skin, or fatigue to mark it with lines. She has been compelled to find the way to keep it fresh, supple, young, season in and season out.

Stuffy, sooty trains, every kind of weather, the strain of worry—these are enemies that attack the business woman's skin daily.

How does she manage to keep the fresh attractiveness that is the envy of many of her friends at home?

She insists on both—her career of cars and ports and the particular kind of complexion men love to!

How the modern young girl keeps her skin so fascinatingly fresh is perfectly simple—according to her. She just goes in for taking care of it.

Every skin needs these Two Creams—Pond's Two Creams used by the women who tax their skin most and keep it loveliest

THE SUNDAY COUPLE -:- (Copyright) -:- BY W. E. HILL

The semi-engaged couple. One day Josephine thinks she loves Norwood, and the next she thinks she hates him. First they plan to marry in November, and then Josephine has hysterics and decides it can never be, not in a thousand years. This afternoon she has told Norwood she will marry him a year from next April, though she doesn't love him. Josephine is keeping a sharp lookout for anything that may turn up. Norwood is walking in darkness.

The Sunday call. The shy couple are not getting on well at all. They seemed to know each other so well last week. Now conversation has flagged and they are in a panic.

The girl friends, Maida and Grayce, have foresworn male escorts. Maida is one of those nice healthy girls, who appeals to weak men, and Grayce can't find her ideal.

The very correct couple. They might almost have come from church, but they haven't. They're going calling.

The little outing in the flivver. The car has stopped at a crossroad but the engine is going strong, as you can see. The flivver has done two thousand miles or so, but it's the end of the season.

Sunday papers in the park. By Monday morning there will be a lot of cleaning up to do, when the reading public has had its fill.

The very loving couple are mixing it up on a park bench. They are going to get very mussed up before the afternoon is over.

The young bloods, Joe and Morrie, are just out for a stroll—looking over the girls, and one thing and another.

The makeshift outing. Arm in arm, Clara and Lillian are walking hither and yon in the bright fall sunshine. Each is secretly vowing never again to go out on a Sunday afternoon without a nice boy in tow.

Late in the afternoon the week-enders from the suburbs begin to arrive, bag and baggage, with large bunches of late flowers and autumn leaves.
